SHARKEY WINS ON FOUL FROM FERRA IN GRUELLING BATTLE

Joe Connelly started off his weekly amateur shows at his Golden street arena in New London last night and gave to the rather small house a very good card of eight bouts. The election kept some of the fans at home, although Connelly had a radio installed to give the returns.

The best bout was between Eddie Sharkey the popular Norwich boy and Joe Farra of Westerly a real tough little lad. For the first time in the ring the latter showed a world of courage and fighting ability. Both lads wore themselves out in the first round trying for a knockout. First one took the lead and then the other, and they struggled through two rounds and two minutes of the third when the bout was given to Eddie on a foul, after the latter hit Sharkey as he was coming up off his knees. It sure was a touch battle and and will make a good rematch. Eddie tipped the scales at 118 and Joe 120.

Kid Lewis, the hammering New London bo, added another name to his ever increasing list when he dropped Maurice Carison of Montville in the 2nd. Aright hand like this boy Lewis has is seldom seen in the amateur ranks and the way he is knocking his opponents over is uncanny. He weighed 144 and Carison 145.

Johnny Dosh of Norwich turned in a great battle against the clever Larry O'Brien, the veteran New London fighter. Johnny earned a great draw and many friends, and even surprised O'Brien when he spilled him in the first with his hard right. Larry took the lead in the last round which gave him a draw. Both weighed 126.

Baby Joe Gans another Norwich, favorite won over Young Raymond of Montville in the opener. Raymond was too good natured to fight hard and Gans, boxing cleverly, won handily. Gans weighed 102 and Raymond 100.

Pat Colli of Westerly at 126 pounds won over Carl Plimpton 128 pounds, of New London, in a rather slow bout. They speeded up a little in the third with the Westerly boy taking the honors. He weighed 126 and Plimpton 128.

Young Rita the Westerly bear-cat slam-banged his way to victory over Clem Daigle the Norwich strong boy. Daigle went down for nine under Rita's fusillade in the second, but fought back hard the rest of the way. Rita weighed in at 122 and Daigle 124.

Shiek Gadula of Montville surprised his friends and Joe Donnelly of New London by dropping Joe for the long count in the second round in a hard fought battle. The "Shiek" weighed 147 to Joe's 150.

Terry Martell did the refereeing and Phil Maha and the well known "Farmer" Hill of Westerly, did the judging. Another show was announced for next Wednesday night at the same place.

WATTS PICKED FOR CREW TRIAL AT CAMBRIDGE

CAMBRIDGE, England, Nov. 7—(AP)—John Watts, former captain and stroke of the Harvard crew, has been retained for further trial for the Cambridge varsity crew. He is one of the eight survivors of about forty men chosen to compete for places on the trial eights from which members of the boat to race Oxford are chosen.

Watts is rowing number six instead of his usual position in order to row behind other men and so learn the Orthodox English style of rowing. The orthodox style differs from the American in having a sharper "catch" or beginning, an easier finish, and a wholly different type of recovery between strokes.

Although he has yet a long way to go to a varsity berth, it is something of an achievement for Watts to have kept in the running so far. An American has sat in a Cambridge boat ice here than it does at Oxford. No can rowing reputation cuts much less since the war, while last year "Ox" Kinnebury, former Yale captain, rowed number six in the Oxford eight, and the last winning Oxford eight, that of 1924, was stroked by the American Mellen.

The remark made by a boatman at the university boathouse on Watts' first appearance in an eight on the Cam expresses the unofficial Cambridge attitude: "If 'e'd gone to Hoxford, they'd 'ave throwed their arms about 'is neck and carried 'im in triumph to the first boat, but 'ere 'e'll 'ave to show a lot."

Not So "Sloppy" Now

APLETON, Wis., Nov. 7—(AP)—Until he saw a game William Webb, an Englishman, who became a faculty member at Lawrence college this year, thought American football was "sloppy and silly." He now regards it as more scientific than the English rugby.

BEAUREGARD-LUCCI BOUT ATTRACTING WIDE INTEREST

(Special to The Bulletin)

HARTFORD, Nov. 6—The much sought Beauregard-Lucci bout will be staged at Foot Guard hall on this Thursday night an evening that has been nick-named "Guaranteed Action Night."

This bout has been sought by New London, New Haven and Waterbury promoters for the reason of the principals having met in three previous start bouts and to furnish in all three the most talked of bouts that state boxing athletic commissioner Thomas Donahue, said that each bout was the hardest fought and exciting that this state has witnessed in years.

Al Beauregard of Taftville and Pete Lucci of Clinton, Mass., meet in one of the four eight round star bouts that has the fans talking of the well balanced card.

Dark Cloud Ruby Bradley of Holyoke, former New England flyweight champion who recently defeated Kewpie Ledoux of Holyoke on two occasions will meet Vern Cormier of Worchester who defeated Bradley at West Springfield this past summer. This bout is for eight rounds.

Frankie Portell of this city has been matched with Ray Hogan, known as the Terryville terror; there is great rivalry in this mix as both are evenly matched and have a host of friends eargerly awaiting the outcome. This bout is for eight rounds or less.

Two forces of dynamic energy will mix it up in another eight rounder when the ever busy Mickey Roberts of this city and fresh from a victory over Brownie Tucker, tackles the just as busy Hop Wah, Chinese boxer of New Haven who has made himself a favorite in his last appearance.

The usual preliminaries will complete the card.

PICTURESQUE FIGURE LOST TO PRIZE RING

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7—(AP)—Death has made further inroads in the ranks of old-time prize fight figures.

The count of "10", spoken here recently by the Grim Reaper over Earl Mohan, ended the career of a man who, as a trainer and pals second, was considered one of the best in the old days. His death came but a few months after the passing in Arizona, of James Curtin, the "Spider" Kelly of the fighting game.

Mohan was sharp of tongue, but kind of heart and with a knowledge of his fellowmen that few persons possessed. He had not only the ability to train fighters to perfect physical condition, but to put them on edge so that they wanted to battle when they were in the ring.

Such fighters of the old days as "Bud" Anderson, Leach Cross, Joe Mandot and Knockout Brown were handled by Mohan both in training and from their corners.

The story of Mohan's death was one that often has been retold. He died penniless. Yet years ago, when the motion picture industry was in its infancy, opportunity knocked at Mohan's door in the garb of a slap-stick comedian's career. He spurned monetary success, however, for his love for the boxing game.

Kelly, one of the most picturesque figures of the old days died in Tucson, Ariz., of tuberculosis and following an illness of several years. His boxing day ended. Kelly became one of the greatest seconds of all time.

MICHIGAN'S ELEVEN CAN'T EVEN WIN TOSS

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 7—(AP)—The laws of chance have played strange freaks with the turn of the coin at the beginning of Michigan football games.

In 1926 when Benny Friedman captained a strong Michigan team to a conference championship, he won all but one toss in eight games.

This year with a team not so good, Captain George Rich watched the coin turn for the opponent in the first four games.

The four games also turned out to be the only successive four games lost by Michigan in its exactly fifty years of playing football.

TWINS COACH ELEVEN AT FLORIDA SCHOOL

LAKE WELLS, Fla., Nov. 7—(AP)—The Lake Wells High school here claims America's only twin football coaches.

J. T. and J. R. Kelley, since graduating from Wesleyan College of Kentucky, have coached several high school teams individually, but this is the first year they have spent prepping the same squad.

Probable Stars in Notre Dame-Army Game

NAUGATUCK AND HARDING IN LEAD FOR STATE GRID TITLE

Naugatuck High, producer of great basketball teams, and Warren Harding High of Bridgeport now stand ahead in the race for state scholastic football honors with Hartford High probably just a fraction behind. Putnam, with a magnificent record, also deserves mention but her schedule, compared with that of this trio pales when state championships are talked about.

Naugatuck took a long stride Saturday by stopping Torrington, 7 to 0. Torrington previously had been running pell-mell through state teams and it was believed had the inside track for the title. But, now with a defeat on her record, Torrington drops behind Naugatuck and Harding, although Harding lost 3 to 0, to Torington. Since that defeat Harding has disposed of the Academy, Stamford and Manchester High, this latter unbeaten until the Presidents were met.

With but three more weeks to go the chance for a title practically narrows down to the entires from Naugatuck, Bridgeport and Hartford and probably in the order named.

This week end may eliminate one of these clubs and if not, next week is almost sure to when Harding and Hartford High meet.

Putnam now undisputedly holds the lead for the championship of Eastern Connecticut. With victories over Chapman Tech and Windham as its big prizes the Noyes outfit is running along very smoothly with little chance of faltering and a big chance of nailing the mythical award. Stonington is practically the only other team to menace Putnam but Stonington's tie with Chapman Tech Saturday will hurt her chances considerably.

Two heart-breaking one-point defeats have practically removed the Academy for any chance at honors in this section this year. Harding and Windham, both by 7 to 6, have been the conquerors of the Red and White and the main aim of the Academy now is to beat Bulkeley on the 24th. This will, no doubt, boost the local's stock and also help atone for that sore spot—known as a 6-6 tie—that came from a fighting but woefully weak Bulkeley eleven last Armistice day in New London.

The Academy plays Hartford High this Saturday at the campus in the first of the final three home games of the year. All of these games, with Hartford, Stonington and Bulkeley, are bound to be attractive and should draw out the customers. A clean sweep for the Wildcats in these tussles will make the season a success and that is what the locals will now fight for.

WESTERLY-STONINGTON GAME LOOMS AS VERY IMPORTANT

The next important—and probably the most important—game in the Eastern-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league comes Monday, Nov. 12, Armistice day in the Westerly-Stonington clash. Stonington, by winning this game can clinch the title in this loop.

Events over the week end place Stonington in a favorable position to cop the first championship of this new circuit. Although Chapman Tech proved a tough customer and held Stonington to a 6 to 6 tie, the Academy also was held to a touchdown apiece with Windham but had the misfortune to lose by the extra point.

The Academy plays a non-conference game this week, that with Hartford High at the campus Saturday. Bulkeley in New London also plays an outsider this week end, meeting Manchester, which has lost but once this year and has clinched the Central Connecticut league title. With the Academy-Bulkeley classic but a bit over two weeks away, it can be expected that both teams will now seriously begin to think of this clash.

Chapman Tech will meet Bulkeley High of Hartford in that city for its game this week. Tech is having a much better season than usual and might surprise the Insurance City outfit.

The Conference standing:

| | W | L | T | Pts | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Stonington | 2 | 0 | 1 | 5 | 1.000 |
| N. F. A. | 2 | 1 | 0 | 4 | .500 |
| Westerly | 1 | 1 | 0 | 2 | .500 |
| Windham | 1 | 2 | 1 | 3 | .333 |
| Bulkeley | 1 | 2 | 0 | 2 | .333 |
| Chapman Tech | 0 | 1 | 2 | 2 | .000 |

SHOELESS WONDER WEARS CLEATS NOW

HAMPDEN-SIDNEY, Va., Nov. 7—(AP)—The Shoeless Wonder of football has some shoes.

George Branham, captain and backfield ace of the unshod team of the Lynchburg Organaxe, is now performing in the freshman backfield of Hampden-Sidney college. His punting with shoes is at least equal to the barefoot variety that made his famous Branham gained fame last year when the orphnage team began to overwhelm all opponents—apparently unmindful of the complete lack of equipment. He bucked, plunged and punted without footwear and did it all well. He wanted an education and also to play college football. This year he came to Hampden-Sidney.

The youth was immediately supplied with footwear as candidate for freshman halfback. Apparently the impediments are not affecting his speed, as he has won a permanent place on the Little Tiger machine.

ARMY TEAM FAVORITE TO BEAT NOTRE DAME

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—(AP)—Army's great football team will get its first taste of middle-west competition this year when it meets Notre Dame at the Yankee stadium Saturday November 10.

The powerful West Point aggregation has tasted and liked the eastern and southwestern brand. And the indication are that it will relish the new change of diet. It is that kind of a team.

The Notre Dame invasion will mark the turning point in the schedule for the football hungry outfit of Coach Biff Jones. The Cadets have met and defeated about the best there is in the east; that is if Harvard and Yale can be called the best. After Notre Dame comes Nebraska, with Carleton College of Northfield, Minn. a minor eleven, sandwiched in between. Then comes the big shot fro mthe Pacific coast—Pop Warner's hard-hitting Stanford troupe.

Beating Rockne's Ramblers—and the dope indicates they will—will mean a fresh start for the Cadets on one of the most ambitious undertakings ever attempted by a major football squad.

Having developed greater scoring punch with each succeeding game, the Army team is favored to swamp the 1928 edition of the South Bend "Rocks" a team that needs even a greater upset than a victory over the Army to make its season a success.

On the basis of this year's showing of the teams the Cadets are all but conceded a victory. But, as is usually the case in annual engagements between two old rivals anything may happen. No later than last year something did happen. Notre Dame was the favorite, yet the Cadets shut out the Hoosiers 18 to 0.

The West Point eleven can stand a few victories over Notre Dame, for of the 14 games they have played, the Ramblers have won nine to Army's four, with one tied.

One-sided or otherwise, the game in all its angles will represent a matchless spectacle. There will be the usual embellishments and a capacity crowd of 80,000.

WEST VIRGINIA RUNS AROUND FORDHAM TO WIN EASILY BY AN 18 TO 0 SCORE

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(AP)—The hardy Mountaineers of West Virginia university emerged from their rugged retreat today to invade New York and take Frank Cavanaugh's Fordham football array into camp by the decisive score of 18 to 0 at the Yankee stadium.

Getting a "break" at the very start, when a fumbled punt was converted into a touchdown, the Mountaineers kept up a rapid-fire attack, backed by an alert, scrappy defense, that completely smothered the Maroon machine.

An election day crowd of 25,000 saw the game.

The Mountaineers, with an attack featured by the flashy end running of Ryan, 153 pound halfback and the final all-around backfield work of Captain Keefer and Bartrug, tallied touchdowns in each of the first three periods. All three scores were the direct result of the way the alert Mountaineers took advantage of Fordham mistakes, although the visitors consistently outplayed, out-kicked and out-passed their Maroon rivals.

Ryan, a streak around the wings, scored the second and third touchdowns on short dashes after Lewis, big guard, had pounced on a fumbled punt, that rolled over the Fordham goal in the first few minutes of the game.

West Virginia had several other chances to score but Fordham's plucky defense stopped them twice.

Score by periods:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|

EASTERN COLLEGE TEAMS READY FOR SATURDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(AP)—Scattered gunfire along the eastern college football battlefront today furnished a prelude to the general engagement to come this Saturday.

At the Yankee stadium, West Virginia's Hardy Mountaineers, one of the east's outstanding elevens, downed Fordham, 18-0, in fairly easy fashion. At Buffalo, Canisius, undefeated but tied once, maintained its winning streak at the expense of St. Bonaventure, 13 to 7.

West Virginia, Fordham and St. Bonaventure all will get into action against Saturday. The Maroons of Major Frank Cavanaugh face a formidable foe in undefeated and untied Boston college and St. Bonaventure has no hope or holding Cornell to a tie as it did last season. West Virginia has an easier task, meeting an intersectional rival in the Oklahoma Aggies who have yet to win a game.

"Biff" Jones gave his galloping Army Cadets an intensive drill at West Point in preparation for the battle against Notre Dame. At the Yankee stadium, one of the classic battles of the week end. Scrimmage, so far as the first string team was concerned, was barred. Jones is taking no chances of having any of his regulars injured.

Lou Young's weekly problem over the end problem a Pennsylvania cropped up again. Joe Olexy, who was a regular end at the start of the season and later was dropped to the second team, came back to the varsity. Harvard, eager to avenge the 24-0 setback they suffered at Penn's hands last year, had a dummy scrimmage and a signal drill on the day's program. Arnold Horween tried out several new plays for use against the Red and Blue.

Pitt's Panthers have been so thoroughly scouted by Washington and Jefferson that Jock Sutherland announced all Pittsburgh's plays would be changed. W. and J. had a long workout with all of the cripples back in the lineup or expecting to return by Saturday.

Princeton's Tigers, preparing to the Washington and Lee contest, listened to Bill Roper tell them of their mistakes against Ohio State and then called it a day. Cornell and Boston college both worked hard for St. Bonaventure and Fordham respectively, Gil Dobie, at Ithaca, experimenting chiefly with his backfield. Dobie seeks a better offensive for Cornell and may get it.

Saturday's schedule has so many feature attractions that football fans will have a hard time trying to pick out the best dish of the menu. Georgetown and Carnegie Tech meet at Albany, N. Y., to settle which shall remain in the running of the mythical eastern championship. Yale tackles an intersectional foe in Maryland; undefeated Villanova meets Temple; Brown and Dartmouth battle at Hanover; Michigan invades the east to take on Navy at Baltimore; Wesleyan and Williams play the second of the season's "little three" games while Lafayette meets an ancient foe in Rutgers.

100-Point Handicap

MORGANTOWN, N. C., Nov. 7—(AP)—During a football game here between the Morgantown and Malden high schools, supporters of the local team offered to bet even money and spot Malden backers 100 points. There were no takers and Morgantown won the contest 104 to 0.

DIES WHILE PLAYING IN TENNIS GAME

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(AP)—William D. Bourne, who at the age of 70 was one of the oldest and most active players on the courts of the West Side Tennis club at Forest Hills, L. I., died today with a tennis racquet in his hand. He was stricken with a heart attack in the midst of a single match.

Bourne, an insurance broker, had been playing tennis for 40 years, half of that time at the West Side club. In the summer he was on the courts nearly every day. He played with the vim and enthusiasm of youth in spite of his age. Today he took advantage of the election holiday to play his favorite game.

RED CROSS SUMMARY ON FLOOD RELIEF WORK

Figures showing the extent of damage caused by the Mississippi valley flood of 1927 and the relief work of the American Red Cross, are contained in a final summary report issued by the organization and made public here today by Charles Colt, chairman of the Norwich chapter. A more detailed report is to be issued later.

The report, which deals exclusively with family losses, and does not include such items as property damage to public utilities, highways, and municipal properties, gives for the first time the final figures on family losses and places the number of buildings destroyed at 41,487, while a total of 163,017 homes were flooded. More than 65,000 families involving approximately 325,000 individuals, suffered losses in the disaster.

Agriculture is listed as a heavy loser in the flood. Of the 13,764,775 acres of cultivated land in the flood area, more than 5,239,000 acres were inundated. Live stock and poultry drownings totaled 1,175,873, while thousands of farmers lost all farm implements, buildings and equipment.

The Red Cross rescue fleet, assembled as the flood assumed such grave proportions, consisted of more than a thousand boats, with which 2,000,000 persons were rescued from housetops and other points of temporary safety and transported to refugee camps. The number of camps and concentration centers maintained by the Red Cross was 154. Altogether the organization cared for 2,207,000 flood sufferers during the relief work and was at one time serving more than a million meals a day to the sufferers.

The enormity of the Red Cross health and disease prevention program is shown in the report by the fact that to combat malaria 25,000,000 grains of quinine were used, while for the prevention of typhoid fever 457,700 persons were inoculated. The smallpox menace was met by the vaccination of nearly 147,000 persons.

Extensive building and repair projects; the distribution of seed, farm implements, live stock and feed were outstanding phases of the reconstruction program the Red Cross instituted as soon as the water receded. Nearly 2,500,000 acres were planted with seed supplied by the relief organization, the seed being distributed to nearly 400,000 persons. Besides this, relief 110,000 received assistance in building and repairing; 245,730 received household goods; live stock and poultry were given to 32,000; and farm implements to 8,000. Medical aid was extended to 58,800.

Relief expenditures of the organization in the flood reconstruction program will exceed $17,000,000, all but that which has been spent with the exception of a small amount being used for the completion of certain unfinished projects.

NORWICH FISHERMAN GET MORE WORK THAN FISH

A young man from Norwich came down to the village to go blackfishing with Captain Bill Mayor on the boat "Never Fail." They started out from the North dock with plenty of corned beef sandwiches and hot coffee for a day fishing on the salt water. They were half way out when the engine went wrong and Captain Mayor looked and saw eel grass had gotten in the wheel. He said, "Back her up!" and started the engine again but threw the throttle in too far and there it was on the blink for good. Captain Mayor was some made at him for making that mistake. All there was to do was to break out the oars. So the city chap got busy as he had the oars for a two and a half mile row to the North dock. It took them three hours before the good ship Never Fail tied up at the dock and they had to go back to their home with only fishermen's luck, setting only corned beef sandwiches and the coffee. The city chap's hobby is blackfishing, but he had to take the bus to the Rose of New England without fish for his friends after a hard luck day on the salt water.

Oh Boy! What a Skate!

Captain Lawrence Ashcroft and Mate Carl Dunn were off the shore of Watch Hill on boat Roberta Monday after fish. When all ready to quit for the day, Mate Dunn said "Let's make one more draw for tomorrow is election day and no market! We will cast our vote for Smiling Al Smith!" What a load was in that net! It was all the engine could do to haul the net on the deck of the Roberta for it held a 150 pound skate fish. It tore the net so badly that it will cost Captain Ashcraft $90 for a new one. Getting a large sugar barrel to stow the monster of the skate family away to New York to see how much it would bring at the market, he found that the big fish was too wide for the barrel. It was 21 inches across the back but Mate Dunn went up to Park's market and got a meat saw and he had to saw that fish in three parts to get it into the barrel and it was so thick he thought that he would never get the saw through him. It was the largest skate ever brought into Rogers' dock.

Recipe For Doughnuts.

Mrs. Jessie Plumstead and Mrs. Jane Carson attended a meeting of the Daughters of Isabella in Stonington recently when the largest crowd of members turned out in several months. Mrs. Carson made a speech to the members telling how to make grandmother's sugar doughnuts as they do in Noank. It is easy and when a big supper is being served in the village the people will look for those doughnuts with Main street sugar on them. Mrs. Carson gave the members the rule for making them and talked for 25 minutes. She was cheered at the close. There were songs and the piano was played by Mrs. Jessie Plumstead. The Daughters of Isabella had a fine evening's pleasure.

Found But Drowned.

Boat "Come Seven," Captain Donald Haves, was out Monday morning west of North Drumping after flatfish with the captain's son, Mate John Haves. They had made a couple of draws when Mate Haves said, "Gee, Pa! What is that floating on the water?" It was a buck dead. Both fishermen worked hard to get the deer aboard the boat and it took them an hour. They left then for the town dock where the deer was hauled out on the dock and a game warden from Groton was sent for. He came and looked the buck over and found no gun shots or any broken bones. He thinks the deer got tired out and with the cold water this time of year, died, as it could not make the main land. The deer weighed about 200 pounds. It looked as though the deer was dead only a few hours Captain Haves said he thought it was a cow at first.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson of Albany, N. Y., are spending a few days in the village with relatives.

A twin-screw engine will be installed and this will be the latest style shape boat to be seen in the fishing village in years. Boat Builder Frank Bracci who also made the trip said that it will be a pretty boat and can stand the rough weather on the salt water. Builder Bracci has sent about 500 boats away from the village in his days but claims the new boat for A. X. R. Brocky Brothers will be the talk of the town—nothing to beat it—has he seen in the boat line for 30 years.

A marked increase in the number of brick houses built throughout the country is noted.

MOOSUP

FATHER M'CARTHY RETURNS FOR FAREWELL RECEPTION

At St. Joseph's hall Sunday evening when the silver ubilee of Rev. Joseph E. McCarthy, former pastor of All Hallows' parish in Moosup and St. Joseph's church in Sterling, was observed with special exercises. The children of the school under the direction of the Holy Ghost Sisters carried through the program very pleasingly. Rev. Father McCarthy was ordained to the priesthood July 4, 1903, at Paris thus strictly this celebration should have been held last summer, but due to his own request no notice was taken of it in the parish at that time. Father McCarthy came to Moosup in May, 1913, and remained until September 7 of this year, when he was transferred to Hartford as vice president of St. Thomas' seminary. In his work in Moosup he was admired and respected alike by persons of all faiths, and while here he won a warm place in the hearts of the people, in whom he took a genuine interest. Another proof of the warm feeling the two parishes of Moosup and Sterling have for Father McCarthy was the purse, voluntarily subscribed, of about $1,125 which was given him at the close of the program. The presentation was made by the present pastor, Rev. Philip Masskutt. Father McCarthy was deeply touched by the gift and the manifestation of good will which it showed.

Two Disappointed Hunters
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

If what I lose some others gain,
There's been no loss, 'tis very plain.
—Reddy Fox.

It looked as if someone would have a Squirrel dinner. Yes, sir, that's the way it looked. Reddy Fox thought so. Redtail the Hawk thought so. But Rusty the Fox Squirrel wouldn't let himself think so. Not until he was caught would he believe that he was to furnish anyone with a dinner. But things looked bad. They couldn't very well have looked worse. There was Rusty on a fence-post with Redtail the Hawk preparing to swoop on him from above, and Reddy Fox waiting for him just below.

Rusty saw one chance for escape. It was just a chance and that was all. But he was making the most of it. He couldn't afford to make a mistake of any kind. No, sir, he couldn't afford to make a mistake of any kind. He would have to jump at just the right second. So Rusty watched the swift approach of Redtail. My, but Redtail was coming fast! It was hard, very hard, not to break and run. "I mustn't run yet, I mustn't run yet," Rusty kept saying over and over to himself as he heard the wind whistling through the stiff wing feathers of Redtail the Hawk.

When it looked as if Redtail surely would catch him, Rusty suddenly bounded forward half way along the next rail. Then without warning he made a flying leap off to one side, a flying leap to the ground. Now both Redtail and Reddy Fox were taken by surprise, which was just what Rusty had counted on. Redtail changed his course in the air somewhat and swooped low, hoping to pick Rusty up from the ground. Reddy Fox found himself on the wrong side of the fence and bounded through the bushes, intent on catching Reddy before he could once more get up on the fence.

Both were just too late to catch Rusty, but they were in time to get mixed up with each other. Redtail's low swoop came just as Reddy Fox bounded out from the bushes and one of Redtail's big wings struck Reddy across the face. My, how Reddy lost his temper then! He snapped at that great wing and got a mouthful of feathers for his pains. But he hung on and that brought Redwing to the ground. Such a snarling and screaming as there was then! Redtail threw himself on his back and struck out with those great claws of his. Reddy let go the wing and danced around, trying to find an opportunity to seize Redtail without encountering those great claws. Meanwhile each was blaming the other for the loss of Rusty.

"That was my Squirrel," stormed Reddy. "I found him first"

"That was my Squirrel," stormed Reddy. "I found him first."

"No such thing!" screamed Redtail, who was now on his feet. "I found him first and drove him in among those bushes. I was watching for him to come out again when you came along."

"It doesn't make any difference, he was my Squirrel!" snarled Reddy, pretending that he was about to spring on Redtail.

"If he was your Squirrel why didn't you catch him?" retorted Redtail, guarding himself with one of his big wings as Reddy sprang.

"I would have caught him if you had attended to your own business!" snapped Reddy.

All this time where do you think Rusty the Fox Squirrel was? He had darted down an old hole left by Johnny Chuck. He had seen it from the fence-post and he had dodged into it in the very nick of time. Now, while Reddy Fox and Redtail the Hawk were quarreling, Rusty was getting his breath and wondering what to do next.

NORWICH TOWN

Halloween At School In Canterbury

Mrs. Evangeline M. Cunningham, teacher of the Raymond district school, Canterbury, gave a delightful Halloween entertainment at the school.

The program was carried out by the scholars and was greatly enjoyed and heartily applauded.

The schoolroom was appropriately decorated, and following the program a basket lunch was served.

A grab bag and mystery table afforded much merriment.

After the lunch the floor was cleaned and children and parents joined in old fashioned square dances. Mrs. Cunninghame and Xavier Blain led off with a Paul Jones.

Music was furnished by the Raymond string quartette. "Prof." Davis prompted, assisted by "Bill" Beauchene.

Sixty-seven guests were present.

A Doctor Talks About Cascara

It is unfortunate that many people judge the thoroughness of a laxative by its violence. The salts that rush through the system may not even penetrate the film of poisonous matter that has coated the colon. A long list of drugs will "loosen the bowels" but what is the best way to CLEANSE them?

The world's best laxative is one that Mother Nature makes in her own laboratory. It is the bark of a tree, called CCASCARA. The Indians used to chew this bark—and reach old age without a sick day. It is the best thing there is today, for any system; best for the blood. The most beneficial in its action on the bowels of anything yet disclosed. For many reasons:

First of all, there is no HABIT formed from cascara. The bowels are not weakened, but strengthened by its occasional use. The occasions when one needs this aid grow less and less. Its influence is long-felt. You don't find yourself worse bound-up the day following. You do find the bowels more inclined to move of their own volition. The candy Cascaret that every drugstore always has in stock is the ideal form of cascara.

Do your brakes ADD.. to the DIN of traffic ?

Drive a new Century Hupmobile and note the difference

Silence is so much a built-in feature of steeldraulic brakes, first adopted by Hupmobile a year ago, that the contrast is startling with other cars. Thousands who are driving their first Hupmobiles tell us that now, for the first time, they enjoy positive brake action without trace of squeak or chatter. Hupmobile brakes have 6 times the clearance of average brakes. Dragging or brake friction is thus eliminated and effective power increased from 10 to 15 per cent. In addition, the special moulded asbestos lining of Century brakes has three times the life of ordinary brake lining. Cars have been driven for 18 months without a single brake adjustment. These are facts you should know in selecting your next car. They will lead you straight to Hupmobile for the finest of mechanical qualities as well as undisputed leadership in style and beauty.

Forty-two body and equipment combinations, standard and custom, on each line. Six of the Century list prices: $1345 to $1645, plus delivery charges. Century Eight list prices: $1825 to $2125, plus delivery charges.

LOCAL WOMAN'S CITY CLUB HAS VARIED PROGRAMME

A very pleasant combination of business and social interests of the Women's city club was the supper meeting held in the Wauregan hotel, Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock. About 175 members enjoyed this opportunity of getting better acquainted with each other. Through the reports of work already accomplished in the very full program by the various committees, the members had an opportunity to learn more of the complete program of the club. It is a varied program to meet all the interests of the large membership.

Arrangements for this supper were made by the hospitality chairman, Mrs. Frederic W. Cary, the house chairman, Mrs. Conway and the programme chairman, Mrs. Foster. Much credit is due the committee for the success of the event. Table decorations in patriotic colors and flags were in keeping with the day.

Community singing led by Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard during the suppes added greatly to the social spirit and general attractiveness of the program.

Miss Bishop presided and presented the various chairman of committees. Miss Howe reported a growing membership of 556; Mrs. Foster summed up various points in the year book. Mrs. Vaughn reviewed the work of the literary committee to date and expressed the wish that current events nights have an even larger place in the life of the club. In the absence of Mrs. Dawley and Mrs. Tingley, Mrs. Gilbert announced the class in parliamentary law to be held next Monday and spoke of the enthusiasm with which the Girls' Work committee was beginning its work.

For the civics committee, Miss Huntington, the chairman reported the work done through the summer for fresh air children and reviewed the work done in connection with highways and parks.

An important change in the plans of the art department will bring to Norwich during November some work of the Yale school of drama not shown hitherto outside of New Haven.

Another important announcement concerned the coming of the state Highway Commissioner John Macdonald on Wednesday evening.

Miss Bishop also called attention to the activity of the home economics group which was reported by Mrs. Worth in the absence of Miss Hill.

Miss Bishop introduced Mrs. Snow as the five minute speaker, stressing the importance of the work she has been doing for the past two years in the sale of Red Cross seals. Mrs. Snow emphasized the practical ways in which the money has ben spent, furnishing milk to undernourished children, paying the board in the sanatoria of some children and some adults who could not otherwise have the necessary care. The board of two children will be paid as long as they live. People do not generally know that eighty-five cents out of every dollar spent for seals is used right in Norwich. The money that comes from the sale of seals is the only money available for this particular kind of work.

The club was gratified to hear that a gift of $100 from Mrs. L. O. Smith will be a substantial addition to the sinking fund. The gift of the community song books through the music committee will also be helpful for use at supper meetings.

At the conclusion of the regular business procedure which had engrossed the club during the supper hour, Miss Bishop introduced Colvin M. Brown of the U. S. chamber of commerce, whose subject was The Proposed New Inn. Mr. Brown's talk will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Secretary Walter M. Pilcher of the local chamber of commerce commented upon the contribution to the life of Norwich which the Woman's City club has already made through its various ramifications.

During the afternoon, previous to the supper meeting, a very successful food sale was conducted in the lobby of the hotel, be Mrs. Aurin L. Payson, assisted by some of the members of the executive board of the club. The proceeds of this sale, which netted $100 will be added to the club's sinking fund.

Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person.

Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just use special coupon below.

Tell-tale eyes

Restless eyes tell...

Restless Eyes frequently indicate fickleness and a great capacity for enjoying the every day things of life.

All eyes reveal physical condition as well as psychological characteristics. Eyes with a yellow tinge show symptoms of constipation or disordered liver.

The modern corrective for these ailments is the regular use of Beecham's laxative Pills. Safe. Mild. Effective. Purely vegetable and not habit-forming. 50c at all druggists. Trial size 25c.

POETRY
November

When thistle-blows do lightly float
Above the pasture-bushes,
And shrills the hawk a parting note,
And creeps the frost at nights,
Then hilly ho! though singing so,
And whistle as I may,
There comes again the old heart pain
Through all the livelong day.

In high wind creaks the leafless tree
And nods the fadion fern;
The knolls are dun, as snow-clouds be,
And cold the sun does burn.
Then ho, hollo! though calling so,
I can not keep it down;
The tears arise unto my eyes,
And thoughts are chill and brown.

Far in the cedary dusky stoles,
Where the sere ground-vine weaves,
The partridge drums funereal rolls
And hip, hip, ho! though cheering so,
It stills no whit the pain;
For drip, drip, drip, frame bare branch up,
I hear the year's last rain.

So drive the cold cows from the hill,
And call the wet sheep in;
And let their stamping clatter fill
The barn with warming din.
And ho, folk, ho! though it be so
That we no more may roam,
We still will find a cheerful mind
Around the fire at home!

—C. L. Cleaveland.

Request

You work such magic with a careless twist
Of lace or braid upon your modest dress,
A touch of ribbon at your throat or wrist,
You make me grateful for your loveliness.
You have a way with plain and friendly speech,
A bit of art in lowly spoken word,
That brings old music back again to teach
Forgotten harmonies we once have heard.

Could I but catch in homespun verse of mine
The rustle of your silken phrase, or be Inspired now with gently rounded line
To sing the secret of your witchery!
But since I'm doomed in homely garb to go,
Would you object to wearing calico?

—W. H. McCreary, in "Wings and Wishes."

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"I've just given my wife a sable coat."

"To keep her warm?"

"No, to keep her quiet."—Sydney Bulletin.

'Arriet (in the country)—Ain't that cow got a lovely coat?

'Arry—Yus; it's a Jersey.

'Arriet—A jersey? And I thought it was 'er skin.—Passing Show.

"I asked you if you would loan me $50, but you didn't answer."

"No, I thought it would be better for me to owe you the answer than for you to owe me the fifty."—Pathfinder.

A meeting of the Masonic Dodge will be held on Thursday night in the hall.—New Zealand paper.

Unfortunately, most wives are up to the Masonic Dodge.—Punch.

"Then you deny," said the magistrate, "that you were rude to the policeman when he asked to see your license?"

"Certainly, sir," replied the motorist. "All I said was that from what I could see of him I was sure his wife would be happier as a widow."—Montreal Gazette.

"He who has never changed his mind," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "is the one who thinks he can hold perpetual summer by refusing to tear off the next leaf of the calendar."—Washington Star.

Police Inspector—Why, this is not a very comfortable place to pass the night, my man.

Vagrant—It's a crying shame that an observant, intelligent man like you has not been made chief of police longago, Inspector.—Lustige Blaetter.

"Clorine," said her mistress, "I've heard about your hard luck and I'm terribly sorry."

"Oh, yes, ma'am—but dat's his hand luck."

"Why—wasn't your husband killed in a railroad accident?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am—but dat's his hand luck—not mine."—American Legion Monthly.

Scientists believe that the whale lives longer than any other creature. Its life ranges from 200 to 500 years.

Hubert Carre, a barber at Lille, France, claims the world's record for shaving. Before witnesses who swore to an affidavit, he shaved himself in 27 seconds flat. And he didn't even nick his chin once.

Among the trees cut for his year's supply of firewood by Harvey Hewitt of Bristol, Vt., was a beech. In cutting it into stove lengths he found one block with the name of W. H. Prime, 1878, cut into the bark and still legible.

The villagers of Ilion, N. Y., in the historic Mohawk valley, are setting out 5,000 pine trees in groups so as to spell the word "Ilion." Each letter will be outlined by low white birches along the outer edge of dark evergreens. This foliage sign will occupy a 1,000-acre field on the peak of Oak hill. Every letter will be ten yards wide to make this aircraft signboard visible from a great height.

A gold watch lost by Miss Florence Lloyd, of Baltimore, Md., fourteen years ago while she was a visitor at the home of Miss Julia Ringgold on Eastern Neck island, was just washed ashore at Trumpton, the country home of Mrs. Ringgold. Miss Lloyd dropped the watch overboard as she was stepping from a yacht to a tender. The works of the timepiece were destroyed, but the case was in excellent condition.

German owners of radio receiving sets, by paying 50 cents monthly for the privilege contribute more than $12,000,000 annually to the central government, which distributes the fund among the subsidiary broadcasting companies. Payments are made to letter carriers or at the post office, and deliberate failure to pay or to notify the authorities of possession of a radio set makes the owner liable to imprisonment.

Motor bus competition has caused such severe loss to the Hoer-Boerby railway line, one of the oldest in Sweden, that the operators have asked the government permission to abandon the route. A few years ago the line was one of the most prosperous in the country, but the more elastic passenger and freight service provided by bus in the densely populated area attracted most of the patronage and trains recently have been running virtually empty.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

One of the most brilliant Oriental pictures ever filmed is Warner Bros.' "The Crimson City" with Myrna Loy, coming to the Breed theatre today for a run of two days. Miss Loy, always enchanting in parts of this character, is cast as Nan Toy, slave in the "House of a Thousand Daggers." There she falls in love with an outcast white man, hide him, nurses him to health, only to have him taken from her by his former white sweetheart. This is but a small part of the action which makes the play so haunting.

Perhaps for the first time in the history of motion pictures, a plumber has been made the hero of the cinema production in "Jake the Plumber," FBO comedy feature, which will be the added feature.

As a laugh producer, "Jake the Plumber" is said to be second to none of the comedy features shown here in recent months. How "Jake, a plumber's helper, becomes a famous jockey and wins a beautiful girl and a modest fortune, is in the theme of the production.

DeVorska is supported by a notable cast including Sharon Lynn, Ann Brodie, Rosa Rosanova and Eddie Harris.

Fuller, Richter, Aldrich & Co.

The activities of Fuller, Richter, Aldrich & Co. of 94 Pearl street, Hartford, investment bankers, are spreading through the state and, in addition to the continuance of the New London office in the Plaut building, with Milton M. Bewer in charge, other representatives of the Hartford financial house will cover this southeastern section of Connecticut. H. A. Burbank, well known in Norwich and New London owing to previous connections and family relations, will visit this territory several days a week to establish a personal touch with his many clients in and around Norwich, New London and other cities and towns in this part of the state.

Mr. Burbank was formerly with Buell & Company and has been in the investment business about five years. He has built up a steadily growing patronage in this section and it now requires a closer contact, hence the decision on the part of Fuller, Richter, Aldrich & Company to allow him several days each week in this part of the state. Mr. Burbank was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, specializing in electrical engineering and this training has stood him in good stead analyzing stock issues offered to his clients. He spent two years in the Royal Flying Corps during the war. College, the war and finance have been his main activities in the past twelve years. In the investment business he has specialized in bank, insurance and public utility securities.

Mr. Baker at the New London office of Fuller, Richter, Aldrich & Co. intimates that his firm intends to increase their sales activities in and about Norwich and New London owing to the very satisfactory response past solicitations by telephone and mail have developed.

Palace Theatre

For years the motion picture field has been concerned with petty problems, all served piping hot for the edification of the rabid movie-goer; but perhaps no cinema has come out of Hollywood in recent months which for sheer interest and entertainment value can surpass "Undressed," the current feature at the Palace theatre, and a Sterling film, in this regard.

Virginia Brown Faire, Hedda Hopper, Bryant Washburn, Buddy Messinger, David Torrence, and Virginia Vance makes up the cast of the film; while Phil Rosen has done his customary fine job with the megaphone. A picture to be seen by all means!

In the companion feature outlawry, passionate love and daring deeds are to be found in "Virgin Lips," the Columbia production at the Palace theatre. Olive Borden has the stellar role with John Boles as masculine lead. The plot revolves around a beautiful American girl, lured into a notorious Central American cafe by promises of a dancing engagement and a daring American aviator, who bolts at bay the forces of an outlaw leader.

The action is tense—thrilling—and spectacular. There are picturesque backgrounds, unusual and dangerous airplane sequences which work up to a smashing climax in which a company of cavalrymeg put to rout the rebel horde. Elmer Clifton directed.

Broadway Theatre

A remarkable demonstration of the emotional power of Al Jolson is furnished in "The Singing Fool," the new special production in which he is presented by Warner Bros., now showing all week at the Broadway theatre. Though Jolson's stormily dramatic rendition of popular ballads has undoubtedly been an important factor in causing the public to acclaim him as the world's favorite entertainer, he has always been considered first and foremost as a comedian.

And yet, "The Singing Fool" is not a comedy—having few comedy moments—and no element of comedy action whatever. It is a drama of the most intense pathos—a moving story of the utmost emotional depth, in which Al, though gay and light-hearted in the beginning, is brought at length to the depths of despair.

Jolson's supporting cast includes two leading ladies in the persons of Betty Bronson and Josephine Dunn, and other prominent roles are played by Reed Howes, Arthur Housman, David Lee, Edward Martindel and Robert Emmett O'Connor. The screen story was written by C. Graham Baker from the play by Leslie S. Barrows.

The management are presenting two complete performances each evening at 6:30 and 8:30 p. m. so that the Broadway patrons may avoid unnecessary crowding and discomfort.

Dance at Pulaski Hall

Another good time can be assured those attending the dance tonight at Pulaski hall. Fred Thumm and his orchestra are doing the honors, and will feature "Then Came the Dawn," a beautiful melody in fox trot time.

The lighting effects are gorgeous, and the stage settings very attractive which add much to the pleasure of the patrons. If you're been there already this season you will be there tonight, and if you haven't been there yet, your missing something worth while. Dancing begins at 8:30 and continues until 12, so we will see you tonight at Pulaski.

Speaker From India

Dr. Robert Hume of India will speak at the meeting of the missions department of the Woman's Federation of Park church on Friday, Nov. 9th, at 3 p. m. All interested in hearing this famous missionary will be welcome.

RED CROSS MASS MEETING AT PUTNAM SUNDAY EVE.

PUTNAM, Nov. 6—As part of the annual Roll Call drive the Putnam chapter of American Red Cross will hold a mass meeting in the Second Congregational church auditorium next Sunday evening, Nov. 11. The feature of the evening will be an address to be delivered by Mr. William Hepner of Washington, who is assistant director of war service. He plays an important role in this position in supervising Red Cross work for the veterans of the World war. Mr. Hepner began in Red Cross work in an army hospital and later directed the service in a veterans bureau hospital. His executive knowledge of social work won him successive promotions. In 1923, he was made director of war service for the former southern division and two years later came to the national Red Cross headquarters in Washington as director of the whole country. Mr. Hepner has also had valuable experience in social and civic organizations in Cook County, Ill., where he acquired knowledge of conditions that place him foremost in the list of Red Cross workers and orators.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

LONGER WORKING DAYS FOR HENS INCREASE EGG PROFITS

Longer working days for hens, especially in the fall and winter months when eggs are high in price, have been found by the United States department of agriculture to be a ready means of securing more profit from the flock. Egg prices follow a definite seasonal trend, being lowest in April and May and increasing through July and August. They show a sharp market increase in September and finally reach the peak price in November or early December.

During the fall and winter months the shorter days so limit the feeding time of the average farm flock that the production declines. On the department's experimental poultry farm at Beltsville, Md., electric lights are used to lengthen the days. They are usually started about the first of October and continued until the middle of March. A White Leghorn pullet last year laid 116 eggs, working throughout the fall and winter by the use of electric lights to the somewhat record for production.

In two years' tests in which lights were used at Beltsville from about November 1 to March 20 the production of a pen of 50 pullets was increased the first year by 50.2 dozen eggs, the value of which was $27.96 greater than the production of 50 pullets working without lights. In the second year another pen of 50 pullets working under similar conditions produced 40.6 dozen eggs more than a pen of 50 pullets in an unlighted pen. The value of the increase was $34.42. One 75-watt light was used for each pen an average of 3½ hours daily for 140 days.

An average length of day of 12 to 13 hours gives the best results, according to the department. Longer light periods force the hens too much. Morning lights are the easiest and most practical because they can be turned on automatically and no dimming is required as in the case of evening lighting. The use of lights does not pay, however, unless the best attention is also given to feeding, management, and housing of the flock. Grain should be put in the house after the pullets have gone to roost so as to be available for their early morning feed.

FEED SURPLUS CORN TO HOGS AND CATTLE, JARDINE ADVISES

Agriculture would benefit and a minimum disturbance of prices for all the commodities involved would follow, in the opinion of the secretary of agriculture, W. M. Jardine, if 50,000,000 bushels of corn were diverted to the additional feeding of cattle and hogs this year. However, he warns against the production of hogs heavier than the desirable market weight, because price discriminations against too-heavy hogs would serve to offset the value of the extra weight.

"An increase of 5 pounds in the weight of the average hog," says Secretary Jardine, "is about as far as hog feeders should plan to go this year." An average increase of 5 pounds in the weight of the 45,000,000 hogs fed on the 1928 corn crop would mean the consumption of about 20,000,000 additional bushels.

Secretary Jardine believes cattle feeding is preferable to hog feeding in many respects as a method of utilizing more corn, and says "opportunities for feeding about 22,000,000 bushels of corn deserve the consideration of cattlemen. It takes about 200 pounds of shelled corn to put 100 pounds of gain on a two-year-old steer. At this rate 2,225,000 steers fed to be 100 pounds heavier by corn feeding would consume approximately 22,000,000 bushels of the crop. This is probably a very conservative number, being only half of the steers slaughtered annually under federal inspection.

"The advisability of feeding surplus corn to cattle rather than to hogs," he continues, "is plainly evident. Two and a quarter million steers, each fed to weigh 100 pounds more, are equivalent to about 124,000,000 pounds of dressed beef, or one pound per person. This is not a sufficient increase to affect prices seriously or to offset the 10 per cent decrease in the number of cattle killed within the last year. The heavier feeding of corn should be on the lighter cattle, since there are signs of a plentiful supply of heavy cattle in the summer of 1929."

MANY FRUITS WASTED YEARLY WOULD MAKE GOOD VINEGAR

Vinegar is not necessarily made from apples, although many of the late and windfall apples are utilized in this way. Vinegar can be made from any fruit, or, in fact, from any material which contains enough sugar and is in no way objectionable, according to the United States department of agriculture. Vinegar of good quality can be made from oranges, persimmons, pears, various berries, honey, maple products, watermelon, and grains. Large quantities of some of the fruits mentioned are wasted each year in the United States.

In England vinegar was first made from malt liquors, a method of disposing of ale and beer which had soured. Malt vinegar is still the standard in the British Isles. Here apple juice is largely used for home-made vinegar, and cider vinegar is considered the standard for household purposes. Whether it is done on a small scale in the home, on a larger scale on the farm, or on a still larger scale in the factory, the production of vinegar is the result of two distinct fermentation processes—an alcoholic fermentation followed by an acetic fermentation. Sugar is the base of vinegar production. Any watery solution of a fermentable sugar may be transformed into vinegar under favorable conditions. Many fruit juices are well suited to this purpose, as they contain sugar in the proper proportion and other necessary or desirable substances.

Distilled or spirit vinegar made from molasses or alcohol obtained as a by-product from the manufacture of other products, notably compressed yeast, is nearly always colorless and lacks the aroma and flavor of fruit vinegars. For this reason it is not commonly desired for table use, but is extensively used for pickling or preserving.

Directions for making any of the above-named fruit and other vinegars will be furnished by the United States department of agriculture.

OLD-TIME METHODS REGARDED AS BEST IN PACKING OF PORK

K. F. Warner is a young man himself, but he says "the boys are all wrong in fussing at grandpa for being so cranky when he puts pork in cure."

As a federal meat specialist, Warner has learned that the most important ingredient to be put into the pork barrel is carefulness. One hundred pounds of meat can be cured with three pounds of salt, or 12 pounds of salt and widely varying amounts of sugar and saltpeter, Warner says, but unless care is included the resulting product will be neither economical nor palatable.

"Grandpa," he continues, "learned his lesson in the hard school of experience, and he knows that unless meat is put down with care, rennet almost to the degree of crankiness, the result will be unsatisfactory.

"The practice of carefulness should begin before one, even sharpens a knife or starts a fire under the scalding kettle."

With the season at hand for farmers to slaughter their supplies of meat, Warner advises that smooth trimming of the cuts is essential to proper curing. There is no one best curing recipe or cutting method which will apply to all. The one best suited to each person's need and taste is the one for him to use, yet whatever method is selected it is important that care should be used in its application.

WELL TREATED SOILS MAY NEVER WEAR OUT

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Thirty million acres of idle crop land, much of it abandoned on the theory that it is "worn out," some day will be brought back into active production, soil scientists say. It is their contention that except in the popular conception, land does not wear out and that with intelligent management a field may be seeded to the same crop each consecutive year indefinitely without diminishing the yield.

The most notable example is recorded at Rothamsted Experiment Station in England, where the 86th consecutive crop of wheat was produced this year on the same land. The average yield for the entire period has been 33 bushels to the acre, maintained, officials say, by returning to the soil the same elements of plant food in the same quantity they were taken up by each crop. The experiment, oldest of its kind in the world, was started in 1843, when the station was founded by Sir John Lawes, the originator of commercial fertiliser. England had an exceptionally good growing season this year, and the wheat at Rothamsted stood shoulder high at cutting.

Of more significance to American agriculture, the 48th consecutive crop of wheat on the same land was produced this year at Pennsylvania State college. To the United States what the Rothamsted test is to England the Pennsylvania is the oldest in this country. Like Rothamsted, it is considered to prove that high yields can be maintained by intelligent use of plant food and good farming practice. Wheat there averaged 23 bushels to the acre as against 12 bushels to the acre on a neighboring plat, grown with no attention to soil requirements.

In the various phases of soil fertility and conservation, Europe is the treasure house of the centuries. It has shown the way on soils that have been under cultivation for more than 2,000 years, to the upbuilding of a superior fertility as indicated by crop yields for surpassing those of the practically virgin land in this country.

Soil is not allowed to "wear out" in Europe, where the needs of the population are pressing. Agriculture production is the limit. The population were, economists say, has not caught up with farm production, a situation blamed for much of the tendency to abandon land when its fertility has been mined and yields grow short.

The census of 1920 showed 956 million acres of land in farm in this country. By 1925 it had dropped to 924 million acres, or an abandonment of 32 million acres. During the same period there was a net abandonment of 78,703 farms.

It is admitted that various influences are responsible for the abandonment, but the soil scientist maintains that had the land been highly productive less of it would have been left idle.

HINTS FOR THE FARM

To obtain even utilization of the range by cattle and to prevent overgrazing in parts near the water, watering places in level country should be not more than five miles apart.

Poultry mites do not like carbolineum. If these pests are in the poultry house, paint carbolineum on the roosts, nests and the places where the roosts come into contact with the dropping boards and rear of the house. One application usually is enough for a whole year.

Every acre of tilled land not in legumes during the winter should be in a small grain cover crop except where fall plowing is advisable. For emergency cover crops and pasture there are no more useful plants than the small grains, which take up the available nitrate that otherwise would be lost, prevent washing and make excellent grazing in favorable weather.

Young heifers wintered at the U. S. Range Livestock Experiment Station, Miles City, Mont., on bluejoint hay for 84 days showed a gain of 65 pounds with a daily ration of 20 pounds of hay. Another lot required 23 pounds of alfalfa hay for the same period to make a gain of 51 pounds.

As a soil improver a winter legume generally is more valuable than a summer legume. It occupies the ground at a time when the money crop is not grown and is turned under at a time to permit the most favorable utilization of nitrogen by the money crop. Vetches, Australian winter peas, bur clover and crimson clover are good crops for this purpose in the south.

Carbon disulphide is a good insecticide for fumigating stored grains, cowpeas, beans and peas. Amounts up to 20 pounds of the liquid material per 1,000 cubic feet are necessary to kill grain insects in ordinary rooms where the walls and floors are not especially tight. Since the vapor of carbon disulphide is highly inflammable, care should be taken to keep fire in any form from the room that is being fumigated.

Winter wheat makes excellent pasture and can be used for this purpose when other pastures fail. Livestock can be left in the wheat field all winter if the ground remains dry and there is plenty of plant growth. If care is taken to prevent excessive pasturing and grazing when the soil is wet, injury to the wheat crop is not likely to occur.

It may be well to hold a post-mortem on whatever fowls are found dead at this time of year, to see if roundworms or cecum worms are present in the flocks. If they are, add to the dry mash 2 per cent, by weight of finely powdered tobacco dust, containing at least 1.5 per cent. nicotine, to control the worms. This will lessen the danger to young chicks and poults next spring.

An economical way to utilize velvet-bean pasture in the south is to allow hogs to follow the cattle. Hogs will eat practically all the beans broken from the plants and wasted by the cattle. A good stand of velvet beans should produce about 200 pounds of beef and 700 pounds of pork per acre.

Kitchen scraps should be fed to domestic animals, if they are kept. If not, the scraps should be "fed" to the garden because of their fertilizer value.

Cheese may be made at any time of the year, and on farms where there is a surplus of milk during certain seasons cheese-making offers an exceptionally advantageous means of conserving, for later use, milk which otherwise might be wasted. The farm home could well afford to use more cheese. It provides muscle and body-building material in abundance.

A half-acre garden, if properly cared for, will produce sufficient vegetables for the average family's use during the summer and for storing, canning and drying for winter use. It will produce a far greater return per acre than can be realized from an equal area devoted to general farm crops.

Shortly after noon Tuesday a tar kettle in use at the new Masonic home at Washington and Sachem streets boiled over and caught fire. The fire department responded to a telephone call but their services were not needed as the blaze had been extinguished.

PROPOSED INN TO BE ERECTED ON NORWICH GOLF CLUB PROPERTY

R. W. PERKINS OUTLINES PLAN FOR FINANCING NORWICH INN

At the noon luncheon of the Norwich Business and Professional Women's club, Tuesday, at the Wauregan hotel Robert W. Perkins, chairman of the finance committee of the Norwich inn project the principal speaker, gave an outline of the inn project.

In part Mr. Perkins said:

Practically all progress made by the human race has been the result of dissatisfaction, that is by the effort of men who would not be satisfied with things as they are and that is the spirit that has promoted the move for an inn at Norwich to provide a house of public entertainment that will be an improvement over what we now have. The experience of all towns where such a move has taken place has been this: It has not injured the existing hotels' business at all. It has built it up. In Middlebury a small town of 1300, a new hotel costing $200,000 to build was erected and they all benefited by the construction of the new inn. Properties changed hands later and were rebuilt, and are now doing a successful business.

The idea of combining the inn project with the Golf club was one that resulted from a number of happy circumstances. That gives us the opportunity to locate the inn at a point just outside the city where conditions and surroundings will make it more interesting as a place of entertainment.

The place of location is practically decided upon. Arrangements will enable us to build the hotel with a beautiful view down the Thames river as far as the Poquetanuck drawbridge and then there is the view over the Trading Cove valley. I am just countrified enough to find the quiet of this location ideal.

The justification for asking the people of Norwich for funds necessary to build such an inn such as we are contemplating, is based upon results of our investigations of other inns of similar type. We came in contact with the Treadway organization, whose official title is the Consolidated Hotel Service inc., who are operators of inns of this type. They are not commercial types of inns. They are strictly the suburban type of hotel.

We have found that all of the inns which this company are operating and which have been built within the last few years in New England are operating successfully, all operating expenses have been taken care of and in addition to that, a fair return on common stock was made. Common stock in these cases were issued as bonuses. In this state we are unable to sell stocks and give other issues as bonuses for under the law all stock must be paid for in full at par.

The financial structure that we have built up is this. We need in order to build a 70-room house, at a cost of about $4,000 per room, a total of $280,000. That $4000 per room includes provision of all public rooms which will be necessary for such an establishment and we originally left the whole lower floor for this purpose, with of course, the exception of the kitchen.

We will require $280,000 to build and furnish this inn and in order to secure control of the Golf Land Co. The hotel company will have to assume $20,000 of its notes and purchase all of its capital stock for $15,100 leaving its bonded debt of $50,000 outstanding. This calls for a total investment of $35,100 in the Golf Land Co., and through that ownership the site for the hotel is secured at a nominal figure.

We propose to sell 3200 shares of 7 per cent. preferred stock with a par value of $100 and 3200 shares of no par common stock at $10 per share and sell and those in units of one share of each for $110. The dividend on the preferred will show a return of 6.36 per cent. on the investment of $110, until a dividend on the common increases it.

The Treadway organization as operators of the inn desire no income from the property until all expenses and the dividends on the preferred stock have been earned and paid, the remaining balance is to be divided equally between the common stock and the operating company.

The experience of the Treadway organization indicates that such an inn should show a gross income after the payment of all expenses including local taxes of $1000 per room which amounts in this case to $70,000 per year. If we deduct from this federal taxes and the preferred dividend we have a substantial amount remaining to divide in order to feel safe in recommending this project to the people of Norwich we have cut the estimated income to $500 per room which gives $35,000 the federal tax at 12½ per cent. is then $4,375, this leaves $30,625 after deducting the preferred dividend of 7 per cent on $320,000, namely $22,400. We have $8,225 to be divided between the operating company and the common stock, which permits a dividend of $125 per share.

The Treadway organization is now operating several inns of the type contemplated and they are all earning better than six per cent. on the common stock and they state that not one of their inns is located in a position that offers opportunity greater than the one for Norwich. That this situation because of its surroundings is more favorable for the successful operation of an inn than any other that they are now connected with.

PLUMBERS AND STEAMFITTERS ENJOY CHICKEN SUPPER

Following a brief business meeting at Carpenter's hall, Monday evening the local plumbers and steamfitters union enjoyed a roast chicken supper at Odd Fellows hall, the Terminal catering. The menu served was as follows:

Fruit Cocktail
Hearts of Celery — Queen Olives
Chicken Soup Ala Reine
Half Roast Spring Chicken & Dressing
Mashed Potatoes
Green Peas — Cranberry Sauce
Apple Pie — Cheese
Coffee

Cigars were circulated and an entertainment programme completed the evening's pleasure. Edward T. Connelly was heard in several vocal selections, Nicholas J. Spellman presided at the piano and entertained with several selections as did Horace F. Corning in vocal numbers.

There were two exhibition boxing bouts, each of three rounds. The boxers were Johnny Copp, at 135 and Vic Davis at 137 pounds; Young McCarthy and Jimmie Quinn, Henry Boyd was the referee.

Business Agent Robert McNeely spoke of union conditions in Norwich and in relation to the compensation law. He said that the compensation law should cover all workmen regardless of the number employed. Harry Blum was heard in a pleasing vocal selection. Henry Manieci of New London brought greetings from the New London plumbers union to the local union. Ten members of the New London union accompanied Mr. Manieci to this city.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the evening comprised John Kuhat, Matthew Hourigan and Partick MaMahon.

WATERFORD TO DEDICATE WORLD WAR MEMORIAL

Waterford will dedicate its war memorial Sunday, Armistice day, with a programme that will include an address by Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook. The Coast Guard band will furnish music for the exercises that are scheduled to start at 3 o'clock.

The memorial is for Waterford's sons who served in the army or navy during the World war, a fitting ceremony for the 10th anniversary of the signing of the armistice. The memorial is a granite boulder, bearing a bronze tablet. The boulder, perfectly shaped for the purpose, was found upon a hillside and brought to its present location near the junction of the main highway and shore road at Jordan Village, where land was cleared, graded and a suitable foundation placed. The site chosen offers a beautiful background and protects the memorial from possible encroachment in the future.

HUMAN EYE GRAFTED ON EYE OF BLIND MAN

A New York paper tells of the grafting of a human eye on a blind man in that city, the first operation of its kind ever performed, one of the most daring and delicate experiments ever tried by an opthalmist. A patient at the Eye and Ear hospital, Bert Ferguson, has had transplanted on his right eye the corean of another human eye What the result will be cannot be known until the bandages are removed in ten days or two weeks. Ferguson, who is 32, and an inmate of the Home for the Blind, has one glass eye and the other eye was obscured by a cataract, so that he had extremely obscure vision. Chas. E. Greenblatt, 32, was found suffering from an eye tumor so serious that it was decided to remove the affected eye.

Dr. Ben Witt Key, of New York had both men for patients. Although the tumor had rendered Greenblatt's eye almost valueless, Dr. Key found that the cornea was perfect, so decided to graft it on the weakened cornea of the eye of Ferguson. The success of the operation will depend upon the tissue of Ferguson's eye being strong enough to nourish the tissue in the piece lifted from Greenblatt's eye. Dr. Key is known to many in Norwich and was a classmate of Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, of Uncas-on-Thames.

The committee in charge of the affair comprises Robert Schmidt of the Taftville Congregational church, Carl Holdridge of Ledyard, Wallace Blakesley of the Lebanon Congregational church and Henry Aspinall of the Lebanon Baptist church.

STORES AGAINST CLOSING ON ARMISTICE DAY

The executive committee of the Merchants bureau of the chamber of commerce, at a special meeting Monday, discussed the closing of Norwich stores next Monday, which is the observance of Armistice day, but the decision was against closing the stores on that day. As New London is to have an unusual observance of the day, the sentiment in the meeting was that stores having American Legion men employed in them would give them the day off in order to participate in the New London celebration.

Appointment of a committee to make plans for the Christmas season was made by President Abner Schwartz as follows: Abner Schwartz, president of the bureau, appointed the following committee to make plans for the Christmas season; Fred Fleming of the Porteous & Mitchell Co.; C. E. Smith of the Reid & Hughes Co., J. B. Caron of Caron's Specialty Shop; C. W. Taggart of the gas and electric department and Harold McDonald of the Lincoln stores.

The whole subject of closing the stores on various holidays throughout the year was turned to a committee for consideration and report later. President Schwartz named John P. Lyston, C. E. Fitch and Walter E. Gilbert as the committee.

TWO MAIN PLANKS FOR WOMEN VOTERS LEAGUE

A state legislative program will be part of the year's program of work which delegates to the coming state convention of the Connecticut League of Women Voters will decide upon. They will also take action on a suggested study and activity program to be recommended by the standing committees, which will meet in conferences before the formal opening of the convention on November 14 at the Mohican hotel, New London.

The legislative recommendations made by the state executive board call for focusing on two major measures, jury service for women and state aid for special classes. The convention will be asked to give the executive board power to support such bills as are consistent with the planks which the league presented to the state political parties, and to oppose any bill manifestly contrary to the principles and planks of the league.

The proposed legislative program will be presented the first afternoon of the convention and acted upon on the third morning at the final business session. The study program will be acted upon at the same time.

MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION TO CHOOSE ITS OFFICERS

At their annual meeting to be held at the plant of Cheney Brothers in South Manchester on November 7, the manufacturers association of this state will elect officers for the coming year and directors to fill the vacancies created by those whose terms have expired.

Leland Keeney, treasurer of the Somerville Manufacturing company, who was elected by the board of directors to fill the unexpired term of R. T. Jones upon his retirement, has been nominated for re-election to the board of directors. E. S. Davis, secretary and treasurer of Rogers & Hubbard Manufacturing company, Middletown, has been nominated to represent Middlesex county on the board of directors, and E. G. Buckland, vice president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad company, and Frank H. Lee, company, Danbury, have ben nominated for election as directors-at-large for the next four years. The board of directors of the association is made up of sixteen manufacturers, eight directors at large.

CONGREGATIONAL ASSOCIATION TRIBUTE TO REV. DR. HOWE

When the New London Association of Congregational churches held its fall meeting last week at Stonington, the association recognized its veteran member, Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Howe of this city, who was about to retire from the active ministry, by unanimously adopting, by a rising vote, a testimonial to Dr. Howe which was presented by Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, registrar of the association.

The testimonial was as follows:

The New London Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers has the distinction of containing in its ministerial membership one whose term of service to the churches of our order exceeds by several years that of any other Congregational minister in active service in our commonwealth. Dr. Howe was ordained to the Christian ministry in 1863, and is just now closing a pastorate of 45 years at the Park church in Norwich.

It is fitting that this association incorporate in its minutes some word of recognition of this unique event.

Dr. Howe has served this association through the years willingly and efficiently. He has been to our church a tower of intellectual and spiritual strength. His voice has been heard in our assemblies in no uncertain sound and with no evasion of the issue presented. We have been stimulated by his scholarly ability and literary charm which have characterized his utterances always. We have loved to refer to him as the dean of Congregationalism in this part of New England. He has not only won our respect for the Christian ministry by the dignity of his personality and his unswerving loyalty to Jesus Christ but he has also won our hearts by his kindly spirit and the warmth of his Christian fellowship. We rejoice to know that although he is soon to relieve himself of the heavier duties of the active pastorate, he is still to reside among us, and we hope and pray that his presence and counsel will be available to our churches for many years to come.

At the invitation of the moderator of the meeting, Dr. Howe addressed the assembly, emphasizing the supreme place of the pulpit as the throne of power in the life of the church, and urged his fellow ministers to give more time to study in the great themes of our Christian faith.

ONLY 87 ELECTORAL VOTES FOR SMITH AND ROBINSON

Hoover Rolled Up Majorities in 40 States With a Total of 444 Votes in the Electoral College—With Popular Vote Counted to a Total Exceeding 30,000,000 Hoover Leads Smith by About 5,000,000 Votes—Hoover Will Have Good Working Majority in the Senate—Gov. Smith Accepted His Defeat With the Declaration "The American People Have Rendered Their Decision; I am a Democrat and I Firmly Believe in the Rule of the Majority"—Expects Never to Run For Office Again.

(By D. Field Brittle, A. P. Staff Writer)

Closing tabulations of Tuesday's election have continued to reinforce the tremendous popular vote by which Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis have amassed majorities in states having 444 electoral units and left Alfred E. Smith and Joe T. Robinson leading in others having only 87.

The late returns have served only to emphasize the immensity of the republican sweep that embraced the entire west and most of the east and also extended into four traditionally democratic colonies of the south—Virginia, North Carolina, Florida and Texas.

With less than a scattered quarter of the nation's precincts remaining uncounted, the Hoover majorities have rolled up in 40 states. Smith held the lead in eight others, six of them in the south and two in the east, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Only Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana in Dixie remained definitely under the democratic banner.

When more than three quarters of the popular vote had been counted to a total exceeding 30,000,000, Hoover was pulling away from Smith with a margin of approximately 5,000,000. By the same mandate with which it selected a republican administration the electorate likewise increased that party's majorities in the two houses of congress and gave republicans a lead in most of the 34 gubernatorial contests.

Following a trend established early on election night, the Hoover advantage swung steadily along in every section of the country. It soon brought from Governor Smith a concession of his defeat, to be followed by his announcement that after a quarter of century in politics he expected never to run for office again.

Expressing his gratitude to those who supported his cause, the governor said the "American people have rendered their decision: I am a democrat and I firmly believe in the rule of the majority."

At his California home Mr. Hoover relaxed in the elation of victory and prepared an expression of his gratitude to the public.

The strangeness of the new political map painted at the polls is best reflected in the historical contrariness of the republican vote in the democracies of Texas, Florida, North Carolina and Virginia and the turn of republican Massachusetts and Rhode Island to the Smith standard. Texas was a nip and tuck battle at the outset but in the late returns there as in the three sister states Hoover forged to the front with a lead that ran into the thousands.

The two New England states also swung back and fourth in the early counting, but Rhode Island's final count gave Smith a margin under 2,000 while Massachusetts offered a much safer lead.

Elsewhere there was little doubt of the issue, the remainder of the east, the border states, the middle and northwest and the Pacific coast region turning in solid majorities for the republican ticket. For the most part Smith and Robinson fare well in the cities but were snowed under by republican precincts in the rural counties.

G. O. P. HAS SAFE WORKING MAJORITY IN CONGRESS

By Raymond Z. Henle
Associated Press Staff Writer

A congress with a healthy republican working majority has been elected for Herbert Hoover to deal with.

The party in power has increased its slender plurality in the senate and although the independent wing there is still intact, a number of its members will return to Washington with a record behind them of having solicited the election of Mr. Hoover.

While the gain in republican strength in the senate has given the party increased prestige there, the house has seen enough of its democratic members overturned so that the already substantial republican working majority promises to increase itself.

As compared with the present party alignment in the senate of 47 republicans, 46 democrats, 1 farmer laborite and two vacancies, the new voting strength on the basis of present returns stands 54 republicans, 40 democrats, one farmer laborite, and one vacancy. This arrangement may be shifted one way or the other when Tuesday's election results are known definitely.

The independent wing of the republican party in the senate has been unshaken, however. Borah of Idaho, Brookhart, of Iowa, and Nye and Frazier of North Dakota, who have voted with the democrats upon occasions, worked for the election of Mr. Hoover. On the ther hand, two republican members of the group—Norris of Nebraska, and Blaine of Wisconsin—worked against him in favor of Governor Smith.

In many respects the most interesting phase of the congressional elections showed itself in the balloting for house members. In addition to seeing the election of the first Negro to membership in the house in many years, the election disclosed a general willingness of the people to stand by their party, as far as the election of house members was concerned.

This was generally true throughout the country except along the border —especially in Kentucky—where the biggest number of democratic upsets followed in the wake of the Hoover vote piling. In Kentucky six republicans defeated democratic incumbents, and in Virginia at least two more safe congressmen were voted out of office.

A republican Negro, Oscar DePriest, was elected to the house to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Martin Madden, republican stalwart chairman of the appropriations committee. The returns left the race of Representative Beck, former solicitor general, and his democratic opponent in doubt with the possibility that an official count will be necessary to determine the victor.

Two republican candidates were elected to fill republican seats—Frederic C. Walcott to the seat of Senator McLean, retired, and Otis F. Glenn to the seat of Frank L. Smith who resigned after the senate oath was denied him.

On the democratic side the election returned to office Walsh of Massachusetts, Swanson of Virginia, Stephens of Mississippi, McKellar of Tennessee, King of Utah, Pittman of Nevada, Wheeler of Montana and Copeland of New York, but overturned Bayard of Delaware, Bruce of Maryland, Gerry of Rhode Island, Edwards of New Jersey and Kendrick of Wyoming.

Trammell of Florida and Ashurst of Arizona appeared to have a safe edge on their republican opponents. Dill of Washington was out in the lead but Neely of West Virginia was running slightly behind.

SIZE OF MAJORITY A SURPRISE TO HOOVER

(By W. B. Ragsdale, Associated Press Staff Writer)

HOOVER HOME, Stanford University Campus, Cal., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Looking upon republican victory as a vindication of great issues and a determination of the true road of progress, Herbert Hoover in his first message to the American people as president-elect today asked for co-operation and unity of spirit of all leaders of opinion and of action for the common service of the country.

"I can make no adequate expression of gratitude for the overwhelming confidence of our people who without regard to section or interest have selected me for president of the whole United States," he said.

"There has been a vindication of great issues and a determination of the true road of progress. The republican party has again been assessed with a great responsibility. In this great hour there can be for me no feeling of victory or exultation. Rather it imposes a sense of solemn responsibility of the future and of complete dependence upon divine guidance for the task which the greatest office in the world imposes.

"That task is to give the best within me to interpret the common sense and the ideals of the American people. I can only succeed in my part by the co-operation and unity of spirit of all leaders of opinion and if action for the common service of our country."

The president-elect made public his statement at the first conference with newspapermen he had held since his election had been assured. He told the correspondents that he had made no plans for the next few months and that his time would be occupied "chiefly with listening."

Informed that the republicans apparently had increased their majorities in both the senate and the house for the next congress, Hoover replied: "Yes, I was very glad to see it."

"Is the size of your electoral majority a surprise to you?" he was asked.

"It is," was the response.

Hoover made it known that while he has given no consideration to details of plans for his inauguration, he was determined that it will be one of as "extreme simplicity as any one we have had."

SMITH HAS FOUGHT HIS LAST POLITICAL BATTLE

By Walter Chamblin
(A. P. Staff Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Alfred E. Smith has declared his stormy and tempestuous political career at an end —just short of its highest goal. He announced today he had fought his last political battle and that from now on "as a high private in the ranks of American citizens" he would be a spectator from the sidelines.

"I certainly do not expect ever to run for public office again," he said. "I have had all I can stand of it. I have given a quarter of a century probably the best years of my life to it. I will never lose my interest in public affairs—that is a sure thing. But as far as running for office again is concerned—that's finished."

The governor made this statement at a press conference in his suite at the Biltmore hotel during the afternoon in reply to a question by one of the correspondents.

"You have no regrets of any kind over this campaign, have you?" he was asked.

"None at all," he answered. "I have nothing but pleasant memories of it."

"Do you want to say anything about the results, Governor?" his questioners pursued.

"A statement has been prepared which will be here in a few minutes," he answered.

It arrived shortly afterwards and read:

"The American people have rendered their decision. I am a democrat and I firmly believe in the rule of the majority.

"I have had a long career in elective public office. Yesterday was the 21st time that my name has appeared on the ballot in New York state. I am happy and content taking my place as a high private in the ranks of American citizens.

"I have a heart full of gratitude to all the people who worked so unstintingly to promote my candidacy and to all those who cast their ballots for me."

EXPECTATIONS OF FLYING SQUADRON FOUNDATION, INC.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Advancement in the enforcement of the 18th amendment and its supporting laws is expected of Herbert Hoover by his election to the presidency, a statement issued here today by the Flying Squadron Foundation, Inc., said.

Included in the statement were copies of congratulatory messages addressed to Senator William E. Borah, Senator Charles Curtis and Mabel Walker Willebrandt.

"The victory achieved by Herbert Hoover was not due alone to his position on law enforcement, or on the tariff, or to prosperity or to any other single cause," said the statement.

"The public gravitated to him because of his uprightness, the clearness of his thinking and the honesty of his leadership.

"If he is to hold his place in the high regard of the millions who supported him, he must succeed in his efforts for farm relief, law enforcement and for other causes for which he stands.

"The friends of constitutional government expect a decisive advance in the enforcement of the 18th amendment and its supporting legislation. Sad, indeed, will be his fate and that of his party, if failure attends his administration in this task."

BISHOP CANNON'S ADVICE TO CHAIRMAN RASKOB

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, tonight issued a statement in which he characterized the defeat of Governor Smith for the presidency as the "overwhelming repudiation of the proposal by the people of our country to place the national government in the hands of representatives of the wet sidewalks of our cities, aided and abetted by a selfish, so-called liberal element of high society life."

Bishop Cannon in his statement declared: "It is in order for Mr. Raskob to resign at once that the democratic party be reorganized free from the taint and pollution of wet or Tammany control."

"This insolent challenge of a sordid, unpatriotic Tammanyism and its self-indulgent allied forces," the statement said, "had met with a response which has shown to the world the genuine idealistic, truly progressive Americanism of our people. The responses in the southern states has assumed the proportions of a political revolution."

FUMES FROM GAS HEATER FATAL TO TWO WOMEN

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Poison fumes from a gas heater in their home at 355 Capitol avenue, this morning cost the lives of two women, and a three months old baby is critically ill at St. Francis' hospital.

The tragedy was discovered by Floyd H. Fuller, husband of Mrs. Evelyn Fuller, one of the victims.

Arriving home for lunch Mr. Fuller found his little daughter, Alice Evelyn, lying on a couch in the kitchen of the three room family home, crying. A small gas heater in the room was burning.

He went into the adjoining bedroom and there found his wife and her mother, Mrs. Alice Scribner, 45, who lives with the couple, lying across the bed, fully clothed.

"RELIGIOUS INTOLERANCE" BURNED IN EFFIGY

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Nov. 7.—(AP)—A group of students at the University of Virginia tonight burned "religious intolerance" in effigy.

The demonstration took place on the lawn of the university, in front of buildings planned by Thomas Jefferson, author of the Virginia Statute of Religious Freedom. The demonstration was carried out despite protests from other members of the student body.

The statutes of Jefferson on the university grounds, earlier in the day, were draped in black and one of them bore a sign, "To the Memory of Jeffersonian Democracy and Religious Freedom in Virginia—Died, November 6, 1928."

Wall St. Responds To Hoover Election

Avalanche of Buying Orders Lifted Scores of Stocks to $15.50 a Share.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP)—The biggest "bull" session in history today signalized the beginning of what will hereafter be known as the "Hoover market" in Wall street.

An avalanche of buying orders, almost as impressive as the landslide of votes which carried the republican national ticket to victory in yesterday's election, lifted scores of stocks $1, to $15.50 a share. Some of the gains were cut down and a few representative issues, such as General Motors and U. S. Steel common closed fractionally lower, but final quotations generally were around the highest of the day.

Total sales of 4,891,200 shares have been exceeded only by the record-breaking session of June 12 when 2,-192,500 shares changed hands in a declining market.

The market bounded upward from the opening gong. Curtiss Aeroplane, one of the first stocks to appear on the tape, opened with a gain of $10 a share. Then came blocks of 5,000 to 20,000 shares of a wide assortment of oil shares, 15 of which established new high records for the year during the day. Public utilities, which were brought into the political limelight by the development of the power question as a national issue, also changed hands in tremendous volume at rising prices.

Copper, mail order, merchandising, textile, farm implement, express and food shares joined the advance as buying orders poured on to the floor from all sections of the country. Wireless messages from ships at sea and from European capitals, where American securities were bid up before the New York market opened, contributed their quota of buying orders.

Relays of operators, working at top speed, tried ineffectually to keep the ticket tape abreast the market. Soon after the market opened, word came back from the floor that the ticker had fallen 7 minutes behind, then 17, 30 and 90 until in early afternoon the delay was extended to 45 minutes. A moderate slackening of the pace of trading reduced the delay to 12 minutes in the last hour but the unusual last minute rush of orders delayed the printing of the final quotation until 48 minutes after the final gong had sounded.

Arthur W. Cutten of Chicago, who is probably the largest individual factor in the stock market at the present time, today predicted at least two years more of good business as a result of the Hoover victory. There is still considerable divergence of opinion in Wall street as to how much of this senseless speculation has been discounted by current stock prices.

WOMAN GUILTY OF ASSAULT WITH A DEADLY WEAPON

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Ethel Swist, 44, of this city, ended what promised to be a long drawn out trial in criminal superior court today, by pleading guilty to an assault with a deadly weapon. She was sentenced to a year in jail by Judge Edwin C. Dickenson.

The woman had spent the greater part of the day listening to state's witnesses spin a web of strong evidence about her upon a charge of assaulting with intent to kill her former husband, Frank Swist, Stamford butcher. This crime carried as punishment a maximum sentence of thirty years in state's prison.

That Mrs. Swist has the mind of a 14-year old child, was the assertion made by Dr. Daniel P. Griffin, of this city, one of the two witnesses called by the defense after the state had rested its case.

During Dr. Griffin's testimony, a recess was ordered by Judge Dickenson and after lengthy conference with counsel for state and defense, it was agreed that she be allowed to enter a plea of guilty to the lesser charge against her.

MOOSEHEART OFFICIALS HELD FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

AURORA, Ill., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Harold Cook, assistant comptroller at Mooseheart, national home and school of the Loyal Order of Moose, was arrested today on a warrant charging him and Hugo Doebler, comptroller, with embezzling $25,000 of the institutions funds.

Unable to raise $50,000 bond set after he had waived preliminary hearing, Cook was lodged in the county jail at Geneva to await a hearing before the grand jury.

Doebler took a leave of absence October 15 to visit his wife in Germany. He is expected to return late this month.

E. M. Roselle, superintendent of Mooseheart, said today that Cook had confessed to his part in the embezzlement, explaining that he and Doebler had used the money to invest in manufacturing companies in which they were interested.

James J. Davis, secretary of Labor, is governor general of the Loyal Order of Moose.

11 POLICE OFFICIALS DISMISSED IN PHILA.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Three police inspectors and eight captains, declared by the special grand jury investigating bootlegging and police corruption to be "unfit to hold any public office," today were dismissed from the force by the civil service commission for conduct unbecoming officers.

Martin, and Richard Farley, captains, all of whom were named as cowilling to explain the source of their personal wealth to the grand jury.

PEOPLE FLEEING FROM MT. ETNA LAVA FLOW

CATANIA, Sicily, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Witnesses of the molten torrents flowing out of Mount Etna said the spectacle as could be compared only with devastating offenses of the World war.

Maintaining a rate of more than 100 yards an hour the lava is consuming the most fertile and most intensively cultivated land in Sicily.

People continue to flee the advancing fire with household belongings thrown on any makeshift vehicle and with barnyard animals straggling along.

France Continues Without A Cabinet

President Doumergue Has Conferred With a Dozen Political Leaders.

PARIS, Nov. 7.—(AP)—The most serious cabinet crisis in the history of the third republic kept President Doumergue busy today and will keep him busy tomorrow, and possibly until next week before he can send for somebody to form a new government.

The expectation is that the president will appeal to the retiring premier, M. Poincare, to make another effort to clear the political situation. Poincare's acceptance still is regarded as doubtful.

M. Doumergue conferred with a dozen political leaders today, and most of them said there was nobody able to cope with the situation but M. Poincare. Poincare, however, always has refused to form a cabinet without the support of the radicals, and the radicals are manoeuvering to reorganize the old bloc of the left with the socialists and form a government of their own.

President Doumergue, it is said on good authority, is trying to work out a combination whereby the radicals will be obliged to participate in the government before he calls on M. Poincare, thus saving the premier from the humiliation of failure.

In case Poincare refuses absolutely, two hypotheses are entertained. The first is a transition cabinet, with a man like M. Clementel at its head for the purpose of voting the budget and gaining time for political passions to subside. The second is to call on the radicals to show their hand and demonstrate that they are capable of forming a workable ministry. A bill calling for the ratification by parliament of the Caillaux-Churchill agreement for payment of the war debt of France to England was distributed to deputies in the chamber this evening. There was no hint whether Poincare, who drew up the document before the fall of his cabinet, intended to force ratification through by making it a question of confidence.

FUNERAL OF GAMBLER ARNOLD ROTHSTEIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Arnold Rothstein was buried today and as the sods thumped down on the bronze casket in which the millionaire gambler lay the secret of who had killed him was buried too.

During brief Orthodox Jewish funeral services at a little chapel the body lay wrapped in a prayer shawl and with a white skull cap on the head.

The high-stake gamblers who had employed Rothstein did not attend the funeral, but if they had and had peered through the heavy glass across the open upper half of the coffin they would have seen a face little changed by death from the still visage that never quivered in a single muscle at the gamble tables.

Rothstein was shot by a cheat who had won with marked cards. Rothstein himself was reputed never to have cheated at cards, and when he discovered that $200,000 he dropped in a game of high spade had been won from him dishonestly he refused to pay.

There were perhaps 200 persons in the chapel, and many of those were women, some of the absentees sent flowers, however, and these were heaped about the casket that was reputed to have cost $5,000. One floral offering was from George White, producer of the "Scandals," who by Broadway gossip was at one time staked by Rothstein.

SENATOR ROBINSON HAS GONE ON HUNTING TRIP

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 7.—(AP)—With the election behind him and the fatigue of one of the most arduous national campaigns ever made still upon him, Senator Joe T. Robinson, democratic vice presidential candidate, quietly slipped away with a party of friends today for a hunting trip of several days in southeast Arkansas To insure undisturbed rest, his exact destination was not announced.

One of Robinson's first acts today, his only public expression since the election, was the sending of telegrams congratulating President-elect Herbert Hoover and Vice President-elect Charles Curtis, the latter his friend and senatorial colleague of long standing, on their decisive victories.

To Mr. Hoover he sent the following message: "Your victory is decisive. Please receive my congratulations and best wishes," and to Senator Curtis: "Accept my cordial greetings and congratulations," signed both "Joe T. Robinson."

WISCONSIN BACK IN THE REPUBLICAN FOLD

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Wisconsin was back in the republican fold today. Four years ago the Badgers broke from the ranks of the old guard to take a lone stand for a native son—Fighting Bob Lafollette. Yesterday they gave Herbert Hoover a 100,000 majority over Governor Alfred E. Smith—the greatest popular vote ever accorded a presidential candidate by the state.

And riding high on the crest of the Hoover wave, virtually all other candidates on the republican ticket were swept into office. Walter J. Hohler, gubernatorial candidate, polled 480,066 votes against 345,837 cast for Albert G. Schmedeman, his democratic candidate, with only a few precincts still to report.

All minor state officers were re-elected.

HAS JOB FOR AL SMITH IF AL SMITH WANTS IT

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith who announced today he would never again run for public office, following his defeat for the presidency yesterday by Herbert Hoover, still has a job if he wants it.

George F. Getz, Chicago business man who employed Gov. Smith in 1921 as an official of the United States Trucking corporation after the governor had been defeated for chief executive of New York, said he had "a job for Al Smith if Al Smith wants it."

"Just say that Al Smith can have a job as good as the one he had with me any time," said Getz. "I know of no one I would rather work with. I am only a director of the trucking company now but if Al is out of politics, he certainly will find something for him to do to make a living."

BIRTHPLACE OF DEMOCRACY NOW A REPUBLICAN STATE

Virginia, the Home of Thomas Jefferson, Yesterday Spoke for Few Days as a Republican State—Hoover Now Leads Smith by More Than 15,000 With Plurality Mounting Slowly as Returns Come From the Mountain Precincts —Two Republicans Were Elected to the House of Representatives.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Virginia, the home of Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the democratic party, and for the past half-century one of the firmest supporters of that party of the "solid south" states, today spent its first day as a republican state by watching republican congressional candidates and to the victory registered by Herbert Hoover.

The Hoover vote mounted slowly as returns came from the mountain precincts in the southwestern section of the state and his lead over Governor Smith stood more than 20,000 with returns from 1,548 out of 1,565 precincts. The vote was Hoover, 194,085; Smith, 173,027. There was every indication that the unprecedently large total vote of 300,000 would be recorded in the old dominion state and that Smith might receive as many votes as John W. Davis in 1924, 139,-797.

James A. Garber, republican, became the second of his party to win a seat in the state's delegation in the house today when Representative Thomas H. Harrison, democrat, of the seventh district, conceded the election. Complete returns for the district, gave Garber a lead of 500 votes in 29,506 cast.

Menalcus Lankford, republican, defeated J. T. Deal, democrat incumbent by a large majority on complete returns of the second district.

Two other republican congressional candidates appeared to have a good chance, while a fourth conceded defeat in the fifth district to Congressman Joseph Whitehead, who held a commanding lead of 2,000 votes with the district reported almost complete. Joseph C. Shaffer, republican, had 20,730 votes to 19,609 for William H. Roue, democrat in the three-fourths complete ninth district and M. J. Putnam, republican, was leading Henry St. George Tucker, democratic incumbent in the two-thirds complete tenth, 9,722 to 7,478.

HOOVER GREETS STUDENTS OF STANFORD UNIVERSITY

HOOVER HOME, STANFORD UNIVERSITY CAMPUS, Cal., Nov. 8.—(AP)—The first public utterance of President-elect Herbert Hoover was a greeting of appreciation to the students of Stanford university who gathered around his home to celebrate his election.

"I thank you for coming up here tonight and giving us this greeting," he said from the terrace of his home. "I do appreciate it from the bottom of my heart. I thank you."

TEXAS LIKELY REPUBLICAN FOR FIRST TIME IN HISTORY

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Rolling up an ever-increasing majority, Herbert Hoover late today had a 17,660 vote lead over Governor Alfred E. Smith in Texas and the slow returns indicated the lone star state might be carried into the republican column for the first time in history.

Seemingly republican in its presidential choice, the state continued overwhelmingly democratic on other offices, assuring the re-election of Governor Dan Moody by a massive majority over his republican opponent, W. H. Holmes, electing Tom Connally as United States senator over T. M. Kennerly, and choosing 17 democratic representatives in the 18 districts involved.

When 248 of the 253 counties had reported, 92 of them complete, Hoover's lead jumped to 17,660 his vote totaling 295,338 to 277,993 for Governor Smith.

SMITH HAS PLURALITY OF 21,000 IN THE BAY STATE

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Alfred E. Smith's plurality over Herbert Hoover in Massachusetts tonight stood at 21,000 with only a few precincts missing from the state's total of 1,605.

Smith's total vote was 781,744. That of Hoover was 760,671. The democratic nominee was given a big majority over Hoover in the city of Boston, polling 192,257 votes against 94,527 for Hoover with the city count complete. Smith also ran ahead of Hoover in most of the cities of the state, winning the textile centers and a number of other industrial towns. Hoover received slight pluralities in Worcester and Springfield.

Senator David I. Walsh, democrat, swept to victory over B. Loring Young with a plurality of 122,000. Walsh polled 803,621 votes, 22,000 ahead of Smith.

Lieut-Gov. Frank G. Allen, republican, won a close victory over General Charles H. Cole with a vote of 753,-717 to 735,507. A lead in Boston of 88,000 was not sufficient to overcome the vote rolled up by Allen who carried a number of cities in which Smith and Walsh led.

HOOVER HAD PLURALITY OF 940,000 IN PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Although Herbert Hoover won Pennsylvania in yesterday's election by about 940,000 plurality, Governor Smith of New York set up a new high record in Pennsylvania politics by polling more than a million democratic votes. The previous high democratic total was achieved in 1916 by Woodrow Wilson with a vote of 521,784.

SMALL TOWNS GAVE G. O. P. VICTORY IN CONNECTICUT

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 7.—(AP)—The victory of the republican national and state tickets in Connecticut, was a victory of small towns over big cities. New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Norwich and Waterbury, chief cities of the state, gave Gov. Smith a plurality of better than 24,000. New Britain, the next largest city cut the plurality to 23,000 and the smaller communities piled up the republican votes which gave Mr. Hoover his 44,041 plurality.

The republican victory in Connecticut sends to the United States senate, Frederic C. Walcott, president of the 1927 state senate, and an intimate friend and co-worker of Mr. Hoover; enters Gov. John H. Trumbull upon his third term; and sends John Q. Tilson, floor leader of the house, back to Washington for another two years.

VERY FEW UPSETS IN ELECTION OF GOVERNORS

(By The Associated Press)

Notwithstanding the Hoover sweep on Tuesday, there was a surprising small number of upsets in the gubernatorial races, and figures compiled on the basis of two-thirds of the vote show that democratic gubernatorial candidates generally won out where they were expected to win, and that republican candidates did likewise.

Thirty-four state chief executives were chosen, a majority of whom were republicans. Nevertheless, in such states as Utah and Montana, the democrats were successful, while in New Jersey and Arizona, the republicans gained control of the governorship, in Arizona unseating on the basis of latest returns, the veteran George W. P. Hunt. The outcome was a republican gain of three governors —in Arizona, New Jersey and Ohio.

On the basis of the returns incomplete in many cases, these candidates were successful, and in only one or two instances are there enough votes outstanding to change the result.

HOOVER VICTORY IN FLORIDA ALMOST CERTAIN

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 7.—(AP)—It appeared certain tonight that Florida has given her six electoral votes to the republican party.

People had been talking about that possibility for years, ever since the state began to receive an influx of northern settlers, but the help of democrats was required to put it over.

Herbert Hoover took the lead when the counting of yesterday's election returns began. He has held it with steadily increasing majorities. Democratic headquarters today conceded his victory when 867 precincts out of 1,263 in the state gave the republican nominee a vote of 103,239 compared with 76,747 for Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

The majority of the democrats who preferred Hoover appeared, however, to have voted only for the national republican ticket, for the list of democratic nominees for congressional and state officers were given small majorities on the face of the incomplete returns.

ELECTION RETURNS FROM SOME BIG CITIES

(By The Associated Press)

If the balloting of the biggest cities may be accepted as indicative, there was no predominently "urban" vote cast for either candidate in Tuesday's election.

A canvas of the latest available returns from the fourteen centers with largest population showed eight going for Hoover and six for Smith. Numerically, however, Hoover, and to no small extent because the result in his home town, the New Yorker took the big city race by 45,000.

The big city vote (some unofficially complete) follows:

| | Smith | Hoover |
|---|---|---|
| New York | 1,153,590 | 704,857 |
| Chicago | 624,102 | 648,777 |
| Philadelphia | 269,957 | 409,962 |
| Detroit | 157,729 | 264,993 |
| Cleveland | 113,541 | 100,088 |
| St. Louis | 176,036 | 161,622 |
| Boston | 192,257 | 94,527 |
| Baltimore | 120,402 | 136,129 |
| Pittsburgh | 83,165 | 92,208 |
| Los Angeles | 149,379 | 271,196 |
| Buffalo | 102,315 | 103,998 |
| San Francisco | 95,929 | 93,285 |
| Newark | 69,701 | 59,516 |
| Cincinnati | 106,566 | 139,922 |
| Totals | 3,420,769 | 3,475,079 |

SOME DEM. STATE TICKET ELECTED IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Leaders of the empire state democracy found some small consolation today when it became evident that they had elected their candidate for governor, U. S. senator, lieutenant governor, and comptroller, although Governor Alfred E. Smith, presidential nominee of the party lost the state's 45 electoral votes to Herbert Hoover by approximately 100,000 votes.

With only 100 up-state election districts unreported, the presidential vote was: Hoover, 2,162,594; Smith, 2,-072,818; Hoover's actual plurality on returns at hand, 89,776. It was expected that the returns from the missing districts would add between 11,000 and 12,000 to the Hoover margin of safety.

For governor, Franklin D. Roosevelt, democrat, had polled 2,095,523 votes to 2,054,347 given to Albert Ottinger, republican, with 150 up-state and two New York city districts unreported. The Roosevelt actual plurality of 41,175 was expected to be cut to slightly less than 30,000 when all returns were in.

Royal S. Copeland, democrat, seeking re-election to the United States senate, had received 2,094,296 votes as compared with 1,909,803 for Alanson B. Houghton, republican, with three New York city and 428 up-state districts unreported. The missing districts, located in republican territory, were expected to reduce Copeland's actual plurality of 94,495 by about 50,-000 votes.

Herbert H. Lehman, democrat, had a safe lead over Charles C. Lockwood, republican, in the race for lieutenant governor, and Morris F. Tremaine, democrat, was re-elected comptroller, over Harry B. Crowley, republican.

The only victorious republican on the ticket of state officers was Hampton Ward, candidate for attorney general, who outdistanced District Attorney Albert Conway of Brooklyn, his democratic rival.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 7—Coach Thomas A. Gallagher of the Windham high school football squad announced today that plans were being prepared for a Home Field day in which the receipts of the Windham-South Manchester high game which will be played at Recreation park and is expected to be the final game of the season for Windham will be devoted to the development of Hayden Field, purchased recently by the town for a school athletic plant. Committees are to be appointed from the student body to take charge of the ticket sales and the events of the day. The Manchester-Windham game is scheduled for Saturday afternoon, November 17. This final game of the season is also expected to be the last game to be played by the school team at Recreation park as the scene of the seasons' conflicts will be shifted next year to the new town field. Recreation park is owned and maintained by the American Thread company and deep appreciation has been expressed for the generosity of the company in allowing the use of the field to the entire populace.

With the expected return this week of a certificate of incorporation from the secretary of state, the call for the second installment payment on subscriptions to the new metal screen industry went out this evening. The organization of the corporation and election of directors, including two Willimantic subscribers, will take place seven days after the return of the certificate.

P. S. Hills, local broker, displayed today a letter under date of October 31, in which Attorney William Clinton Mullendore of Los Angeles, Calif., for three years confidential secretary to Herbert Hoover, made an unusually close forecast of Tuesday's election. Belief was also expressed by the writer that Hoover would carry Texas, North Carolina and possibly Florida.

The case of Nick Vitiaz of Canterbury vs. John F. McAllister of Hampden, Mass., an action for the recovery of a note, was heard at a brief session of the Windham county superior court held here this forenoon with Judge Edward M. Yeomans on the bench. Vitiaz alleged that a note for $373.02, payable on demand was given him by the defendant on June 27, 1928, on which no payments have been made. He also asked for wages at $25 a week for seven weeks, amounting to $175, for work on the defendant's farm in Canterbury. McAllister, although notified to appear was not present in court and Judge Yeomans renddered judgment for Vitiaz to recover $557.02. His plan is now under consideration by the new industries committee and will later be taken up at a full membership meeting.

This town swiftly settled to normalcy today after the tension of the campaign and Tuesday's elections. It was noted that there appeared an unexpected lack of post-election talk, this receiving somewhat of an explanation by the opinion that victory and defeat alike were so decisive as to discourage further comment. Many took the opportunity, however, of congratulating local democrats who were swept into office these including the two representatives, Frank M. Lincoln and Joseph Lefebvre and Valentine J. Murphy, elected judge of probate. Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton, candidate for lieutenant-governor on the democratic state ticket was also highly complimented on the splendid majority of 553 accorded him by Windham.

TONIGHT'S MEETING ON ELECTRIC RATES

This is the night of the special city meeting for the purpose of discussing the new schedule of electric light rates against which so much objection has been raised. This schedule is an experiment that is being tried out on Norwich users of electric current by cities and power. It is because it has worked an injustice upon many consumers that a demand has been made for this hearing. Efforts on the part of Mayor Robbins to get the gas and electrical commissioners to hold the hearing were fruitless. The result is that he has called the special city meeting.

This is a matter in which the whole community is interested. It is interested because it owns the lighting plant and because the rates adopted and the method employed by its servants are working a decided injustice upon many owners of this municipal plant. The commission possesses broad powers but there is an opportunity for the owners to express themselves concerning the manner in which their affairs are being conducted through such a meeting.

It is time that the full facts were brought out in regard to the gas and electrical department. It is time that the grievances of the citizens were aired. It is time to set up a comparison of methods employed here with those in use in other cities.

The city should be a large and representative gathering of the citizens at tonight's meeting. Norwich has had plenty to complain of in its city owned lighting plant in the past but when the rates are put into effect that boost the bills of the small consumers while trying to make a bid for increased consumption by lowering the rates to the large consumers, or to the well to do, it is not surprising that it raised a howl of protest. Likewise the disclosure of error in the commercial rates and the declaration that changes are to be effective there indicates that the whole structure of the new rate schedule is honeycombed with the same trouble.

There is no question but what Norwich needed lower electric rates. It has needed them for a long time, but it is natural that it should rebel at having such increase and enjoinment rammed down its throat. New rates should be justified to all consumers and none should be more insistent upon that than the commissioners themselves. When there is provided the consumers an opportunity to a strenuous remonstrance, there are many facts expected to be brought to light.

SOLID SOUTH BROKEN

Breaking the solid south has long been a political ambition. There have been times when it has been talked but the nearest approach that was ever made to it was the swinging of the so-called border states and the winning of Tennessee by the republicans.

This year the assault has been stronger than ever and there can be no question but what the solid south has been gotten away from its long established support of the democratic party. Not only has Tennessee swung into the republican column again but with it has gone Virginia, North Carolina, Florida and Texas. That is an upheaval of change. It makes new political history and creates the impression that all things are possible even in politics.

That these states have gone republican creates probably as much surprise in republican circles as in democratic. There have been thoughts of its possibility but serious doubt has been entertained that it could be accomplished because of the heavy democratic majority and the difficulty involved in overturning it. The result, however, bears out the predictions which have been persistently made throughout the campaign.

The solid south is smashed, however, through the action of the democrats of those states. They have displayed their resentment of the action of the Houston convention and they have only done what it was declared they would do in the event of the ... nomination. That attitude was ... when he overstepped the ... platform in regard to prohibition. The south has thus repudiated the Houston convention in a manner unprecedented before witnessed and in a most massive manner. The solid south has grown restless. It could never be accomplished ... that it will not be cemented again but in politics as elsewhere precedents are dangerous things.

OVER LAND OR SEA

Perhaps the day will come when it will make no difference whether flying is undertaken in good or bad weather. Such can hardly be said to be the case today, although it is possible to point to many instances where flights have been completed in spite of exceedingly bad weather and where machines are witnessed in flight even though there are low visibility and adverse conditions.

The crashing of the Yankee Doodle plane against the walls of a canyon in Arizona, killing the pilot and the owner-passenger occurred during bad weather. It might easily have been prevented if reversible flying weather had been awaited. Spurred on by the fact that bad conditions had been successfully faced before there was no hesitation in taking off for the flight across the country which was expected to reduce the record. However successful they may have been on their westward flight they encountered conditions which offset their skill. There was nothing about their flight that required setting out at a certain time regardless of what the weather was. They rather threw caution to one side in their attempt to make a new record. They didn't seek the most favorable conditions nor did they give as much consideration to their protection as they might have. They undertook a risk that was apparently underestimated and in so doing lost their lives.

Nevertheless it is believed that cross country flying for the purpose of testing the stability of the machine and the skill of the fliers is preferable to transoceanic flying. There would have been no canyon wall for them to strike in midocean but had any accident occurred on such a flight sufficient to result in a fatality nothing would probably ever have been heard from them. They would have been enwulfed even as many aviators already have been. There may not be much satisfaction in death on land over that at sea but it is possible to learn where it happened and therefore to get an idea of about what happened. That isn't possible with those who are lost at sea. At the same time much might happen in flying cross country where landings might be made but which would be denied in ocean flights.

A REPUBLICAN CONGRESS

In connection with the crushing and unprecedented victory which Mr. Hoover gained in Tuesday's election it cannot be overlooked that the voters were impressed with the importance of giving him a senate and house of representatives that would give constructive support to the carrying out of his policies. This was what was greatly needed and it was a duty that was well performed.

In the congress that will be organized next year there will be a majority of regular republicans, something which has not prevailed for some time, and that method of eliminating the insurgent obstructions should bear excellent results. The sentiment of the people in this respect, through the elimination of democratic senators in normally republican states was clearly and positively expressed.

This was an object for which the republican campaign managers were working. The impediment to an administration through defection by those who have gained their election through carrying the party banner only to throw it aside as soon as the votes have been counted has been too frequently demonstrated. Some of these have even undertaken to obstruct the election of a republican president. Time and again they have used similar tactics in preventing or trying to prevent the enactment of important legislation to which their party, or the administration to which they should be loyal, had been committed.

The filling of six seats by republicans where democrats had been sitting should do much to relieve this situation, even though it was not possible to actually reduce the insurgent republican members. When the republican majority is boosted to the point that they cannot change the situation by voting with the democrats they are removed from their position of advantage.

THE DIGEST'S POLL

Throughout the campaign which has just ended no small amount of interest has been displayed in the poll that was taken by the Literary Digest. This was an elaborate and expensive undertaking. It reached throughout the country on a bigger scale than ever.

Straw votes are accepted as such. They may mean something or they may mean nothing. It all depends. Such a feeling has been displayed toward the Digest's poll but the accuracy with which it foretold the outcome of the 1924 election gave it a prestige.

Without a question it indicated the tendency this year. There was surprise and a disposition to discredit it when it concluded its count by giving only six states to Mr. Smith and yet as the returns have come in and the electoral votes have been tabulated it doesn't appear to have been so far out of the way. Instead of six states for Mr. Smith there appear to be eight. The two additional being Massachusetts and Rhode Island states in which the outcome was decidedly close but democratic although the poll indicated they would be republican. Rhode Island nevertheless did go republican to the extent of replacing its democratic United States senator with a republican.

Probably the indication that the solid south would be broken as shown by the poll was regarded as least trustworthy and yet that was apparently representative of sentiment in these states. The 1928 poll must be given credit for its close indication of the final result. The sweep has been practically as extensive as it indicated. It has reason to feel proud of its forecast.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If the campaign had lasted a little longer Mr. Hoover might have carried the whole 48 states.

The man on the corner says: Probably you thought the election would go as it did but didn't dare to bet.

Perhaps one of the surprising features is the willingness to accept the expression of the voters by Chairman Raskob.

The next important subject is the special city meeting for consideration of the new electric rates. Don't miss it tonight.

TONGUE-TIED

Both of them were tongue-tied. Jessica was tortured by shyness and knew it, and Lawton Davis was incased in an armor of self-consciousness. He longed to come out and tell her how much he admired her, but was afraid to.

Still, every noon when Jessica emerged from the big office building for luncheon, Lawton Davis surprisingly enough, would be waiting for her, and, oh, so astonished and pleased to run into her. And it always proved so, and sometimes when it didn't, she would be there at 5 o'clock and meet on a taxi just to see that she reached home safely. If he told the taxi driver to take a turn through Lincoln park on the way it was needless business. And if Jessica's mother inquired why she was so late for dinner, what decisive told her was nobody's business either.

Sometimes Jessica caught herself wishing rather wistfully that she did have something substantial to tell, such as "Mother! I'm engaged to the most wonderful man in all the world! The handsomest, the kindest, the most clever. But it didn't happen.

Every morning while she worked she wondered whether he would be there at noon, and all afternoon, whether it would be possible that he would be there at 5. Sometimes he called in the evening and took her to the theatre or a dance. As for Lawton, he did not think. He knew that he could not live through a day when he did not see Jessica, but it did not seem possible that she ever could be as entranced by him as he was by her. He could be direct enough in business and certain of himself, but when he saw Jessica walking tall and slim he wanted to shout himself out on the ground like a mat and let her trample.

Then one day three times during dinner Jessica's name was mentioned by the taxi drivers. Once through the open window a silence would fall and they would stare straight ahead at the taxi drivers' backs, and Jessica would be scared to death at her heart's thumping, while her heart sang that now it was to happen! And Lawton's throat would get tighter and tighter till he felt that he was about to strangle, but he could neither move nor speak. He didn't know what he wanted to speak anyhow. It was because he was so envisioned in shyness that they went on being thoroughly miserable, deliriously happy—down in the depths and up on the heights!

Jessica read the item in the society column one morning on her way downtown. It said that Mr. and Mrs. Trevor Bleckman announced the engagement of their daughter, Anne, to Mr. Lawton David, only son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lawton Davis. Mr. Davis was a Harvard man and the wedding was set for next month.

When you should by good rights die on the spot and don't it arouses a bitter sort of cynicism. It shows you that nothing much matters in this wretched old world anyhow, and it is amusing to watch your mind and muscles functioning when you yourself are really not there at all. Mechanical Jessica had hands like ice, red spots on her cheekbones and queer wails and circles and flushes in her head.

All along, she admitted cruelly to herself, she had been assuming that he liked her, was, loved her. Bitterly she insisted that she had had a right so to think, so even though he had not put it into words! Just dreaming happily, as one—well, what was she going to say to him? How do you congratulate, on his approaching marriage to another girl, the man you are in love with? And how do it so he will never, never have a suspicion?

She went down the back freight elevator at noon, drank three cups of coffee, sank back the same way. When she came out at 5 o'clock she knew how Marie Antoinette felt on her way to the execution. Only she was solid marble from head to foot—and here was Lawton Davis waiting for her!

"Jessica," he said in alarm, "you look ghostly! You must be ill! Here, quick!" In the traffic jam they were as alone as in the Sahara. He was so terrified at her strangeness that he put an arm about her.

"Why—but what has happened?" he insisted. "Tell me!" She knew precisely what she had to say to him, with just the casual friendly tone, the pleasant words, woman-of-the-world air, and all that. She got out her vanity case and tried to smile. Instead, she found herself sobbing deep sobs against Lawton's tweed coat and he found two of his arms around her and wished he had several more. And he found his tongue. All the delightful words that lovers use poured from Lawton Davis' lips, and no girl could doubt that he meant them. From her nose clouds of happiness issued smoke at last.

"That girl the paper said you were engaged to?" she mentioned. Not that it mattered now. Let any girl try to take Lawton away from her! He gave a whoop of comprehension and drew her closer.

"Darwin," he told her. "Same name. Next block. What do we care? Now tell me again that this really is happening!"—Exchange.

YOUR HEALTH

Sex Differences in Constipation—How to Deal With Them

By Anthony Bassler, M. D., New York

A popular writer has said "Woman, woman, thy constipated sex." But man is just as much so. The great difference is that in woman it is low in the colon, while in man it is higher. In both, the effects on health are well being are the same, and there run all the way from none at all to quite considerable, according to the individual.

No physician has ever wisely concluded as to what normality in bowel movements is. The majority have standardized this on one movement a day. Some, with certain institutions, have claimed there should be three each day—one for each meal. The truth is that one sees persons in whom a movement two or three times a week is sufficient and normal, others in whom daily movements are necessary and still others in which they must be more frequent. If health is being maintained, if the movements are soft (or the last one is), and if there is a feeling of satisfaction and of emptying after movements, it is normal whatever the frequency.

The American public takes too much medicine for constipation. Excepting in most unusual instances, cascara, rhubarb, mineral oil and perhaps an occasional dose of phenolphthalein or a small dose of calomel, is the limit of medication that should be employed. To go beyond these and take the more drastic substances in a continued way is a surprising crime. It always causes a crippling of the colon that is hard to cure.

There are "a" varieties of constipation, as there are of headache. To cure them, the cause must be determined and treated logically. In the absence of the exactly known cause, one should experiment with simple things, preferably those of a food character. An abundance of fruit, fresh vegetables, salads and "roughage" is most helpful. Bran and psyllium seeds are easily taken "roughage." If the bowel is spastic, "roughage" in the diet intensifies the constipation, and makes matters worse. Agar-agar works well with the young and old, but only moderately well with those in middle life. An abundance of lactose sugar, taken several times in the day on an empty stomach, have proved with many a good antacid, nutriment and stimulator for bowel and kidneys. Excepting in thin people, one or more glasses of tap water are sometimes laxative. Stewed prunes, an old German advice for constipation, are still worth while. When cooked with dried figs and a few senna pods, usually they answer effectively. The mineral oils unquestionably sold for the purpose are not so effective as the soft paraffins (petrolatum jelly, vaseline). The latter can be heated slightly if desired to be drunk as a fluid.

The greatest causes of constipation are ignorance, false modesty, laziness, over-eating or under-eating, and lack of exercise. By ignorance is meant not observing or judging the number of movements one's body should have to keep healthy. By false modesty is meant not responding as soon as possible to the call when the sensation for bowel elimination occurs. By laziness is meant just what the word implies. Over and under-eating are controllable by will power, while lack of exercise can be made up by golf, tennis, walking, gymnastics or calisthenics nights and mornings.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Information Wanted

Mr. Editor: I am writing to ask if you can tell me if the gas and electric commissioners have awarded the prizes for the anonymous letters which they advertised for in the papers some days since. I would also like to know whether these prizes were donated by the commissioners themselves or if it is some of the city's money which is to be given away to people writing anonymous letters. It is almost unbelievable that the highly respected citizens on our board of gas and electric commissioners would permit anything of this kind but I know that what appears in your paper in paid space is always so.

I have watched the papers carefully but have not been able to ascertain who are the judges in the contest and possibly the whole question will be answered Thursday night at the city meeting.

I hope there will be answers to other matters than the one mentioned above and I am confident that the commissioners will have an answer in the form of a vote showing that the people still have something to say on the matter of gas and electric rates.

PRIZE WINNER.

Norwich, Nov. 7, 1928.

Ridiculous and Unjust Rates

Mr. Editor: I, for one, appreciate the opportunity that the mayor is giving the citizens to be heard on the question of the ridiculous and unjust rates recently put into effect by the gas and electric department.

When one views the extravagances that has been indulged in by the department it seems high time that something be done. Let us all meet together Thursday night, and show our feeling as to the methods in which the gas and electric department has been wasting public money belonging to the citizens who, the department admits, are the true owners of the plant.

A Dissatisfied Customer and Consumer.

Norwich, Nov. 7, 1928.

Two Thirds Increase of Electric Rates

Mr. Editor: I am a widow living in a cottage of five rooms, one room of which is a storage room, with no light fixtures, another room has no heat in winter and is never used or lighted although fixtures are installed. Of the other three rooms—a living room, a kitchen and one bedroom, I can only use one room at a time and never heat but that one in winter.

Now, without any speculation on the part of the gas and electric commissioners, I am charged nearly two-thirds more than I paid before an increase. I have never used the maximum allowed. Food and necessarily economical myself, I must help pay for the big houses which use twice more.

ONE OF THE VICTIMS.

Norwich, Nov. 7, 1928.

Explanation Due Citizens

Mr. Editor: I wonder if the gas and electrical department will be on hand Thursday night to explain how it is the same of the well able to pay pretended citizen can get expensive gas burning boilers installed in their homes without charge, and after a period of a year, simply tell the department to take them out and pay only for the fuel used during that period.

Regardless of how much money the department may make, this waste is bound to absorb a substantial amount of the gain that rightfully belongs to the citizens that own the plant.

I wonder if they will tell us how it is that the courses of Norwich as a whole have been raised from 10 to 30 times the usual amount paid, under the new rates, and how they justify such a raise.

I, for one, think that all the citizens should be at the meeting Thursday night, and ask for an explanation

NIGHT FOR CITIZENS TO DISCUSS ELECTRIC RATES

This is the night (Thursday) for the special city meeting called by Mayor Lee Roy Robbins in order that the citizens of Norwich may talk over the matter of the conduct of the gas and electric department against which many of the citizens have been expressing resentment because of the revised charges for electricity which have been put into effect.

There was some speculation among citizens Wednesday night as to whether members of the board of gas and electric commissioners would attend the meeting or whether they would dodge the presence that some in the audience will be inclined to put the commissioners and officials of the department through a cross examination. The commissioners have made no public statement indicating whether they intended to attend the meeting which the mayor has called.

STATE REGENT GUEST OF FAITH TRUMBULL CHAPTER

Miss Katherine A. Nettleton of Derby, state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was the guest here Wednesday at a luncheon given in her honor by Faith Trumbull chapter, preceding the regular meeting at 3 o'clock in the afternoon at the Wauregan hotel. Miss Emeline A. Street, of New Haven, state vice regent who had been expected to accompany Miss Nettleton, was prevented from coming because of the serious illness of a relative.

Mrs. W. H. Dawley, regent of the chapter, presided at the meeting which opened in the usual form with the singing of America, repetition of the Lord's prayer and salute to the flag. Reports of the officers were given, including that from the treasurer which showed that state dues for all members have been paid, also the last quota for the Connecticut college scholarship, and the 25 cents per member for the manual for immigrants, the council of defense work and Ellis Island work.

Mrs. W. Tyler Browne reported for the museum committee the gift of an 1830 musket which has been added to the display there.

For patriotic education, Mrs. Frank I. Royce, chairman, spoke of a meeting of the chapter chairmen of the state at the home of the state chairman, Mrs. Wickham. As a result of this meeting, at least one state scholarship for the Blueridge school for southern mountaineers will be given. Books also would be much appreciated. The committee is to pack a box of Christmas things for the pupils and teachers of Hindman school in Kentucky for which members are asked to send suitable gifts. She also said that the committee was getting the percentage of the membership voting this year.

The membership committee reported that two applications for membership had been accepted by the board of management.

For the magazine committee Mrs. Roy D. Judd, chairman, said that a drive for new subscribers would be made soon. She said that prizes have been offered for the greatest number of subscriptions up to March first. In the group to which Faith Trumbull belongs the prize is $75.

For the ways and means committee, Mrs. A. J. Singy, chairman, asked members to remember the food sale, and to help as much as possible to make it a success. She spoke of the possibility of having, late in January a talk by Miss Pardee on "Shopping Round the World," illustrated by many articles from many places.

The treasurer, Mrs. A. S. Comstock, presented the chapter budget for the coming year which was accepted.

The revision of the chapter by-laws, read and discussed at the October meeting, was accepted.

The programme part of the afternoon was opened by two well rendered soprano solos by Miss Frances Kslasek, who sang in very pleasing voice. Her selections were Song of My Heart (Cuca) and A Rose Rhyme (Salter.) The piano accompaniments were by Mrs. Harry Stebbins.

Miss Nettleton then addressed the meeting in an interesting way, first giving a summary of the work which is the particular charge of Miss Street as state chairman on Americanism and the manual. There has been a tremendous amount of work done along these lines, she said, and she commended the work of the training school at Springfield, where those of foreign parentage are instructed for work among people of their own nationalities. She spoke of the interest which the state chapter feels in the night school work, for which pins are offered as attendance prizes, and she urged that local chapters do all they can to stimulate interest in night school work, especially towards getting the attendance of the mothers of families so that these women of foreign affiliations may not be left behind by their husbands and their children in becoming acquainted with the English language and American ideals.

Miss Nettleton also urged that members of local chapters study the manual and promote its circulation, as it is published in many different languages and will give valuable instruction to people who come here from other lands.

Referring to membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution as a great privilege which should be eagerly grasped by those whose ancestry qualifies them for membership, Miss Nettleton urged that its members live true to the ideals of their forefathers so that those coming to our shores may want to follow the same ideals. She declared that the Daughters of the Revolution are not militaristic, but only want this country to have enough of an army and navy for adequate protection, and she branded as false various reports of large losses in membership because of the "blacklist" furors early this year. In one instance which she knows of where the chapter was reported to have lost 100 members, the actual loss was six. She declared that the blacklist was not issued by the national organization.

She told the Faith Trumbull members with satisfaction that all the pledges, amounting to over $26,000, made by Connecticut chapters for the new hall at Washington had been redeemed and that Connecticut was the only state in the Union which had this record. She commended the Norwich chapter for paying so many of its quotas and she concluded her address with a quotation from Mrs. Brousseau, the national regent.

Two more solos by Miss Kslasek concluded the meeting, her selections being Birds Are Singing (Thomas) and Nymphs and Shepherds (Purcell.)

JEWETT CITY WOMAN NOMINATED FOR KING'S DAUGHTERS STATE PRESIDENT

Mrs. George H. Prior of Jewett City has been nominated for the office of state president of the Connecticut branch of the International Order of The King's Daughters which is holding its state convention in this city. The nominating committee, made its report at the opening session of the convention in the Central Baptist church Wednesday afternoon, as follows:

For president, Mrs. George H. Prior of Jewett City; for first vice president, Miss Ada L. Shelley, of Windsor; second vice president, Miss Elizabeth Day of Colchester; secretary, Miss Jessie A. Whittlesey of Hartford; for treasurer, Miss Ida J. Lyon of New London. For members of the executive committee, Mrs. Ira E. Forbes of Wethersfield; Mrs. Frank Crawford, of New Haven; Miss Harriet I. Eaton of Hartford.

The nominations will come up for election at the business session this (Thursday) morning. With Miss Mary R. Woodruff, state president and council members, presiding, the convention was called to order for its opening session at 3 o'clock, Miss Louise Fuller presiding at the organ. Following the singing of the hymn, In the Cross of Christ I Glory there was a devotional service. "The Necessity of Connecting Hearing with Doing," was the topic of an address by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church. Mrs. Maud P. Wheeler of this city welcomed the delegates, about 200 in all, from all sections of the state. The response, in unison, was led by Mrs. John M. Wadhams of Torrington. After the singing of a song, A King's Daughter Hymn written by Mrs. E. W. Dickinson of Ivoryton, the minutes of the 1927 convention were read by Miss Jessie Whittlesey of Hartford, the state secretary. Robert Gray of this city entertained with a vocal solo and then came the annual reports. The report of the state president, Miss Mary R. Woodruff of New Haven, follows:

"Weighed in the balanced and found wanting" is the sad but true verdict against your president this year.

On a tomb-stone in a New England cemetery is found this short but forceful epitaph, "She did what she couldn't." That might very aptly be my inscription. Warned a year ago by my physician that I must give up office responsibilities, I did not follow his advice, thinking that, probably, everything would come out all right. Truly, "the spirit was willing, but the flesh was weak." And because of my failure, the burden of the work has fallen on other shoulders. It demonstrates how wise you were last year in the choice of your first vice president. She has so ably carried on the work of the state, although in an impaired physical condition herself. All thanks and honor are due to her for the way things have been conducted. It has not been an easy year, for it is hard to realize that you are a failure. But times of testing come to all, sooner or later. We are told that a steel blade has to be tempered before it is ready for use, and so life requires us to weather many storms. If only we can keep the faith, remembering that "all things work together for good."

In a little poem called "The Waiting" Whittier says: "Who may not strive may yet fulfill, the harder task of standing still, and good but wished with God is done."

The silver lining has been the loyalty of true friends, which can never be forgotten nor repair. May I take this opportunity to publicly express my great appreciation for all the numerous kind messages and gifts which came to brighten many a dark day.

After all, we are of little importance. The work goes on someway. It requires no words of mine to tell you what the work has been this past year. The county presidents and other officers and workers will attend to that, in a much more intelligent way.

Henry Ford says that "Most people think of it in terms of getting, but success begins in terms of giving". So our work must be successful, since it consists always in giving and helping.

The four years in which I have tried to serve you have been enjoyable ones, and I have appreciated your loyal support and cooperation. You have never been quite sure that your president was going to be able to answer "present" at the roll-call. According to psychology, this uncertainty is bad for the morale of any organization. So as a "swan-song," may I leave this advice with you henceforth, be sure your presiding officer can pass a physical or endurance test.

In Solomon's temple there were pillars and we read that "upon the top of the pillars was lily-work". The strength of the pillar is essential, but what makes it beautiful is the lily-work. Are we artists enough to so plan our lives that the world will notice not only the pillar, but also the lily-work at the top?

Dickinson, Ivoryton.

After the singing of Take Time to Be Holy, there was an interesting sketch, written by Mrs. L. M. Behrens of Ivoryton, a past county president, which was followed by adjournment.

Dinner was served at 6 o'clock in the dining hall and after dinner two minute talks were given by Mrs. Thurston on The Convention as seen from the Pew; Mrs. Prior on The Convention as Seen From the Pulpit and Mrs. Dean on The Convention as Seen by a Novice.

Evening Session

The evening session convened at 7.30 o'clock with Miss Ada L. Shelley, the first vice president, presiding. Miss Fuller was again at the organ. Following the singing of two songs, Lead On, O King Eternal, and True Hearted, Faithful and Loyal, Rev. David A. Pitt, pastor of the Central Baptist church, conducted the devotional period.

Report for Two Counties

Mrs. Grace Manning of this city, county president, gave her report of New London and Windham counties as follows:

The King's Daughters and Sons is an organization for carrying on the work of Our Heavenly Father in this world. Not only are there circles in this country but on the other side of the water there are loyal bands of people working under this same title. In New London and Windham counties there are 18 circles; the largest has a membership of 110; the smallest only 4; but all are enthusiastically working for the same cause. The records of one Norwich circle was this year called to her eternal home, after serving her circle faithfully for some time. The number of "sons" belonging to the order are limited, but we would like to enroll more. One of the greatest things that the order does is to establish homes; some for aged people, others for young working girls who must be away from their own home. These homes are made as pleasant and homelike as possible, granting many privileges and charged only a nominal sum for board. Throughout the state there are many homes for the aged. Two are located in our own counties; the Card home in Willimantic, for which the Trusting circle works; and the Johnson home in this city to which all seven circles of Norwich contribute. All of the circles send out cards and flowers in cases of illness, and at Christmas baskets of fruit and other gifts are distributed among worthy people.

Many of the circle are taking up the systematic bible study. Visits are made to the almshouse for a service in the name of our Blessed Master and sometimes a short entertainment is given there. Much sewing is done by all the circles, usually some charitable work. Also, many quilts are made and sold, the money earned in this and other ways is spent where it is especially needed. This past year we have earned $3,468.17 and spent $3,161.09; some of it has been given to the near east relief, to the flood sufferers, to the Salvation army, and wherever and whenever we can we help those who need it most.

Some of the circles give special aid to the hospitals in their midst and some work for the church of which they are a part, but in all cases, we are trying to carry on the work as our Heavenly Father would have us do, and may each daughter and son strive a little harder the coming year that the kingdom of the Lord may grow more and more."

Address by Mrs. Prior

The church choir rendered an anthem while the offring was being taken up. The address was given by Mrs. Prior who spoke on My Interpretation of the Order. She told of attending the convention at Ottawa and of giving a similar address at that time. The order, she said, is not a church. She likened it to a building which is being constructed stone by stone. What shall we call our building? she asked.

We build our living stones into a refuge, a place of shelter, an inn on the road to Jericho. The King's Daughters specialize in aiding those in need. The very young are the objects of the work of the King's Daughters. Mrs. Prior told of visiting various homes for small children, homes for the sick and homes for the aged throughout the country, these homes being sponsored by the King's Daughters.

What better way can we serve the King than by taking care of His House? Who shall we invite into our "inn". The very young, the aged, the poor and the unfortunate. The Master Himself is coming some day to occupy His own.

Mrs. Prior's talk brought the evening session to a close, the benediction following, shortly before 9 o'clock.

The convention will convene again this (Thursday) morning and there will be both morning and afternoon sessions.

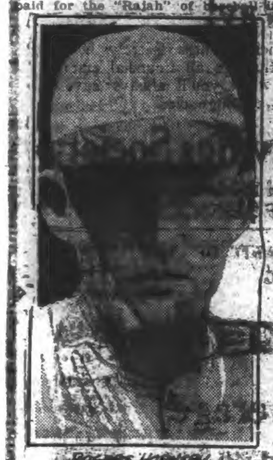
CUBS ACQUIRE HORNSBY IN CASH AND PLAYER TRADE FROM BRAVES

CHICAGO, Nov. 7—(AP)—Rogers Hornsby, Boston Braves manager and second baseman, was purchased by the Chicago Cubs tonight. The deal was completed over the telephone by William L. Veeck, president of the Cubs, and Judge Emil E. Fuchs, Boston club chief executive.

A large sum of money and five players figured in the deal, which brought the former St. Louis Cardinal manager and Giants second baseman to the Chicago Club.

Although not disclosing the exact amount of money involved, President Veeck intimated that close to $200,000 was paid for the "Rajah" of baseball.



ROGERS HORNSBY

In addition to the five players. The players going to the Boston club include two regulars, second baseman Freddie Maguire and Percy Jones, southpaw pitcher. Frederick Fuller and two members of the Reading, Pennsylvania club. The Reading players are Louis Leggett, catcher, and Harry Seibolt, right hand pitcher. Bruce Cunningham, young hurler purchased from Los Angeles at the close of the season, completes the quintet.

Consummation of the deal, one of the largest in the history of baseball, brings to an end baseball gossip that had Hornsby a member of the Cubs by the opening of the world series. It also marks another epoch in the turbulent baseball career of the former St. Louis Cardinal manager and New York Giants second baseman.

Hornsby's travels began at the start of the 1927 season when the Cardinals to a world championship over the New York Yankees in the most sensational trade of the season Hornsby went to the Giants for Frankie Frisch, flashy Fordham baseball star and second baseman.

Although ranking well up among the hitters last year as a member of the Giants and playing a mediocre game at second base, the opening of the 1928 season found Hornsby gracing a Boston Braves uniform. He went to Boston in a trade that involved several players of little note.

With the resignation of Slattery as manager early in the season, Hornsby assumed control of the lowly Braves. Despite his individual hitting efforts that carried him to another National league batting title, Hornsby was unable to make any appreciable showing with the Boston club.

In purchasing the Boston manager the Cubs take over his contract, which is said to call for annual salary of $40,000.

To make room for Hornsby, Maguire was included in the transaction. Maguire came up with the Toledo club of the American association at the opening of the 1928 season and immediately won his starting berth. He took the place of Sparky Adams, who went to Pittsburgh in the deal that brought Kiki Cuyler to the Cubs.

Percy Jones was an ace hurler during the latter part of the season.

PLAYERS ARE VALUED AT OVER $225,000

BOSTON, Nov. 7—(AP)—Judge Emil E. Fuchs, president of the Boston National league baseball club, announced tonight that he had traded Rogers Hornsby, second baseman, and manager of the Braves, to the Chicago Cubs.

Judge Fuchs said that in turning Hornsby the Braves are to receive with a small amount of cash, the following players: Fred McGuire, second baseman, and Percy Jones, pitcher, of the Cubs, and Harry Siebold, pitcher, and Louis Leggett, catcher of the Reading, Pa., club of the International league, controlled by the Chicago Cubs. Bruce Cunningham, pitcher, recently purchased by the Cubs from Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast league.

President Fuchs declined to make known the amount of cash involved in the deal, but said that it was very small. He added, however, that the cash value of the players obtained by the Braves in return for Hornsby amounts to $225,000.

President Fuchs said that in the future he will act as manager as well as president of the Braves and that he has obtained Johnny Evers, second baseman of the world champion Braves of 1914, as his assistant manager.

Percy Jones, who is a left-handed pitcher, won ten and lost six games for the Cubs last season. Siebold led the International league with 22 victories and seven defeats. Leggett batted for .346 last season and Cunningham won 17 and lost 13 games with the second division Los Angeles club.

ELLIS WILL BE OUT OF YALE LINEUP FOR WEEK

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 7—(AP)—Rumors that "Hoot" Ellis, understudy of Johnny Orsino, last season's regular berth at Yale, will be out of the lineup for the remainder of the season, were partially confirmed tonight by Coach Stevens, who said that an injury to Ellis' knee would keep him on the sidelines at least until the Princeton game.

The former Exeter star has carried on the directions of Orsino when Hoben, through injury, was kept on the bench. Against Harvard last week, Ellis ran the plays in a fitting manner until he limped from the field early in the final quarter. Since then he has been in the college infirmary with water on the knee, it was learned tonight.

With Hoben only recently to practice today, Stevens may not take any chances in starting him against Maryland this week to have him in good condition for the all-important games against Princeton and Harvard on successive weeks. The only other [illegible]

ARMY IN STIFF DRILL FOR HARTFORD HIGH TILT

Preparing for the first of its final major battles of the year, the Army grid squad went through a stiff session Wednesday afternoon at the campus. Hartford high plays here Saturday for the first time since 1917 in what looks like the hardest game of the year. A rugged scrimmage was in order Wednesday with Coach Whitney stressing the various departments of play in order to whip his boys into the best shape for the Hartford club.

It is expected that the Academy will go into the battle with their regulars intact, namely Bergdinge and Tomberi at ends, Kahn and Herts at tackles, Fox and Mick at guards, Drutchbank at center with Brock at quarter, Capt. LeCroix and Fagan or Sherry at halfbacks with Jack Marks at fullback.

Hartford evidently is expecting a setup in the Academy but followers of the Red and White predict a close battle and the boasts of the Hartford contingent that they will use a second team are but idle phrases.

The Academy has played good football this season, losing but twice and both by 7 to 6 counts, the lack of some one to convert the extra point being real apparent. In both of these games, with Harding and Windham, the Wildcats held their own with the opposition throughout the majority of the distance and it was only the "breaks" that proved disastrous.

Tomorrow, Saturday, the team, playing before a home crowd for the first time in nearly a month, will be in fighting trim and no doubt give the Insurance City outfit plenty to think about. A large turnout is expected for this game as it is viewed as one of the prize schoolboy clashes of the year hereabouts, being second only to the Bulkeley game on the Academy schedule.

HARVARD VARSITY WORKS AGAINST PENN PLAYS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 7—(AP)—The Harvard varsity eleven had fair success against the Pennsylvania offense which was put on by the ineligibles during today's prolonged practice session. The Crimson forwards broke through fast enough to spoil most of the Pennsylvania hidden ball plays and the ineligibles were unable to gain by using Lou Young's short forward.

Head Coach Arnold Horween gave the varsity a generous dose of fundamental drills before the scrimmage. He had the linemen working on the tackling dummy and his ends and backs taking out the sand bags.

Dick O'Connell and Jim Douglas, judging from the part they played in today's session, appeared to have won the fight for the varsity end positions. Horween had Eliot Putnam at quarterback with "Shorty" Crawford, who started the Dartmouth game calling signals on the second team.

There were but three members of the squad on today's injured list but Gildea and Potter, substitute linemen, were expected to be able to play against Pennsylvania. The other, Sam Burns, an end replacement, injured in the Dartmouth game, will probably be out until next week's Holy Cross game.

BRUINS SHOW WEAKNESS AGAINST AERIAL ATTACK

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 7—(AP)—A vital weakness in the defense of the Brown varsity football squad against the Dartmouth forward passing attack, was disclosed today when Dave Mishel, star passer on the 1926 "iron team" and at present Bruin backfield coach, took a place in the Pollywog backfield to enact the role of Al Marsters, Dartmouth ace.

Mishel soon filled the air with footballs, heaving the pigskin for long and short distances to backs and ends scattered all over the field. The first and second string elevens of McLaughry's squad could do little against the passing of Mishel and the Bruin mentor admitted at the close of the long drill that he is apprehensive about what his team will be able to do Saturday at Hanover.

As a result of the poor showing made today, McLaughry ordered another long dummy scrimmage on defense formations for tomorrow.

MARSTERS WRENCHES ANKLE AGAIN IN PRACTICE

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 7—(AP)—The Dartmouth eleven was sent through a strenuous scrimmage here today in preparation for the Brown game Saturday.

Coach Hawley shifted his first team lineup, back and forth throughout the afternoon. Henry Johnston, last year's freshman fullback and tennis star, replaced Sutton at fullback. Al Marsters started at left halfback, but was taken out almost immediately when he wrenched his ankle. The injury was slight, however, and will probably not prevent his playing against Brown.

Clark, who took Marsters' place, and Lee, both showed good ground gaining ability. Coach Hawley now has only Sutton and Johnson for fullback and started the latter today to give him more practice for the games ahead. The green coach continued to be pessimistic over Saturday's game, stressing the fact that Brown would have its full strength.

ENTIRE YALE SQUAD HAS STIFF WORKOUT

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 7—(AP)—The entire Yale squad was on hand today for the first time in weeks and went through their paces in groups supervised by the coaches. The regulars tasted another day of scrimmage against the substitutes and all but Charlesworth of the varsity, repelled the series of varied plays. His place was taken by Palmer at center whom Stevens is developing for first relief strength.

To wind up the afternoon's work team A opposed team C and stayed on the gridiron for half an hour of scrimmaging. Billhardt ran the third team and his mates picked several holes for opportune gains. Fred Loesen injured center, went through a light signal drill for the first time in nearly two weeks. Other injured players were also back in practice, Hoben, Hubbard and Garvey taking their positions in the varsity backfield.

In the belief that Maryland on Saturday will present its most formidable eleven, Coach Mal Stevens intends to give his first string players the call for action.

Gottlieb Gets Assignment

AMHERST, Mass., Nov. 7—(AP)—"Bonny" Gottlieb will get the quarterback assignment at the start of Amherst's game with Trinity on Saturday, according to present indications. Gottlieb has piloted the Lord Jeffs for the past two days, with "Rab" Wilson, former quarter, playing fullback. The Amherst squad was given an hour's scrimmage today with special emphasis on forward pass defense.

EASTERN TEAMS GROOMING FOR SATURDAY BATTLES

(By The Associated Press)

"By their Wednesday practices you shall know their Saturday games," would be a safe rule to apply to eastern football teams. When a hard game is in the offing, the mid-week drill usually is given over to scrimmage and heavy work. If a breathing spell is on the schedule, Wednesday more often is devoted to light work that will keep the players in shape but can do no serious damage.

The Army squad led the hard workers today, with the varsity toying out the plays it expects to use against Notre Dame Saturday on a strong scrub squad. Murrell, the Cadets' line bucking fullback, did a large part of the ball carrying with Cagle occasionally flashing one of his fine runs. For the most part, however, the scrubs offered stern opposition and several times halting scoring threats.

Pennsylvania and Harvard both had long drills in preparation for their meeting at Cambridge. Pennsylvania, with Walter Opekun, 165-pound fullback who worked brilliantly against Chicago, promoted to a regular post, stopped the scrubs' interpretation of the Harvard attack on nearly every occasion. The Crimson likewise worked with success on the defense, breaking through the ineligibles' line to stop the Pennsylvania hidden ball plays and cutting off forward passes. A generous dose of fundamental drill preceded the scrimmage.

Pittsburgh, fresh from its brilliant victory over Syracuse, went through a long rehearsal of new formations to be used against its great rival, Washington and Jefferson, while the Presidents worked at perfecting a defense against the Pitt formations they already knew.

On the other side of the picture, Princeton, which expects little difficulty from Washington and Lee, was given only a short signal drill while the second team prepared for action by scrimmaging against the freshmen. Coach Mal Stevens of Yale spent most of his time on company work although the varsity got a good taste of scrimmage before the end of the afternoon. Stevens is not expecting a walkover against Maryland and intends to start his first string players. After having the squad broken up by injuries Yale's prospects looked better today when the entire team was on the field.

Navy, Cornell and Penn State provided the exceptions of the rule. Seeking revenge for last year's tie game with St. Bonaventure, Gil Dobie handed out a stiff scrimmage to his team. Penn State prepared to meet George Washington with a full length game between the first and second teams. Although Michigan promises to be anything but an easy opponent for the thrice-beaten Navy, "Bill" Ingram does not intend to risk further injuries to his men by scrimmaging them before the game. The Michigan encounter will mark the Navy's first game of the season with a complete squad.

PROMOTER MULLEN IS SUSPENDED IN ILLINOIS

CHICAGO, Nov. 7—(AP)—Promoter James C. Mullen was suspended indefinitely and his license revoked today, by the Illinois state athletic commission for failure to pay the state tax within 48 hours after his boxing show at the Coliseum, November 2.

Mullen's suspension will prevent him from staging any shows until the state commission lifts the ban against the Chicago promoter.

Young Jack Thompson, welterweight title contender, also was suspended indefinitely by the commission for failure to make the weight in a recent bout.

Billy Showers, St. Paul boxer, who was injured seriously in a bout with Shuffle Callahan last Monday, had his license revoked permanently by the commission. The commission ruled that Showers no longer was fit to box.

MASSACHUSETTS VOTES TO ALLOW SUNDAY SPORTS

BOSTON, Nov. 7—(AP)—The voters of Massachusetts have approved professional sports on Sunday and next year there will be Sunday baseball in Boston and other cities of the state.

The referendum on the Sunday sports law was passed in yesterday's election by a wide margin.

The Sunday sports measure sanctions all professional sports except racing and prize fighting.

BILLY WALLACE WINS DECISIVELY FROM FLOWERS

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 7—(AP)—Staging a comeback after a period of illness, Billy Wallace, Cleveland lightweight, won a decisive victory over Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle, N. Y., Negro, in the 12-round main bout at Public hall tonight.

Cripples back on B. C. Team

BOSTON, Nov. 7—(AP)—Boston college's chances for a football victory over Fordham here on Armistice day, were brightened considerably today when it appeared certain that all of Coach Joe McKenney's cripples, notably "Zus" Wilcewiski, Jack Kennedy and Dave Dillon, would be ready for action against the Maroon eleven.

McKenney, who witnessed yesterday's West Virginia-Fordham game at New York, spent much of his time this afternoon outlining Fordham plays and preparing a defense for them.

Beauregard's Opponent

HARTFORD, Nov. 7—Pete Lucci of Clinton, Mass., who meets Al Beauregard of Hartford, formerly of Norwich in one of the four star bout programme at Foot Guard hall on this Thursday night.

TILDEN WILL BE UNABLE TO PLAY TOURNAMENT TENNIS ANYWHERE

(By F. G. Vosburgh, Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—(AP)—Big Bill Tilden now finds himself not only an exile from the courts of his own land but literally a man without a country so far as his right to play amateur tennis is concerned.

By order of the International Lawn Tennis federation the ban applied to the famous American star by the United States Lawn Tennis association in August has been extended to its 54 other member nations and thus embraces the entire tennis playing world.

This latest move in the Tilden case is revealed by the U. S. L. T. A. in the current issue of its "official bulletin" which says the international body has sent to all of the associations affiliated with it a copy of the resolution disqualifying Tilden together with an order that, "conforming with our rulings you will kindly extend this action also to your association."

A glance at the world-wide membership roster of the International federation quickly shows that the only territory still available to Tilden for tournament competition comprises such countries as Russia and Abyssinia where the citizens probably would find some difficulty in distinguishing a service ace from a lob.

Thus Tilden, six-time American champion, is without a place wherein to swing his racket. The only chance for relief in sight is a possibility that the U. S. L. T. A. will decide at its February meeting to give the stormy petrel of the game another chance. Removal of the ban in this country would mean its removal elsewhere.

While it none the less effectually prevents Tilden from making plans to play abroad for amateur play in Europe next season in defiance of the U. S. L. T. A., it is true that the federation order making his ineligibility world-wide was an unquestioning or automatic ratification of the American governing body's action rather than the result of any consideration of the merits of the case.

Even if Tilden should turn professional—something he has long asserted he has no intention of doing—he still would not be outside the jurisdiction of the U. S. L. T. A.

That body has announced itself as being favorably disposed toward professional tennis competition and apparently no longer is antagonistic even to matches between amateurs and pros, but it proposes nevertheless to keep the new game as strictly under control as the old.

AVERAGE U. S. AIRPORT THREE MILES FROM CITY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7—(AP)—The average distance of airports from the business centers of cities in the United States is three miles, according to compilation of the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce.

Investigation of distances at 436 cities shows a variation of from one-quarter of a mile to 18 miles. It was found roughly that the larger the city the greater the distance to its airport. In a number of cities of more than 100,000 population the distance to airports averaged almost seven miles.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7—(AP)—It is no longer necessary to drill holes or slots in license plates to make them fit the license-plate bracket on automobiles. All of the 48 states, District of Columbia, Porto Rico, Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands have conformed with the standard plate bracket slots developed by the Society of Automotive Engineers and recommended by the United States bureau of standards.

WASHINGTON'S BOYHOOD HOME CHOSEN AS A SHRINE

FREDERICKSBURG, Va.— (AP) — The first step in restoration of the boyhood home of George Washington near here as a national shrine to the first president has been taken with the purchase of the original Washington farm by the George Washington foundation.

The announced intention of the foundation is to dedicate the memorial in 1932 on the 200th anniversary of Washington's birth.

Plans of the foundation call for restoring the property to the same condition it was in when young George spent more than a dozen years there with his parents after leaving the parental home of Wakefield.

Located in Stafford county, just across the Rappahannock river from Fredericksburg, this is said to be the last property intimately associated with the life of Washington to be taken from private hands. Here, tradition has it, George felled the famous cherry tree.

Augustine Washington, father of George, died a few years after the family came to the Stafford farm. Mary Washington, George's mother, lived there more than 25 years longer before coming to Fredericksburg, where she died. George went from the Stafford farm to Mount Vernon.

DUCKS ALMOST WRECK NIGHT FLYING PLANES

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Three army pilots making a spectacular night flight over the city in brilliantly illuminated planes were almost put out of commission by flying into a flock of wild ducks.

The three ships were flying in close formation. So were the ducks. Because of the blinding glare of searchlights playing on the planes the pilots did not discern the feathered fliers until one of the birds collided with a wheel of the plane piloted by Capt. Ross G. Hoyt. Feathers flew in all directions. The plane started spinning violently.

Deciding that the glare of the searchlights had attracted the birds the pilots maneuvered their planes as rapidly as possible away from the lighted zone and so shook the ducks of their trail. Had one of the birds struck a propeller, serious consequences might have followed.

LOOKS 20 YEARS AHEAD TO MEET TRAFFIC NEED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7—(AP)—Forecasting the trend of highway traffic development in each state to give an accurate basis upon which to build roads where and when they will be needed in the next two decades has become an important function of the United States bureau of public roads in its cooperation with the states.

The bureau has already cooperated with six states, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Pennsylvania and Ohio, in the making of surveys to provide a scientific road building program for each state.

Since historical traffic records are unavailable in most states, a mathematical system has been devised to forecast the state's traffic a decade or two ahead of its present development.

The increase in motor vehicle registration in a state brought under investigation is considered the function of the increase in population and the increase in ownership of motor vehicles in proportion to the population, measured by the number of persons per motor vehicle.

The growth in motor vehicle registration in proportion to population appears to follow the growth of population, according to the road bureau's forecasters. The trend is along the lines of an early growth slow in number of vehicles, but rapid in the increase, followed by a gradual decrease in the rate of growth.

FIRE IN LUNCH CART LATE WEDNESDAY NIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW BRITAIN, Nov. 7—The Main street fire box sounded an alarm at 11:30 tonight which brought Engines 1 and 2 for a fire in the lunch cart owned by George Kelly and situated between the Malek block and Lachapelle's bowling alley. The blaze was quickly extinguished with chemical, but the interior of the lunch cart was damaged considerably. It is thought an oil stove started the fire after the lunch cart had been locked up for the night.

ALCOHOL MOTOR FUEL NEARER REALIZATION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7—(AP)—Renewed activity of British interests to develop an alcohol motor fuel which could be used in part as a substitute for gasoline in automobile and airplane engines has been reported to the department of commerce by Homer S. Fox, American trades commissioner at London.

One of the principal British companies interested in the development of alcohol for motor fuel, Distillers' Company, Ltd., has reported its experiments as demonstrating that alcohol is twice as efficient as benzol to prevent knocking in an internal combustion engine. The company has announced the production of a dry alcohol, which, through the use of a French process, makes possible 99 per cent. absolute alcohol, which may be mixed with gasoline in any proportion.

The Nipah Distilleries of Malaya, Ltd., formed this year for the purpose of developing alcohol as a motor fuel in British Malaya, has purchased a 7,000 gallon alcohol producing plant from a London concern for use in Malaya.

Importance of the development of alcohol as a motor fuel by Great Britain has been emphasized by the fact that the British must depend upon the bulk of their present motor fuel supplies from foreign sources.

Talk Not of Age

Talk not of age; the waning years
Leave one more wise as they depart,
And with them mingle smiles and tears
If one but young remains at heart.
The seasons come, the seasons go,
But with revolving days return
Till Winter's evanescent snow
Melts in the laughing, leaping burn.

And when the cuckoo calls again,
The sap of April floods one's veins;
And as he flies from glen to glen,
Rejoicing in Spring's sunlit rains,
I feel as young as even he,
Seeking him near, afar, above
Echoing his name, in playful glee
Of faithless undomestic love.

Nor when deep Summer silence rests
On windless thicket, sheltered lawn,
From thoughtful hearts and pious breasts
Is Nature's sympathy withdrawn.
The faithful cushat faintly heard,
Repeats the simple note of home,
Teaching the lesson, wisest bird,
How blest are those not prone to roam.

—Independent.

White Wings

Sail home, as straight as an arrow,
My yacht shoots along on the crest of the sea;
Sail home, to sweet Maggie Darrow,
In her dear little home she is waiting for me.
High up, where the cliffs are craggy,
That's where the girl of my heart waits for me.
Heigh, ho, I long for you, Maggie,
I'll spread out my white wings and sail home to thee.
Yo, ho! How we go! Oh, how the winds blow!

Chorus

White wings, they never grow weary,
They carry me cheerily over the sea;
Night comes, I long for my dearie,
I'll spread out my white wings and sail home to thee.

Sail home, to love and caresses,
When Maggie, my darling, is there at my side;
Sail home, blue eyes and gold tresses,
The fairest of all is my own little bride.
Sail home, to part from thee never,
Always together life's voyage shall be;
Sail home to love thee forever!
I'll spread out my white wings and sail home to thee.
Yo, ho! How we go! Oh, how the winds blow!

—By Banks Winter.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Overheard in a restaurant—Soup—Life.

Motorist (to victim)—Oh, sir, would you mind autographing our little car; you're the first person we've hit.—Judge.

Alice—And how did you like the Shakespeare club?

Virginia—Wonderful! Why, I made three grand slams at the last meeting.—Judge.

"It says here that stripes are popular," remarked the bandit's wife who was reading the fashion page.

"Not with me," growled her husband.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Cook—Why, you're the same man I gave a piece of pie to yesterday.

Tramp—Yes, but I hardly expected to find the same cook here today.—Pathfinder.

Artist's Friend (viewing new paintings)—To be frank, old chap, I don't like it; yet there is something remarkable about it.

Artist—It's sold, anyway.

Friend—Ah! Probably that's it.—Aussie.

"By the way," the stuck-up girl remarked, "Jack and Harry proposed to me last night, and——"

"You refused them both."

"Ye-es—but how did you know?"

"Easy! I saw them afterwards shaking hands."—Times of India.

One Saturday a small boy saw some men working at a schoolhouse and inquired of one of them what they were doing.

"Installing an electric switch," he was told.

"Oh," said the youngster. "Well, I don't care. We're moving next week, and I'm not going to this school any more."—Boston Transcript.

The Tarahumara Indians of Mexico live on a diet of bean cakes, corn and chili. They are the world's best runners.

One of the largest mastodon tusks ever found in this part of the country was unearthed near Newton, O., recently by workmen who were blasting in a gravel pit. The tusk was about eight feet long and 22 inches in circumference at its base.

Though no one who saw him do it could be found, a bay horse apparently tried to climb a tree at Louisville, Ky. The animal was found with his forefeet caught in a fork, five feet up the tree from the ground. Firemen were called and released the horse without injury to it or to the tree.

The Turkish finance commissioner suggests that the rich hoard of jewels accumulated by the sultans be sold to provide capital for the proposed Turkish state bank. The jewels are already the property of the state, and the commission points out that the proceeds of their sale, together with available gold reserve, would finance the bank.

"Have you found $3,270 in $10 and $20 bills in any of your trolley cars?" asked Mrs. Elizabeth Christ at the traction company's lost and found department. The clerk asked her to describe the pocketbook in which the money had been lost and a few minutes later handed over to her a black leather handbag, its $3,270 intact. The bag had been found by Arthur Wardle, onerator of a one-man car.—Boston Globe.

Eighty-eight years ago, Miss Lucy M. Blanchard of East Poultney, Vt., then a child, fell down the cellar stairs and was never able to walk again. Now at the age of 91 Miss Blanchard lives alone, gets her own meals and needs no attendant. "My wheel chair takes me around as my feet did," she says. When a young woman she was able to get about on crutches, but she has not used them since 1856.

One evening last May, while riding with his wife in a motor car, everything went dark for Leo Bremont, a New Jersey citizen—he went blind. Several specialists found they could do nothing to help Bremont get his sight back. A few days ago Bremont was getting a shampoo and massage in a Passaic barber shop. As the barber ran the electric vibrator over his forehead Bremont suddenly yelled "I can see! I can see!" A small blood clot was responsible for Bremont's sudden blindness and this clot was broken up by the vibrations of the barber's motor.

WAUREGAN COFFEE SHOP POPULAR WITH NORWICH PEOPLE

The Wauregan Coffee Shop has met instant favor with the people of Norwich, as well as with hundreds of people who travel through the city daily.

The Wauregan Coffee Shop, located just to the right of the Main street entrance to the hotel and with inside outlets into the hotel proper, is decorated in antique finish and presents a most pleasing atmosphere throughout.

Directly in the center of the coffee shop is the large horseshoe counter, finished in blac and orange. Placed conveniently about this counter are low comfortable stools which assures every patron of the shop all the comforts of chairs.

The former lunch bar, located in the hotel proper, connects with the new coffeee shop. This is now nicely fitted out with tables and booths. An entrance from the lobby of the hotel affords patrons entrance to this room, which has been especially designed for more private patrons.

To everyone entering the Wauregan Coffee Shop one thing is instantly fixed in the mind. That is that the shop has been designed and furnished for quick and efficient service. Quick and efficient service plus delightful and properly cooked foods at popular prices is the policy of the shop. Norwich people have learned this already and the management of the hotel invites others to visit the shop and become acquainted.

OIL FUELS FOR HEATING PUT IN THREE CLASSES

NEW YORK—(AP)—The standardization of oil fuels for heating has been announced by the Oil Heating Institute. The grades are known as light, medium and heavy.

Two small instruments, one the viscosimeter, which resembles a drum in shape, and the other the flash tester, which is formed like a bell, are used to fix the standards. A viscosimeter tests the uniform consumption atomization qualities of fuel oil. The flash tester determines the safety factor as required by government regulations and by insurance underwriters.

Harry Tapp, technologist for the American Oil Burner association, directed the standard fixing experiments. The principle is the same as the requirement of automobiles for a uniform grade of gasoline, and the objective to permit ordering of fuel oil throughout the United States by an easily determined grade.

In addition to the Oil Burner association, the American Petroleum institute and American Society of Testing Materials have agreed upon the standard specifications.

Burgess Bedtime Story

A Sneeze at the Wrong Time.

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

The Careful foot will sometimes trip;
The best of plans will sometimes slip.
Rusty the Fox Squirrel.

When you stop to think of it, Reddy Fox and Redtail were having a most foolish quarrel. Yes, sir, it was a most foolish quarrel. They were quarreling over something that neither of them had. Each claimed that Rusty the Fox Squirrel belonged to him, when, as a matter of fact, he belonged to no one. So intent were they on their quarrel that for a while they actually forgot what they were quarreling about.

After a while Redtail saw an opportunity to take to his wings without giving Reddy a chance to swing on his back. As Redtail mounted up into the air Reddy Fox leaped upward and his jaws closed on one of Redtail's tail-feathers. The tail-feather came out. Redtail screamed angrily. Reddy Fox stood looking up at Redtail and snarling just as angrily. Then Redtail mounted up, up, up and began to look for Rusty the Fox Squirrel. You see, Redtail hadn't seen Rusty duck down that hole.

Reddy Fox knew where Rusty had gone, however, and as soon as he was sure that Redtail had gone for good

Reddy Fox hard at work digging that hole bigger.

Reddy turned his attention to that hole. It wasn't quite big enough for him to go down himself, but it looked as if it might be easy digging, and Reddy made up his mind that he would dig out Rusty the Fox Squirrel. He wouldn't be cheated out of that Squirrel dinner. No, sir, he wouldn't be cheated out of that Squirrel dinner! So as soon as he was sure that Redtail was too far away to know what he was doing Reddy poked his head into that hole and began to dig. He was digging the hole larger.

Now, this was the very thing that Rusty the Fox Squirrel had been afraid would happen. He is no digger himself and he knew that if Reddy should really undertake to dig him out he could do it. For this reason the first thing Rusty had done after getting his breath was to see that there was a back hall to that old Chuck house. If there were a back hall he might have some chance. My, how he did hope he would find a back hall with a back door opening out onto the Green Meadows! Twice he found what he thought were back halls, only to discover that they soon ended. He was almost in despair when he found another hall. It was a small one. He wondered how Johnny Chuck could have squeezed through it. It was big enough for Rusty, however, to run along in comfort. He pushed his way along, digging away some earth that had fallen down. By and by he could smell fresh air. Then he knew he had found the right hall and that in a moment he would be at the back door.

A stone partly closed the back door, but after a little digging Rusty could poke his head out. My, how good the fresh air was! He didn't quite put his head right out. First, he merely put his nose out. Then he poked just enough of his head out for his eyes to give him a chance to see all around. Almost the first thing he saw was a big bushy tail a short distance away and beneath it two hindfeet kicking out sand. Reddy Fox was hard at work digging that hole bigger. Rusty wanted to chuckle when he saw this. Now all he would have to do would be to wait for Reddy to get way inside, then he would take to his heels. And by the time Reddy had discovered that he wasn't in that hole he would be safely across the Green Meadows and up in a tree. That is, he would be if Redtail didn't come back. Anxiously he looked all about in the sky. A speck was just vanishing off over the Green Forest. He knew it to be Redtail.

Now, there will be a slip in the best of plans. Rusty's plan was all right. Reddy would have a lot of digging to do before he got down to the end of that hall, and when he did get there he would find that Rusty had escaped. Meanwhile Rusty would be racing across the rest of the Green Meadows to the woods beyond. Now, Reddy's method of digging is to dig very fast with those forefeet of his, then kick out the sand, usually backing out as he did so. Rusty sat with just his nose and eyes above the ground, watching Reddy. It was just as Reddy had backed out for a breath of fresh air that something tickled Rusty's nose.

"Kerchoo!" sneezed Rusty before he could stop it.

Instantly Reddy turned. He saw Rusty when Rusty dodged down. In two jumps he was over to that little back doorway.

WESTERN TRIALS TRACED IN SIX-VOLUME HISTORY

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—(AP)—"Transcontinental Trails," a six-volume work, is completed after seven years research by the Stewart commission on western history.

The commission, directed by Prof. Archer B. Hulbert of Colorado college, has obtained from official documents the odyssey of pioneers who crossed prairie, mountain and desert to settle the west. The books contain more than 300 maps, tracing from original township surveys the important early-day transcontinental roads.

The first five volumes are devoted to the Oregon, California, Santa Fe, Mormon and Overland routes, while the final one tells about the two Santa Fe-California trails. The earlier of these roads led to the Pacific by way of the Rio Grande and the Yuma desert, while the other ran westward from Albuquerque, N. M., through the Mojave desert and the Cajon pass to Los Angeles.

Efforts of the United States government to establish the use of camel trains on the western deserts are recounted in the concluding volume of "Transcontinental Trails."

DARK COLORS POPULAR FOR 1929 AUTO TAGS

WASHINGTON—(AP)—State highway officials throughout the country have shown a decided preference for dark color combinations rather than flashy hues in selection of shades for the 1929 automobile license plates.

Although there will be some bright combinations respresented in next year's fashion parade of license tags, the trend is decidedly toward darker colors. Thirty-nine states and the District of Columbia will retain last year's colors, but reversing them as to background and lettering.

Yellow letters on a black background will predominate in 1929, since six states and the District of Columbia will use that combination. Orange on black is the second favorite of highway officials with five states planning to use this combination next year.

PRAGUE FEELS ANNOYED AT TOURISTS' NEGLECT

PRAGUE—(AP)—Professional guides in Czechoslovakia are grumbling that business is poor and will remain in the slump until the government and tourists agencies make the necessary effort to attract more American travelers to Prague.

American visits Prague in greater numbers each year and are regarded as the best spenders. A swarm of German tourists invaded the city and it was discovered that they bought little in the stores and paid no tips beyond the usual 10 per cent of their bills. Trans-Atlantic visitors spend and tip lavishly.

INLAND PARIS IS PORT WITH WORLD-WIDE TRADE

PARIS—(AP)—Paris, situated on the narrow River Seine, more than 150 miles from the sea and known as an inland city, is nevertheless an important international port.

This is emphasized in figures published by the city's port officials, who estimate that more than 100,000 vessels, flying the flags of many nations, will have docked here during 1928.

Coal from England and Germany, jute from Belgium and Holland, minerals and news print from Germany, hides, chemical products and other cargoes from every country of Europe find their way in small freighters and barges to the Paris quais.

IOWA BUILDS 6 MILES OF HIGHWAY EACH DAY

DES MOINES, Ia.—(AP)—Iowa has been "getting out of the mud" at the rate of six miles per day during 1928.

The perennial tourist jokes about Iowa "mud-roads" will soon have to be discarded as Iowa road builders continue to wipe out the dirt roads of her primary highway system by pavement at the unusual rate of six miles a day.

From April 1 to September 1, during which much of the construction work was concentrated, 600 miles of pavement were finished, while 700 miles of pavement were under contract and unfinished.

EFFECTS OF WATER ON RAYON ARE TESTED

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rayon, chemistry's substitute for the toilsome product of the silkworm, remains much of a mystery despite the enormous vogue it has attained since the war in the manufacture of women's wear and other articles.

Since it is composed of cellulose, many jokes have been composed about what might happen if its wearer should be caught in the rain or otherwise drenched. The jokes, of course, have been based on exaggerations, but the Bureau of Standards has just undertaken to find out how much foundation they may have in fact.

The present phase of the rayon study, which has been under way at the bureau for some time, centers chiefly on determination of the effect of moisture on the strength and elongation properties of four types of the material. Supplementary work also is being done on rayon of the cellulose acetate type to find out just what happens when it is boiled in water. If this can be ascertained it may be possible in point the way toward a method of washing the material without risk of destroying its luster.

BROWN DERBY CLUB KEPT OPEN HOUSE TUESDAY

Tuesday, the polls were opened in the town hall from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. On the doorstep was sitting John Bentley, at 5.45, to be the first man to vote. When Nelson Rathbun passed him a ballot he was all smiles to take away the honor from Wade Wilbur, who has been the first one to vote for ten years. Yesterday he was the third one. A steady line of voters kept coming, for the slogan was "Vote Early But Not Often." Henry Tarbox, who has seen 96 winters cast his vote for Happy Hoover. Mrs. Nellie Burr, who is 92 walked one and one-quarter miles to the polls and cast her first vote for Smiling Al Smith. She was asked if she wanted to ride back to her home and she said "Yes; I did not mind it one way but both ways is too much for me." Many women were out to cast their ballots. The officials in charge were Moderator M. Chester and Moses Rathburn registrars; A. E. Fitch and Warren Murphy checkers; Charles Leweys, stubs; Mode Rathbun, ballot box; Nelson Rathbun and Halstead Brown, tickets; George Ashby and Cus Thompson, booth tenders. It was the largest vote ever cast in the fishing village, 502 votes were cast. The town went republican. The tally read: Republican straight voters 365; democratic straight voters, 92. The rest were splits.

The Brown Derby club had a 6-tube electric set to get the returns from all over the country and kept open house. The radio was operated by Eddie Ellis. A crowd of 115 packed the club rooms to see who would be the winner. A lunch of hot dogs and coffee with cake was served. In the morning at 2:30 the crowd was still there, smoking and telling jokes and singing "It's Nice to Get Home in the Morning When You Are Up All Night."

Farewell For Jack Lawler

Jack Lawler, after spending the summer at his cottage on Elm street was given a farewell party when 25 friends gathered to give Happy Jack a send-off. He was packing his suitcase getting ready to leave for Springfield when a knock came on the door. The crowd rushed in and he was surprised to see them getting everything ready in the parlor. The rugs were put aside ready for dancing and Elm Street Black Diamond orchestra played peppy music. Games were played and a peanut hunt was tried. The one who found the most peanuts received as a prize a new jack-knife that came from England. When the judges said "Time!" E. Cote had 44 peanuts, winning the knife. Miss Nellie Swan was second with 40 peanuts. A table was set with a real plum duff and baked clams with coffee. Jack spoke about hockey. He is goal tender on the St. Martin team in Springfield. He said it is a great game to learn; a fellow has got to do everything. The coach said many times I got hit over the head with the stick. I remember one night we were playing the Canada Yellow Jackets a close battle, with only two minutes to play. We were ahead, 4 to 3. Johnson for Canada came down the ice full force to put the puck in the net and he made a hit and got me on the head for a cut that took three stitches; but I stopped him from scoring. He was cheered for five minutes for his talk and Jerry Davis, in behalf of the guests, gave Goal-tender Jack a hockey stick that was made in St. Louis, Mo. Then the orchestra played "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Angus Martin has returned from a few weeks' visit in Philadelphia with relatives.

SUGAR IMPROVES FRUIT FLAVORS

Makes these healthful foods delightful to the taste

The human body needs fruits, to be well-fed and healthy, and each person should eat at least one raw and one cooked fruit each day. Here are the health-giving elements that fruits bring to us: needed roughage, fruit vitamines, mineral salts, and beneficial fruit acids.

And, thanks to sugar, fruits can also be beneficial in another way. The harsh or sour acids, by being sweetened to taste, can be turned into delightful flavors that add enjoyment to eating. As a famous food scientist states it, "The fruit acids are softened by sugar. The fruit flavors are developed by sugar. Sugar promotes and facilitates the ingestion of fruits."

There are few people in the world who do not relish the delicious flavors of orange and grapefruit salad, sweetened to taste. One of the most welcome beverages to any palate is hot lemonade.

And remember that stewed fresh apples or pears or stewed dried peaches, prunes or apricots are excellent for breakfast. For dinner, think of apple sauce with pork, and cranberry sauce with any kind of roast fowl or meat. Baked apples or pears and fruit pies are delicious, as well as healthful, for dessert.

Eating should be enjoyable as well as healthful. The use of sugar, on raw fruits and in cooking, is the friend of food enjoyment. The Sugar Institute.

RECORD HEAVY VOTE CAST IN TUESDAY'S ELECTION

The record of any previous year was passed Tuesday with 286 new voters at the polls. Griswold normally in off presidential years is democratic by a substantial majority, yet never has the town failed to go republican when a president is to be elected.

Tuesday registered a complete turnabout with the republicans not getting a look in.

Four years ago Coolidge received in Griswold's vote 527, Davis 466, LaFollette 99.

As compared with 1092 ballots cast in 1924, yesterday's vote with 1377, shows an increase in four years of 285. The late Arthur C. Ladd, in years gone by was able to look over the voting list the night before election, and forecast within a few votes how the town would go. Tuesday, men of political prominence, looked over the 1928 roster and figured that a local democratic victory was to be expected by the addition of close to 300 new electors. It was even so.

L. E. Boucher the newly elected democratic representative demonstrated his popularity by piling up the highest personal vote ever given any man in Griswold, incidentally running 30 votes flat, ahead of his ticket. He is a native of Griswold, born 50 years ago.

PLEASING MUSICAL COMEDY BY YOUNG PEOPLE'S CLUB

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 7—"Marrying Marian," a musical comedy in two acts was presented by The Young People's club Wednesday evening in Finn Opera House, for the benefit of St. Mary's convent. The cast included:

Simpson, a supposed butler, George Boulieu; Miss Prudence McWiffle, an elderly teacher, Sylvia Bryant; Marian Stanton, a popular student, Valeda Boyle; Ruth Ripley, Marian's roommate, Mary Sobetta; Dr. Henry Bohunkus, head of Hillsdale seminary, Charles Saunders; Mrs. Henry Bohunkus, by far the better half, Aldea Crettian; Charles Smith, a professor by proxy, George Ritchie; Cicero Socrates Smith, a janitor by necessity, Francis Liberty.

The chorus included Doris Couture, Helen Davis, Stella Glowacki, Josephine Hourigan, Ruby Harper, Dominica Kargul, Rosa Lamarine, Dena Lafave, Natalie Malek, Dora Morey, Florence Morey, Mary Scaradowski and Annunciade Lemieux. The instrumental music was by Ted Morey's orchestra.

The musical numbers were, act 1, opening chorus, Ensemble; Come Over Tonight, I Want You, Ruth, Marian and Chorus; Let Me Show You the Way to Happyland, Charles and Marian; Let's Get Together, Ensemble; He's a Small Town Sport, Charles and Cicero; Unconsciously, Ensemble; Dreams, Dreams, Dreams, Charles, Marian and Chorus; act 2, Gee, I Wish I Had a Sweetheart Just Like You, Marian and Chorus; My Trixie from Dixieland, Ruth and Chorus; A Game that Two Can Play, Charles, Marian and Chorus; Here's Your Hat, What's Your Hurry? Simpson, Bohunkus, Chorus; Let's Get Together, Ensemble.

The cast was coached by Rev. Nicolas Caron, which fact in itself, insured the success of the performance. He has had remarkable ability in bringing out the talent in the young people in previous plays, and Wednesday night's presentation called forth many compliments for the actors and coach. The chorus was trained by Theodore Morey, who was also the manager of the event, and received his due share of praise. Francis Liberty, who showed unusual talent in the religious play last April, was equally as good in the role of a comedy star. His act with Sylvia Bryant, the elderly teacher, was very amusing.

Faith chapter, O. E. S., holds its meeting this (Thursday) evening.

Finn's Friday night, four big acts, B. F. Keith, vaudeville.—Adv.

FOUR CAUSES ARE CITED FOR LONGER LIFE SPAN

ATLANTA, Ga., (AP)—Four main causes for the increase in life's average span are cited by Dr. Llewellys F. Barker, president of the Inter-State Post Graduate Medical association of North America.

All four causes result in disease prevention, he says. They are: endowment of clinics to discover causes of disease; attraction of greater numbers of young men of ability to this work; rise in the average level of training among practicing physicians; and periodic health examinations.

Yes, Sir . . . This Man Opened the Door of Your Home, Too!

NEW England has one magnificent ex-peddler who has become a prince in the international realm of industry because he found how to use a formula of modern magic that would open the doors of four thousand homes at once, instead of one.

The historical facts of this man's business career have added more actual wealth and more living romance to the achievements of modern industry in New England than any Far Eastern fable has ever added to the world's fondest dreams of avarice.

Today this man is the president of a company which is one of the world's largest producers of household cleaning equipment. A little over twenty years ago he was one of several hundred employees in a Boston public utilities company, when he developed a simplified method of making a more effective product.

IN SISTER'S CELLAR

His first work-shop was the cellar of his sister's home. His first capital was $400. In the morning he made with his own hands as many of these little brushes as he could. In the afternoon he set out on foot to sell his wares from house to house.

Soon he was able to sell more than he could make himself. He hired help and covered more of the countryside.

Experienced merchants laughed at him. "It can't be done," they told him. They said the day of house-to-house selling was over, that the only profitable way to sell goods was through the accepted channels of wholesale and retail distribution.

But this obstinate New Englander persisted. Through the means of the printed word . . . printed salesmanship, called advertising . . . he sent his story into more and more homes. Through this same means he lifted his whole organization out of the ordinary house-to-house canvasser class. He built for each representative in his employ a prestige, a sort of personal recognition, which has already opened the door of nearly every home in North America.

From a few square feet of space in his sister's cellar has sprung a modern, sun-lit factory covering acres and acres of floor space. From a one-man business has grown an international organization of over 5000 people. His company now operates one of the largest sales forces in the country and their efforts add about $15,000,000 every year to the total annual volume of industrial business in New England.

THE "OPEN SESAME"

Advertising was the "Open Sesame" which swung wide so many doors. On a printed page he told his story in a million homes at once . . . and his 4500 salesmen found their product and their company well known when they arrived. From an expenditure of $3500, in 1918, this company's annual advertising appropriation has grown to approximately $400,000.

DANIELSON

DANIELSON SETTLES BACK AFTER HECTIC CAMPAIGN

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 7—This town settled down today to its normal condition. Digesting of election returns was a diversion that will precede the relegation of politics to the far background. Republicans generally were not only surprised but highly elated over the sweeping victory of President-elect Hoover, while the Democrats were greatly depressed over the unexpectedly weak showing of Governor Smith.

While republicans with few exceptions never wavered in their belief that their party candidate would be elected, there were many of the party who felt certain that the election would be very close—even that the result might remain in doubt for a day or two. Democrats, on the other hand, were in hundreds of instances in this town firm in their belief that Governor Smith could be elected. That he could not even carry his own state of New York came as a sad blow for them, and at once convinced them that having failed there he had no chance at all in the nation as a whole.

However, the democracy of Killingly is not discouraged. It made the best showing ever in Tuesday's election and greatly reduced the normal republican majorities of the past. Its objective, as set forth by some party workers today, is to recruit several hundred more voters for its ranks, something it is entirely possible to do, it is pointed out, by inducing many who are qualified to vote but who have never become voters to be made.

There were no demonstrations here over the republican victory. Many hundreds of people, it developed today, sat beside radio sets up to the time, very early this morning, when Governor Smith admitted defeat and sent his message of congratulation to Mr. Hoover.

Two Rhode Islanders—Giovanni Conzio and John Pammone, both of Providence, were before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court today to answer to a charge of hunting without having licenses to do so. The men were apprehended by Deputy Game Warden Gurdon E. Withey while they were seeking game on the old Ayer farm in the South Killingly section of the town. They made no defence of their actions in coming into this state to hunt illegally, so were found guilty and fined $5 each, with costs, each paying a total of $14.94. These are the first arrests of the present hunting season in Killingly of hunters for being without a license.

The mock election held at Killingly high and Junior high schools yesterday gave the republican candidate for president a vote of 209 against 126 for the democratic candidate. The socialist candidate for the presidency received two votes. The election was conducted insofar as was possible strictly according to form, with ballots that were similar in form to the official ones, and with checkers, booth tenders, ballot box tenders, etc. The election proceeding is regarded as having been useful in interesting the pupils in civic matters and in teaching them early in life the actual procedure of voting, knowledge that will be of value to them in later life.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Ida Dumas

Mrs. Ida Dumas, 76, died today at the home of her son, Peter Dumas, at Ballouville. With her husband, Peter Dumas, Sr., she came to Ballouville during the summer for a visit with her children resident in that place. Thirteen weeks ago she fell down stairs at the home of her son and was so seriously injured that her death eventually resulted. Though she and her husband are residents of Montreal, they lived for years at Ballouville, where Mr. Dumas conducted a livery stable. She leaves her husband and the following children: Peter, Adelard and Clara, all of Ballouville, and Mitchell, of Montreal.

Beginning next week many hundreds of residents of this town have another tax adjustment to make with the town of Killingly. This has to do with the payment of personal taxes. A period of two months after Nov. 15 is allowed in which to pay this tax. Such personal taxes as are unpaid after the expiration of the time limit will be collected by legal process, as has been done for several years past.

Officers elected Monday evening for the ensuing year by Killingly grange are: Master, Charles E. Haynes; overseer, Kenneth Preston; lecturer, Mrs. Charles A. Downs; steward, Kenneth Warren; assistant steward, Stanley Barstow; chaplain, Mrs. N. A. Jordan; treasurer, Charles A. Downs; secretary, Mrs. Walter C. Bruce; gatekeeper, William Williams; Ceres, Gladys Child; Pomona, Vivian Converse; Flora, Mrs. Hosea Greene; lady assistant steward, Estella Converse; member of the executive committee for three years Harriet L. Wood. These officers are to be installed and will begin their terms on January 21.

A. P. Woodward, in his dual capacity of chief of the fire department and fire marshal is now regularly engaged in inspection of buildings and premises within the limits of the borough with a view to reducing fire hazards and menaces to public health. These inspections will continue until all of the buildings in the borough limits of Danielson have been looked over. Chief Woodward makes wherever necessary such suggestions as he deems necessary for the correction of unfavorable conditions.

His hundreds of friends here will be interested in the success that Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., achieved the past week with his annual parish bazaar at Estevan, Sask., where he has been located the past two years since being transferred from St. James' parish in Danielson. Large crowds came to the fair not only from Estevan but also from other communities in the territory. The gross receipts in three nights were about $3,000, of which $2,000 is net profit and will be added to the parish funds.

"Esmond" blankets, 66x80, anniversary sale price, $1.98, not more than one to a customer. F. E. Bitgood, The Big Store, Hyde Block, Main St., Danielson.—Adv.

Mrs. N. G. Williams of Spring street, formerly of Brooklyn, was taken to the Day-Kimball hospital at Putnam this afternoon to undergo a surgical operation.

George A. Quinn of School street is to enter a private hospital at New London to undergo a surgical operation.

Preparations are practically complete for beginning the annual roll call of Danielson chapter of the American Red Cross.

Representatives-elect A. W. Williams and W. S. Hunter, republicans, succeed themselves in office, having represented the town during the 1927 session of the legislature.

No candidate for political office in the town of Killingly ever has received as many votes—2381—as did Judge Sabin S. Russell in Tuesday's election, he having the nominations of both parties and benefited by the record vote cast.

Early seekers after newspapers in Danielson were gratified this morning to find The Bulletin on sale here at 4:45 a. m., through the fact that the issue was sent here in a special motor vehicle out of Norwich.

It was indicated this afternoon that there will be no general suspension of business in Danielson next Monday in observance of Armistice day. No formal observance of the day has been arranged for this town.

John M. Bessette, democrat, who will represent Brooklyn at the coming session of the legislature, has previously served in the same capacity for that town, where he has been collector of taxes for many years.

Such election bets as were made in Danielson were being settled today. The largest one heard of was $50 on Hoover against $10 on Smith.

Raymond Burgess, injured when the tank truck he was operating went off the highway and collided with a tree near the Gallup farm on the Providence road a fortnight ago, is reported as making progress toward recovery. Mr. Burgess' home is in Providence.

Smith plates were being removed from automobiles today, though some of the machines carrying such markers were still displaying them.

Joseph Pieretti of Pieretti Brothers, general contractors at the new bank building, is to leave here within a few days to supervise work on the construction of an addition to a telephone company building in New London.

Joseph Harding, familiarly known as "Harry Lauder," was sent by Judge W. Fenner Woodward this morning to serve 30 days in the county jail at Brooklyn. Harding was released from jail upon completing a previous sentence Tuesday morning and promptly started to celebrate election day by becoming intoxicated.

Considering the number participating in the election, there were very few discarded ballots in yesterday's voting in this town, nor were there as many split tickets as had been anticipated.

PUTNAM

ONLY ONE REPUBLICAN RETURNED TO OFFICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 7—Republicans who have held office in Putnam for many years, returned to their homes after the local returns had been announced from the municipal building, overwhelmingly defeated by the immense democratic tidal wave that swept into office every democratic candidate except their candidate for judge of probate, this office being conceded to Judge Henry N. Bengit, present incumbent, by a majority of 154 votes over his democratic opponent, James J. Charron.

Putnam, the home city of Miss Katherine Byrne, vice-chairman of the republican state central committee, will send to Hartford at the next session of the legislature two democratic representatives, Leon A. Talbot and J. Otis Fox. Both Mr. Fox and Mr. Talbot scored heavily over their opponents, William Pechie, present representative, and William Davison, each receiving more than a 200 majority.

The national and state tickets, like the legislative ticket, went over with a decisive majority, much to the surprise of the democratic leaders. Alexander Gilman of this city, democratic candidate for senator from the 28th district, carried the larger towns in the district but his opponent took the lead by a small majority when returns from the town of Killingly gave Walter C. Brown of Ashford an advantage which could not be overcome by Gilman's lead in the smaller towns of the district.

In the election of Mr. Talbot and Mr. Fox, Putnam people today believed they had made an excellent choice. Both of the newly elected legislators are leading Putnam business men and have hosts of friends within the city and town. Mr. Fox is the son of the late John O. Fox, former representative. Mr. Talbot is a native of Putnam. He is an ex-service man, with a war record of a year in France. He is affiliated with many of the civic and fraternal organizations of the city.

There was a vast amount of public interest displayed in the day's election and hundreds flocked to the theatres and radio stores, lodge rooms and other places where the news of the standings were being received and flashed onto screens. Upon receipt of the early Hoover landslide, the streets cleared and nearly everyone left before midnight.

Capt. John J. McGarry, commanding officer of the headquarters company, 43rd division, special troops of this city, Capt. Edward F. Perry, commanding officer of the medical detachment in Danielson, and Lieut. Anthony Conora, commanding officer of military police company of Hartford, have been appointed as a board of investigation and will leave tomorrow for Branford where they will investigate a case that grew out of an accident which occurred in camp at Niantic last summer. Captain McGarry is chairman of the board of investigation.

From the homes of several staunch members of the local republican party the national colors were placed in the breeze, apparently denoting their happiness in the success of the Hoover-Curtis ticket in Tuesday's election.

Tuesday was a hard day for Raymond Clarke of Hartford, even though it was election day, for he was arraigned before Justice Percy J. Tourtellotte in justice court in North Grosvenordale and was fined $225 on a charge of abandoning a truckload of liquor on the state road between North Grosvenordale and Thompson. The car was discovered by the police and with the aid of the motor vehicle department it was learned that its owners resided in Hartford. The case was worked up by officers of the Danielson state police barracks.

November 11 will be on Nov. 12 when a special celebration of the tenth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice will be observed in Putnam. The program of exercises will commence with a parade that will begin at 11 o'clock in the morning and will form at the Soldiers' monument on Grove street instead of Union square as in former years.

Maj. A. D. McIntyre has been selected as marshal and he in turn has appointed the following aides: Capt. E. F. Parry, Lieut. Francis H. Murphy, Lieut. James F. English, Lieut. Francis E. Metcalf and Pvt. Harvey Grinsell. Three bodies of music have been secured by the general committee and are St. Mary's Boy Scout band, Ballouville Fife and Drum corps and the East Woodstock Cornet band.

The line of march will be down Grove street to South Main to Front and Pomfret streets, to Church street to Woodstock avenue, to Marshall street to Providence street, to Church street to Pomfret to Memorial bridge to Main street to Front to School and disbanding at the Putnam high school grounds, where the public speaking will take place. The address of the day will be delivered by Rev. Richard H. McLaughlin, chaplain of the 169th regiment. Mayor Charles A. Richard is also to deliver an address of welcome.

Nearly every civic and fraternal body in the city has been invited to take part in the parade and a majority of them have answered. The committee in the affirmative. Armistice day falls on Sunday, but will be observed on Monday and all mills, factories, stores and schools will be closed during the day.

Students enrolled in the schools of Putnam, above the fourth grade, went to school this evening at 6:45 p. m., and remained in session until 9:15. During the evening many of the parents of the children paid visits to the class rooms and enjoyed the open house welcome and opportunity to watch their children at study, arranged for them through Supt. of Schools Leon N. Farrin as a part of American Educational week. At the high school an exhibition girls' basketball game was played and a recital was rendered by the combined music organizations under the direction of Miss Mitchell.

The governmental affairs of the town of Thompson, like Putnam, have rested in the columns of the republican party since the Civil war, but the outcome of the election Tuesday indicated that a sweeping democratic victory was had and the little town has left to join democracy's ranks for the next two years. The town comprises the villages of Mechanicsville, Grosvenordale and North Grosvenordale, Fabyan, Thompson Town, West and East Thompsons and Wilsonville. Gov. Alfred E. Smith and the entire democratic state ticket received a 2 to 1 majority of the 1,500 votes cast.

Attorney Wilfred E. Duquette, 23 years of age and recently admitted to the bar, tossed his hat into the political ring from the village of Grosvenordale and was elected to the legislature on the democratic ticket by a majority of 41 votes. He will go to the next session of general assembly with the honor of being the youngest legislator in the state. Esdras Blanchette, also of Grosvenordale, a democrat, won a decisive victory over his republican opponent, Frank Knight, of Fabyan.

No history of the town records an instance, during the past three generations, when Thompson scored a democratic victory during a presidential year.

One of the final acts of the class of 1928 of Putnam high school will be the presentation of the class play, which will take place at the Bradley theatre on Dec. 17. The senior class has selected a comedy drama and one of the year's greatest stage hits, "Adam and Eva," as their choice in the annual dramatic venture.

The play was written by Guy Bolton and is very adaptable to amateur performance, containing among its lines several phrases that will result in producing storms of chuckles and laughs. It will be directed by John F. Heald of Webster.

Miss Dorothy Woodis, vice-president of the class, and Russell Sherman, a member of the gridiron squad, have been selected to play the leading roles. Other characters who will appear in the cast will be Anne McDonnell, Thomas Deberardinis, Katherine Hanaban, Hazel Ames, Chester Hale, George Holbrook and Leonard Shepherd.

Principal Ellis of Woodstock academy today made an announcement of the program that will take place at the academy campus on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 13, when the recently completed Hall Memorial gymnasium will be dedicated. Col. Louis R. Cheney of Hartford and Mrs. Joseph M. Drohn of Philadelphia will be the leading speakers. The program is arranged as follows and will commence at 2:30 p. m.: Invocation, Rev. B. Thomas Powell of Woodstock; report of the chairman of the building committee to the Alumni association; presentation of the gymnasium by the president of the Alumni association to the trustees of the academy; acknowledgment of the gift by the Board of trustees; address, by Mrs. Joseph M. Drohn of Philadelphia; address, by Christopher LaFarge of Warren, LaFarge & Clarke, architects, who supervised and directed construction of the building; address by Colonel Cheney of Hartford. There will also be an evening program, 8 to 9:30 o'clock, followed by dancing.

The committee has extended invitations to donors of the new building and to the alumni, but extends a cordial invitation to the public to attend the exercises both in the afternoon and the evening.

The Hall gymnasium is one of the most modern athletic buildings in the county and is beautifully equipped for the games of the boys of the academy, which has for many years been handicapped by the lack of necessary space to hold the engagements with other schools in the county and state.

RECORD SALES OF 4,891,200 SHARES MARKED RAPIDLY RISING MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—(AP)—Stock market traders greeted the new national administration with an orgy of buying today which taxed the capacity of the exchange almost to the limit, and piled up the largest total of sales ever recorded in a rising market. Transactions aggregated 4,891,200 shares. This figure was exceeded only on June 12, when sales crossed the 5,000,000 mark in a falling market.

Oils and coppers were purchased in enormous volume, and utilities were prominent in the advance. The buying of these shares was based on the belief that a number of developments, including mergers, have been held in abeyance until after election, and also upon the fact that they have not participated proportionately in the long upswing of the so-called "Coolidge market." About 16 oils and 10 coppers were bid up to new high prices for the year or longer, as well as a few merchandising issues and specialties. A wide assortment of stocks mounted 5 to 15 points and the Associated Press average of 20 industrials rose to a new high at 229.63 up about 3.10. The ticker ran for 48 minutes after the close.

The "bullish" response to the overwhelming victory of Hoover was stimulated by a number of favorable monetary and industrial developments. Call money opened at 6 per cent. for the first time in about a fortnight, and was available in the outside market during the day at substantial concessions from that rate. Time money was also easier, and the credit outlook again enhanced by gold imports. Sterling exchange fell to a new 1923 low increasing the probability that there will be further purchases of the yellow metal in London.

Steel centers reported an almost negligible seasonal decline, and "Iron Age" described the pig iron market as "suggestive of boom conditions" and pointed to a probability of an advance of $2 to $3 a ton in steel sheet prices. Arthur W. Cutten, one of the leading stock market operators, hailed the result of the election as promising good business for at least two years, and was particularly optimistic regarding the outlook in the oil industry.

A number of extra dividends and stock split-ups were announced during the day. Standard Oils of California and Nebraska declared extra dividends of 50 cents, and directors of National Sugar Refining proposed a 4-for-1 split up. A 5-for-1 split was rumored for Rio Grande Oil.

Kennecott led the coppers with a spurt of 12 points to a new peak price at 140. Anaconda, Calumet and Arizona, Chile, Granby, Cerro De Pasco, and Howe Sound climbed about 3 to 7 points. In the oils, Texas, Pacific and Oil rose more than 4 points to nearly 35, more than double the years low price, while Barnsdall B, Amerada, Mexican Seaboard, Pan American, Marland, Sinclair, Shell Union, and Standards of California and New Jersey pushed up 1 to 3 points to new top prices.

Among the sharper advances, Wright Aero mounted about 15, Curtiss Aero 12 and Timken Roller Bearing about 10 points to a new peak just under 165. Warner Brothers issues were in brisk demand, both the common and the class A selling up about 7 points to 135, a new record price for the common. American Express, American Linseed, Case Threshing, International Business Machine, and National Biscuit were among shares mounting 4 to 9 points.

Woolworth and National Bellas Hess led the merchandising shares with spurts of about 8 points, the former touching a new high price. Montgomery Ward forged ahead 6 points, and First National and Kroeger Stores sold up about 4 and 5 points to new tops.

In the utilities, Commonwealth Power, and North American advanced more than 2 points to new tops, while Peoples Gas shot up nearly 6 points. Railway shares were firmer, Texas and Pacific gaining 2 points.

Considerable realizing came in the market at various times. General Motors pushed ahead about 4 points crossing its previous high, then cancelled all of its gain and suffered a fractional net loss in the closing transactions. Chrysler also sold up about 3 points, but closed nearly a point lower. Radio likewise made a good gain during the session, but fell more than 2 points before the close. U. S. Steel closed fractionally lower after displaying early firmness, and American Bank Note yielded 2 points to realizing.

The commodity markets were irregular, corn improved on reports of more rain in the belt, while cotton was inclined to heaviness on bearish private crop estimates. Wheat eased as export demand remained light.

Foreign exchanges were quiet, sterling sagging to $4.81 3-8, a new 1923 low.

A Seldom Photographed Lady

Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, wife of Commander Byrd, snapped just before her husband left for the Antartic.

The Cat and the Fiddle

AT LAST!

Mrs. Aloysius Ganymede heaved a triumphant sigh and tried vainly to conceal the self-conscious flutterings coincident with this moment of great intensity. She was elected to the chairmanship of the club's musical entertainment committee!

All her life Mrs. Aloysius Ganymede had longed to be important—to be an influential force. She had been a good and conscientious wife and mother, but her husband had succeeded financially and her children had wedded successfully without any help from her.

Then she had joined the club, thinking that here at least she could expend her energies. But not until this moment had her potentialities been anything but X in the algebraic equation.

Now, however, her chance had come. A comforting majority of votes had given her the generalship for which her heart had hungered!

The weeks preceding the club's opening musicale were weeks of feverish anxiety for Mrs. Aloysius Ganymede. Only to herself did she admit (and then ever so cautiously) that she knew no musical artists, not even where one secured such artists. But an artist she must have—the club depended on her. And with that thought Mrs. Aloysius Ganymede's bosom expanded with pride.

It was less than a week before the scheduled musicale that her anxious searchings met with results. A friend of her neighbor across the hall knew a friend whose son knew a musician of reputed genius! So armed with memoranda which would lead her to the neighbor's friend and thence to the friend's friend, and from there to the musician of reputed genius, Mrs. Aloysius Ganymede set out, her cheeks pink with the first flush of triumph.

The club's assembly hall was filled to capacity for the opening musicale. Every one who counted was there, arrayed in the color and mode of the moment. In fact, it was decidedly the kind of gathering the society editors would describe as "brilliant."

"Members and guests"—the buzz of conversation subsided. Mrs. Aloysius Ganymede was addressing the assemblage. "I have the honor to introduce M. Pierre Renee (ah! her rehearsals had not been in vain), premier violinist of France, who has played before all the courts of Europe, and who is honoring us here today on his brief visit to the United Sattes. M. Pierre Renee." She bowed herself out and M. Pierre Renee bowed himself in while the assembly hall reverberated with enthusiastic applause.

The artist, his program and rendition slightly puzzled the audience. There was a certain immaturity—a lack of poise. "Hearts and Flowers," "Humoresque," the "Melody in F" were all very well, but these modern selections were hardly to be expected of the premier violinist of France.

Still—he was probably condescendingly polite to the American taste! Was it—could it be, that he was playing off pitch? But no, of course not—impossible from one who had played in the courts of Europe. With this conclusion the French artist, unbeknown to himself, became master of the situation.

Loud applause rewarded M. Pierre Renee's efforts. And a moment later a flushed but triumphant Mrs. Aloysius Ganymede was being surrounded by an eager crowd.

"How did you do it?" They pressed her for an answer.

"Influential connections," smiled Mrs. Aloysius Ganymede, endeavoring to keep the tone casual. "I'm so sorry you all could not meet monsieur, but he had an important appointment with Mr. Dusk of the Symphony orchestra, you know."

And monsieur?

"They gave me a swell hand," he was confiding boyishly to the members of the Jolly Gin Jazz band. 'But I wouldn't do it again for twice the money. It's profitable, but is it art?" —Exchange.

Now You Can Banish Pimples In Few Days

Costs But a Few Cents to Have Clean, Clear Skin You'll Be Proud Of.

No matter how many things you have tried to rid yourself of pimples and blackheads or how expensive the treatments have been you are not doing yourself justice until you get a 35 cent box of Peterson's Ointment and give it a chance to free your skin from all blemishes and make it soft, velvety and good to look upon.

Mrs. Minnie Jones of Louisville writes: "Peterson's Ointment sure is fine for blackheads. My face was covered with them, but after using the ointment they are all gone."

And in a letter about pimples, Miss Genevieve Linehan of Bradford, Mass., writes: "I had tried most every kind of ointment for pimples, but found none as good as Peterson's Ointment. I am on my first box and my face is nearly clear. I am very pleased with it."

Druggists everywhere sell Peterson's Ointment. It clears the skin. 35 cents a box.

SPECIAL RE-OPENING SERVICE AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

A large congregation was present at the re-opening service held in the First Congregational church Sunday. The auditorium has been decorated according to the latest design, a new floor laid and runners to match the color scheme, the whole producing an effect beautiful, pleasing and dignified. The people who contributed both money and labor for this undertaking are justly proud of the result.

The efficient organist, Mrs. Fred Burgess, was at the organ. Mrs. F. N. Taylor sang very sweetly "God Careth for Me," and Misses Eleanor Burgess and Helen Taylor sang a duet most acceptably. An impressive feature of this service was the dedication to the Lord of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jensen. Dr. English of Hartford was the speaker and gave a heartening address in which he showed that the Congregational church in Connecticut was never stronger numerically, financially and spiritually than it is now. Not the least interesting was the fact that the children of foreigners are showing a marked interest in our democratic churches. He told of one Congregational church made up almost entirely of Jewish people. This interesting and inspiring service concluded with the celebration of the holy communion.

At the C. E. meeting Sunday evening Messrs. Yerrington, Kneeland and Blakeslee gave interesting accounts of the Older Boys' conference which they attended as delegates.

Friday evening the Norwich C. E. union is to hold its annual banquet and reunion. Prominent speakers will address the gathering.

Next Sunday the pastor, Rev. Albert Vey, is to preach an Armistice day sermon. The juvenile sermon theme will be "The Converted Wolf." Five minutes around the question box will be devoted to the question: "Is the World Getting Better?"

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

"A hit" was the prediction of previewers who saw Paramount's all-star production, "Forgotten Faces," which opens today at the Palace theatre. "A hit" has been the consistent description of reviewers who have witnessed the picture since its release. It is one of the first all-star productions on Paramount's new "Whole Show Program."

"Forgotten Faces" is a hit because it has all the elements of "a hit:" Swift, powerful, dramatic story; an all-star cast; a good director; production value; great camera work.

A splendid story. The hold-up of a gambling house in the first two hundred feet. An element of mystery introduced at once. Authentic penitentiary atmosphere with an attempted prison break that will give any audience a lift. Then a strange unusual climactic twist. A paroled convict drives his degraded wife to the verge of madness with the meaningful scent of Heliotrope to keep her away from his daughter. A startling denouement.

An unusual picture, filled with action, entertainment and logical sequences from beginning to end. A picturization of a man's consecration and a father's sacrifice. A picture of contrasts, of love and hate, of society and crook life, of nobility and degradation. A picture of tender romance and splendid sacrifice, of gentle devotion and ruthless vengeance.

A remarkable cast of players headed by Clive Brook, Mary Brian Eaclanova, William Powell, Fred Kohler and Jack Luden portrayed their parts in an admirable manner.

Broadway Theatre.

The terrific power that lies in every motion picture is something few people realize. The fan views a film and is impressed with it. Parts of it thrill him. Possibly some of it gives him a new slant on life. It would surprise him to know that the same reactions are experienced by a million other fans.

Plays—successful ones—cater to many thousands, but motion pictures cater to millions. As a case in point one might take as an example Warner Bros.' production showing Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer." Before this film was three months old it had been witnessed by over a half million people. In the first twelve weeks of its run in New York it attracted nearly a quarter of a million people. On the first day of its release in twelve key cities it attracted over a hundred thousand people.

It can be seen from this that to attract a million people would be nothing at all wonderful for this picture.

Al Jolson's super-special, "The Singing Fool," bids fair to outclass even its phenomenally successful predecessor.

Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool" at the Broadway theatre now.

Yokohama Maid

The following is the cast of the delightful musical play to be given Nov. 21, at the Palace theatre:

The principals—Edward Connelly, William F. Delaney, Nicholas Spellman, Robert Enright, Joseph F. Tighe, M. J. Farrell; Josie Hartle, Anna Stockdale, Josephine Dempsy, Doris White, Eileen Hinchey, Veronica Roberts.

Chorus—Charlotte Tracy, Margaret Keeley, Ester Fahey, Eleanor Barry, Rose Dennis, Eleanor Seward, Margaret Fahey, Eva M. Duff, Helen Payment, Lucy Woods, Marion Shea, Doris White; Arthur Tremblay, Arthur Tellier, Joseph Tighe, James F. Barry, John Crowe, James Quinn, Francis Tracey, John J. Barry, James Gay, John R. Barry, Joseph Selvidio, John Ryan.

Children—Joseph Cummings, John Carroll, Clifford Sullivan, Russell Aubrey, Florence Kimball, Mary Brennan, Virginia White, Catherine Sullivan, Alice Roberts.

From this cast the public can judge that this play will be capably handled. There are good singers in this group, the music is tuneful and good—some of the airs will be popular and will be whistled by many, there is enough comedy throughout the play to please all, so get interested in this coming production and be on hand on the evening of Nov. 21.

It is expected that a large delegation of members from the Norwich Town T. P. S. C. E., will attend the meeting Friday evening of Norwich C. E. union, at the Congregational church in Lebanon. There has been a contest running in the union for the best poster advertising this meeting, the winners to be announced November 8th. The poster made by the Third Baptist society of C. Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey is arranging a special service for Sunday, November 11th at the Congregational church, commemorating armistice day.

At the Congregational church the annual thank offering for the League of Service is to be placed in envelopes distributed for that purpose or in any envelope marked "thank offering" and laid upon the contribution plate any Sunday in November the Thanksgiving month.

The work committee of the League of Service, has planned a meeting for Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Learned on East Town street.

The Modern Priscilla club of the Methodist church held a meeting at the parsonage Tuesday night. The club is to conduct a class in basketry and Mrs. Helen Haviland Potter is to be teacher. Those present were Mrs. Lewis Aldrich, Mrs. LeRoy Miner, Loretta Dilette, Gertrude Brown, Inez Edmiston, Effie Ladd, Alice Brown, Ruth Lathrop. The next meeting will be held Tuesday night.

Next Sunday evening there will be two special services in the Methodist church. The first will be at 6.30. The superintendent of Norwich district, Rev. Myron E. Genter will be the speaker, subject, "What is Being Done for and Against World Peace." At 7.15 Rev. Mr. Genter will preach the evening sermon. Following the sermon he will administer the sacrament of the Lord's supper. At the close of the service the officials of the church will hold the third quarterly conference.

The Boy Scout troop and the Wolf Cub pack, Norwich Town have grown in membership so that future admittance to either organization will be limited. When the pastor of the Methodist church, Rev. George Warren Potter started the two societies for the boys of the church and community he announced that only a certain number would be received into either organization. Mr. Potter who is acting as Scoutmaster is greatly helped in the work by Lewis Aldrich the assistant scoutmaster and Ralph Smith a senior at N. F. A., who helps during the game periods. In the Wolf Cub pack Mr. Potter is cubmaster and is ably assisted by Richard Cormier a Boy Scout who was recently appointed assistant cubmaster. Thirteen of the Wolf Cubs have taken their tenderpad test and are studying the requirements for their first star. The last two Cubs advanced were Richard Snow and Edward Snow. A feature of the scout meeting is the check on points for efficiency. Points are scored for being on time, being neat in uniform, having clean hands and nails, for church and Sunday school attendance, for deportment at the meeting and for tests passed in scouting. The church attendance is for loyalty and attendance at the church where they hold membership. At the last meeting of the scouts the patrol in charge of Richard Cormier, patrol leader scored 385 points and the patrol in charge of Patrol Leader Donald Waterman scored 250 points.

COMPLETING WORK LINE-UP ON NORWICH INN PROJECT

Sixty-six per cent of the working organization for the Norwich Inn Builders financial campaign was the status reached Wednesday night with Foreman Larrabee of the carpenters as the first union leader to qualify one hundred per cent. The race for supremacy to be the first over the line was a keen one which narrowed down to Foremen Nay, Mathewson and Larrabee, all close contenders for the first honors. Mathewson of the excavators is ninety per cent organized, as is Nay of the Bricklayers.

Union 99 T. N. T. under the general foremanship of F. Russell Smith is 68 per cent organized. Union 23 I. W. W. with Charles S. W. Taggart as general foreman needs 42 per cent to complete his organization, as he is 58 per cent toward the goal. Ernest C. Rodier, general foreman of Union 13 of the A. F. of L., equals Smith's record of 68 per cent while the engineering department under the capable leadership of R. W. Perkins heads the progress record with 80 per cent organization.

The high spot in Wednesday's happenings was the shifting of campaign headquarters from the Thayer building to the former headquarters of the republican campaign committee on Broadway near Main street where there will be a display of inn plans and other data and views of various other of the Treadway Inns in New England.

The change has met with high favor and already a quickening of interest is noted by the number of visitors who have dropped in to wish the project success or to inquire about the method of investing in the stock of the Norwich Inn. Literature is being prepared on the subject which is designed to answer many questions in the minds of prospective investors, which will be available as soon as it is off the press.

A recent letter from Clarence C. Wells of Middlebury, Conn., to E. E. Larrabee of this city on the subject of the Middlebury Inn at that place throws an interesting light on the effect the new Inn has had on the town itself. This information is doubly interesting owing to the fact that the Middlebury Inn is one of the Treadway system of Inns, operated under the same management the Norwich Inn will have.

He says in part "Our Middlebury Inn has been popular since its opening, it is very well operated, to the satisfaction of public and stockholders. Our relations with Mr. L. G. Treadway have been of the best and I have a high personal regard for him both as an operator and a hotel man. He ranks very high with all the hotel men in New England.

"The hotel has paid large dividends indirectly to the village merchants and to owners of real estate and has changed the outlook of the whole community. Our capital expenditure has given us a first class Inn, equipment that we all take great pride in showing and furnished throughout artistically and simply so that it impresses people at once as home like and comfortable."

Chairman Park's Letter

William G. Park has written an open letter to some 2,000 Norwich people in which he expresses his conviction of the need of additional hotel facilities. His letter follows:

Dear Fellow Citizen:

Norwich needs a modern inn. That has been impressed upon us with increasing emphasis by visiting travelers, by authoritative analysts of our city, and especially by our own citizens. Definite steps have now been taken to give Norwich a high-class community-owned inn on a beautiful site at the Golf Links. I want you to know more about the plans during the next several weeks.

The inn is to be a Norwich institution in which the interests of everyone are to be considered. As a stopping place for the discriminating traveler and vacationist; as an attractive center for social activities for women and men; as a rendezvous for those who enjoy out-of-door sport, and as a sound investment it will meet all requirements.

The Norwich Inn will be associated with a group of similar houses now operated in New England under the management of L. G. Treadway, president of the New England Hotel Men's association. All of the factors contributing to the great success of his other inns are surpassed by the Norwich location; the local and nearby contributing population is more dense; a greater volume of motor traffic passes the proposed site; the close proximity of recreational facilities afforded by the Golf club is most unusual; the vacation season is greatly lengthened, and competition of a comparable type is lacking in this area. Conservative financial planning, which nevertheless insures high class appointments, will keep the inn within the range of reasonable support from Norwich and its visitors. All these considerations promise unusual success.

This is a Norwich project for the benefit of the whole community. Further information will come to you to which I hope you will give your interested attention. In turn, I personally shall welcome your views. I trust you will be interested in the inn, both as one who wishes to see its facilities available for your own use and as one ready to support the move to secure it.

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM G. PARK,
Chairman.

TWO ENTERTAINING TALKS BEFORE ROTARY CLUB

Two very interesting talks were given at the noonday luncheon of the Norwich Rotary on Wednesday at the Wauregan hotel, one by Harold D. Larrabee on Vocational Service—What It Means to Me, and the other by Colvin B. Brown, chief of the commercial organization department of the United States chamber of commerce. Both speakers proved very entertaining and in the course of their talks presented numerous points relative to better business.

Mr. Larrabee Speaks

The speakers were introduced by Benjamin H. Palmer, Jr., chairman of the program committee for November. Mr. Larrabee was the first speaker and said, in part:

The term "vocational service" is merely a new name for business methods. It means as it has always meant, the application of Rotary principles in our business, our profession and throughout all business relationships. The standard of Rotary service is clearly set up in the code of ethics, and means simply that we must treat others as we would want to be treated.

Rotary must not only have a definite meaning to the Rotarian, but must also be known in the community as an influence which is helping to raise all business activities to a higher level. It cannot fulfill this broader mission unless it can be known in the community as representing the highest standard of business ethics.

The fundamental idea of vocational service is the application of the golden rule in our business and professional relations. Is such application a practical thing, or are all these ideas about service mere dreams? Perhaps we have had some sad experience which has caused us to feel that at the next opportunity we will do the other fellow before he does us, justifying that position on the theory that business is business. We may have felt, as some do still feel, that if one party is to gain in any transaction, the other party must lose. It might be well to remember that two wrongs do not make a right, and that in every case we are "the other fellow" to the man on the other side of the issue. It is not honest to take any unfair advantage in business transactions, and no deal is good business unless both parties profit thereby. How many men can we call to mind who having dishonestly made a fortune, are now in a position to keep or to enjoy that fortune. If the deal is not right it cannot stand, for down all the pages of history we can find nothing fundamentally wrong that has endured. I submit that the application of the golden rule in business—service above self—is not bunk, nor are these ideas of service mere dreams. It is thoroughly practical, for it is the only basis upon which sound profitable and permanent business can exist.

Address by Mr. Brown

Following the inspiring talk by Mr. Larrabee the principal talk of the day was given by Mr. Brown. His talk dealt largely with chamber of commerce matters and the relation of the chamber to the community. During the course of his talk he heartily endorsed the proposed new inn project for Norwich as being beneficial to the community. He spoke in part as follows:

In the development of business enterprises from the time when one man was sole owner, worker and distributor, to present day industry where stock holding owners of a single enterprise number hundreds of thousands, and financing, manufacturing and distributing are separate and specialized functions, we have come finally to realize that what we once considered essential to success no longer applies.

We used to think that profits depended on low wages and long hours and gave little thought to the ability of the public to buy and enjoy what we had to sell. Slowly it has dawned upon us that the purchasing power of the people is what makes for industrial and commercial prosperity, and that low wages and long hours do not necessarily mean high profits for capital, but that the very reverse of this may be true.

Employers are realizing the importance of mental and physical zest on the part of the employe, and that mental zest is in proportion to the increase over a living wage to one that will enable the employe to buy something more than the mere necessities of life; also that there is a point up to which a worker can produce at his highest capacity with zeal in his work, and beyond which he cannot.

But we have gone further than this, and many public utility and other industrial and commercial corporations are encouraging their workers to invest savings in the enterprise so that they may have a profit as well as a wage interest in its success. Recently, at the dedication of a group of buildings to house the Graduate School of Business Administration at Harvard university, Mr. Owen D. Young chairman of the Board of the General Electric company, said that he hoped the day may come when the business organizations of the country will truly belong to the men who are giving their lives and efforts to them.

It may be a long time before that takes place, not because of the selfishness and dominance of capital or the fact that workers lack adequate resources to marshal the capital they seek, but because so many men are unwilling to assume responsibility and take risk and prefer a fixed income without risk to a share in possible profits.

So far as the chamber of commerce is concerned its town is its plant and its field of activity is in doing anything it can to improve the plant. With this in mind it has no difficulty in arranging its program. If it is for the good of the plant it is a proper activity to be undertaken.

More and more chambers of commerce are coming to realize that their growth does not depend so much on their ability to get outsiders to move in with factories and stores as it does

Acids In Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Sourness, Gas and Pain. How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows well.

Alkalizers and laxatives are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try this: Take an digestive aids and instead get from any druggist some Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful of powder or four tablets in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

HAD PIMPLES FOR TWO YEARS
Disfigured Affected Parts. Cuticura Healed.

"I had pimples for two years. My face and back were affected with them. They were very hard, large and red, disfiguring the affected parts. The pimples were so itchy that they caused me to scratch, and scratching caused eruptions.

"I tried many remedies but my attempts were in vain. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and got relief. I continued using them and six weeks later my skin was healed, after using two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, together with the Cuticura Soap." on developing those already established and stimulating others to make a start: that the industrial and commercial growth of our cities has been largely from within and not from without: that the little fellow of today may be the big fellow of tomorrow and that every man who prospers and expands his enterprises adds to the wealth and payroll of the community just as surely, and probably more safely, than the new and unknown enterprise from outside to which financial help in some form may have been extended. What we need to learn is that organized group action can accomplish more in community building if more attention is paid to developing enterprises through local men and capital than in trying to sell our opportunities to outsiders.

At the business session of the meeting President Edward W. Jewett presided and Walter E. Turner was the song leader. The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

MACDONALD SPEAKS UPON PROGRAMME TO BEAUTIFY STATE'S HIGHWAYS

The current events committee of the Women's City club had for its speaker Wednesday evening at the Wauregan hotel State Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald of Hartford, formerly of Putnam, who gave an interesting and enlightening address on Connecticut highways. His honor, Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, in introducing the speaker, alluded to the marked improvement in the highways in the state of Connecticut since Mr. Macdonald had become head of the state highway department five years ago. Not only has there been an appreciable improvement in the highways, but they have been actually beautified, with the planting of flowers and shrubs and the protection of ferns along the roadside, said Mayor Robbins. Mr. Macdonald is a very quiet man, he continued, but he is extremely efficient. Miss Marion L. Bishop, president of the club, presided at the meeting.

In his talk Mr. Macdonald outlined the gradual increase in the construction of highways throughout the state by the department from the beginning to the present time, during which there have been three periods of improvement. He touched upon the budgeting of funds and the re-allocation of highways. Some people believe that a great deal of expense is incurred in re-allocating highways, he said, but this is not correct in all cases. Often times it is cheaper to re-allocate the road than to improve the present highway, as there is a saving in the material used as the distance is shortened. The greater part of his talk was upon the beautification of the highways with the planting of flowers, shrubs, shade trees and the establishment of small parks along the roadside. It is the intention of the state highway department, said Mr. Macdonald, to make use of the abandoned stretches of land between the old highway and the re-allocated highway and transform these spaces into small parks; also to plant shade trees along the highway, so that the driver may ride along in the cool of their shade in the summertime.

At the conclusion of his address a number of those present took the opportunity offered to ask Mr. Macdonald several questions relative to the topic of the evening. Questioned as to the cement posts which had been set out along the highway, the commissioner stated that these were erected as boundary markers or to mark the location of the outlet of culverts. In answering the question on the banking of the curves in the road at Willimantic Mr. Macdonald said that a number of the curves were not banked, as someone had erred, but it was the policy of the department to bank the curves. It will be some time before work is started, but the department has a plan in mind, was the answer of Mr. Macdonald in regard to a question asked upon the possibility of the construction of the highway through Lowthorpe meadows. Asked concerning a railroad crossing at Canaan Mr. Macdonald stated that the highway department expected to skirt the town in building the new road and thereby eliminate that dangerous crossing. He said that the public utilities commission had recommended to the state highway department the elimination of the railroad crossings at Jewett City, Central Village, Taddole's crossing and French's crossing.

After the meeting Mr. Macdonald stated that the contract let out to William H. Haggerty and Co. to build the four mile stretch of state highway between Brooklyn and Killingly had been recalled. This action was taken by the department, said the commissioner, as the contractors were unable to finance it.

They reached Fishers Island late in the evening and remained at a friend's cottage starting out early this morning to fish. # JURY FINDS BOTH TORAL AND CONCEPCION GUILTY

Have Been on Trial on Charges of Murder Growing Out of Toral's Assassination of President-Elect Obregon of Mexico—Death Sentence Was Pronounced on Toral and Imprisonment of 20 Years For the Nun, Mother Concepcion, Who Was Charged With Being "The Intellectual Author" of the Crime.

SAN ANGEL, D. F., Mexico, Nov. 8—(AP)—The jury returned a verdict of guilty for both Jose De Leon Toral and the nun, Concepcion, at the conclusion of their trial at 4:50 p. m., today.

The jury was out only one hour and 40 minutes.

Toral and Concepcion have been on trial for the past week on charges of murder growing out of Toral's assassination of President-elect Alvaro Obregon on July 17. It was the defense contention that the crime was of a political nature and as such, under Mexican law, could not draw the death penalty. The prosecution asked only life imprisonment for the nun, Concepcion, who was charged as "the intellectual author" of the crime.

The judge pronounced a sentence of death for Toral and of 20 years imprisonment for the nun, Concepcion. The defense announced that it expected to appeal to the Mexican supreme court.

When the verdict had been announced everybody in the courtroom stood and officers in the room saluted with their swords, the blades flashing in the late afternoon light, while policemen stood at attention and saluted with their hands.

As the judge finished the pronouncement of his sentence Toral arose and asked, "May I speak?"

The judge answered him, "No, you can speak later."

More guards formed around Toral and Mother Concepcion as from the outside could be heard the cheers of a thousand or more who had gathered there awaiting a verdict.

In the near confusion in the courtroom a spokesman for the jury asked the judge to give them guards to escort them home. The judge answered that this was unnecessary but the foreman insisted with the words, "There are lots of fanatics around."

"You have performed your duty and returned a fair verdict," the judge answered him. "The nation applauds you and you do not need guards."

The jurymen reluctantly accepted the judge's decision and departed without guard, although some of them wore the pistols they carried in the latter part of the trial.

Meanwhile the soldiers and policemen made ready to remove Toral and Mother Concepcion from the room. The two walked through double rows of troops bristling with weapons and standing elbow to elbow to the outside. There so many guards grouped around them that they were completely hidden from sight. Toral was bundled into an automobile in which were packed heavily armed army officers. The nun was placed in an open truck with other guards about her.

Toral waved to a friend whom he saw in the crowd. As the automobile and the truck carrying the condemned man and woman started from the courthouse toward the jail, other cars loaded with soldiers grouped around them, in front, behind and to each side. Soldiers also were stationed on the roofs of houses along the way, but the precautions seemed unnecessary.

The defense attorney Sodi was heavily guarded as he left the court room but this, too, seemed superfluous. The crowd, now that its sense of justice—or vengeance—had been appeased, displayed none of the violence of the past few days.

Today's conviction followed a trial lasting just more than a week, in which Toral's defense contended that the provision of Mexican law that "political" crimes are not punishable with the death sentence made a sentence of imprisonment rather than death the proper punishment.

Mother Concepcion sought escape from conviction as the "intellectual author" of the crime with argument that she knew nothing of Toral's intentions to kill General Obregon and did nothing more to influence him in his act than did hundreds of others who prior to the death of the president-elect on July 17 opposed his religious stand and sometimes said so.

The trial was broadcast by radio until too dramatic revelation by Toral of tortures which he alleged had been inflicted upon him in an effort to secure information as to possible accomplices brought charges that the defense was using the trial to spread seditious propaganda. Then the broadcasting ceased, to be resumed only today; spectators were excluded from the courtroom and the government declared an official boycott on the newspaper "Excelsior" which it said had so written its stories of the trial as to heroize the assassin.

This phase of the proceedings apparently angered partisans of the dead president-elect and there were several demonstrations which led to members on the jury arming themselves for the remainder of the trial. The last days of the trial were punctuated with threatening cries from the crowds outside the courtroom of "Viva Obregon," and "death to Obregon's assassin."

The argument of the case was bitter, and late today the defense attorney Sodi was forced to cut his speech short because he was unable to make himself heard above the hissing in the room.

Once left to itself, however, the jury agreed unanimously on conviction of Toral, and eight to one on conviction of Mother Concepcion, whose full name is Concepcion Acevedo De La Llata, deliberated only one hour and forty minutes.

It was Toral's contention throughout the trial that he killed General Obregon because God told him to do so.

Assistant Prosecutor Enrique Medina opened his argument today by appealing to the jury to convict both Toral and Mother Concepcion. He declared that the woman was the leader of a group of Catholic fanatics, who included Toral. He charged that Mother Concepcion participated in plots to kill President Calles and General Obregon at Celaya, and also in bomb fete, and that Toral was the blind instrument of this defendant in killing Obregon.

"These are not real Catholics," said the prosecutor; "they are pharisees of Catholicism, and the Catholic religion repudiates them."

The attorney for the defense, Senor Sodi, argued that Toral had been moved to the commission of the deed by what Toral considered his duty and by patriotism; therefore it was no a common murder, but a "political crime," and he did not reserve the death penalty.

Gay Ferna dez, one of he defense attorneys, pleaded to the court not to punish an innocent woman, Mother Concepcion. The spectators hissed.

Toral again took the stand and said that he expected to die but hoped the Mexican people would forget their hatreds.

As he went to the stand additional guards were placed around him and Concepcion and while he spoke both of them were completely surrounded by several rows of heavily armed guards.

TO FACILITATE TICKER ON STOCK QUOTATIONS

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Forced by steadily increasing volume of business to find some new way immediately to facilitate ticker recording of stock quotations the New York stock exchange shortly will put into effect a new system whereby record of the volume of sales will be omitted on all transactions of less than 500 shares, except at the opening.

The new method will become effective as soon as wires can be installed in New York evening newspaper offices and be connected with special printing machines over which a complete list of stocks, with volume of transactions, will be transmitted from the trading floor at frequent intervals during the day. To provide morning newspapers with a complete record the stock exchange will issue daily about 4 o'clock a full list of prices and volume of sales for the day.

Under the new system sale of 200 shares of U. S. Steel at $161.75 per share, at any time other than the opening, will be recorded x 1 2-4 instead of x 23 1-3-4 as at present.

SIX MEASURES TO REDUCE UNEMPLOYMENT IN BRITAIN

LONDON, Nov. 8—(AP)—Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, chancellor of exchequer, outlined six measures by which the government would endeavor to reduce unemployment in Britain in replying in the house of commons this evening to a labor party resolution censuring the government on this question.

One of the proposals was a scheme of empire settlement under which 20,000 miners a year would be given agricultural training for settlement in the dominions. The others contemplated various means of encouraging industry.

The labor censure was in the form of an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne and was put forward by Rt. Hon. J. R. Clynes (Lab.) in the house of commons this evening. The amendment regretted that the country was "burdened with unemployment in the most acute form" and declared in many mining areas appalling conditions prevailed.

Mr. Churchill said the government's proposals for relieving the unemployment situation were: (1) Rating relief, or removal of the local taxes on agricultural, industrial and transportation properties; (2) Empire settlement of men from the industrial districts, who would receive agricultural training under the government; (3) "Safeguarding" of industries by tariff protection in special cases; (4) Extension of the scheme of export credits; (5) The operation of the electricity scheme and (6) Special measures for absorption of the surplus miners into other industries.

COMMON STOCK SPLIT BY GENERAL MOTORS

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—Directors of General Motors corporation proposed a common stock split of 2 1-2 shares for one today and declared an extra cash dividend of $2.50 on the present issue, in addition to the regular quarterly payment of $1.25.

A special meeting of stockholders has been called for December 10 to act on an amendment proposing a change in the par value of the authorized common stock. In the event of the adoption of this amendment, 2 1-2 shares of the newly created stock will be exchanged for each share of the issue now outstanding.

While there is no occasion for the directors to take dividend action on the new stock until the February meeting, it was stated that barring any unforseen contingency the new stock will be placed on a $3 annual basis, equivalent to $7.50 on the present issue, which has been paying $5 regularly.

The proposed change will in no way alter the outstanding capital and surplus account.

EMPRESS CONSORT TO SHARE ENTHRONEMENT IN JAPAN

KYOTO, Japan, Nov. 8—(AP)—For the first time, as far as the records of the empire show, an empress consort of Japan will be formally enthroned together with her husband when, on November 10, the Empress Nagako mounts her "curtained throne" in the same ceremony in which the Emperor Hirohito takes his place on the "high August seat," the throne of a "lineal descent unbroken for ages eternal."

She will not, however, be the first empress to take her place on the throne, for of the 123 sovereigns who have preceded her husband in the line of the sun goddess eleven have been women. These were empresses in their own right, depending on no male. Most of them lived during Europe's dark ages, when the position of women in Japan was higher than it is today, but the last of the eleven, Go Sakuramachi, reigned as late as 1770. But prior to the restoration of 1868, when the emperors were restored to full sovereignty, the consort of a ruler, male or female, was not considered to share in the reign as now.

ANOTHER FATAL PLANE ACCIDENT AT SAN DIEGO

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Nov. 8—(AP)—Marvin Dorland, 22, is dead, and Leonard O'Keefe, son of James E. O'Keefe, former city attorney of San Diego, is missing as a result of an airplane accident here today.

O'Keefe, according to Available reports, piloted the commercial plane when it left a local airport. Later witnesses reported seeing the plane flying upside down and with only one man in it.

Coroner S. C. Kelly expressed the belief that the pilot may have been thrown from the plane and that it was out of control when seen by witnesses. The machine crashed in the bay here and Dorland is believed to have drowned.

CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION IS SEEKING TEST CASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—The Civil Liberties Union, which was active in the defense of John T. Scopes in the Tennessee evolution trial, announced today that it is looking for another school teacher in Arkansas, Mississippi or Tennessee willing to file a test case to bring the issue of state anti-evolution laws before the United States supreme court.

The union said that the occasion for this search is "the persistence of fundamentalists" in their campaign to put such laws on state statute books. Only Tennessee, Mississippi and, by the election just completed, Arkansas now have such laws but the Union said plans are being made to urge them on many legislatures meeting in January.

ELECTROCUTION CLIMAX OF AN AUTO ACCIDENT

KANE, Pa., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Striking a stump when his car skidded near here late today Willis Westcott 42, a taxicab driver, was thrown through the top of his sedan 30 feet into the air across high tension wires where he was electrocuted. His badly burned body fell across the wires, was found some time later by a passing motorist.

Lights went out in Kane about the time of the accident.

Hoover Victory Continues To Grow

Greatest Electoral Majority and the Largest Popular Vote in Nation's History

(By The Associated Press)

With returns being slowly received from the missing election districts of the country, Herbert Hoover today continued to increase his presidential victory with its greatest electoral majority and the largest popular vote in the nation's history.

The compilation of the missing votes in many cases, especially in southern and border states, brought forth larger leads for the republican president-elect.

There was little likelihood of any shift of electoral votes of any state from either Hoover's column or that of Alfred E. Smith, his defeated democratic opponent as a result of the vote from the districts yet untabulated.

The sweep of the Hoover victory brought into congress increased republican working majorities in both the senate and house. And the increase in last Tuesday's election tonight was centered only on a few remaining congressional contests in which tight races needed for decision the tabulation of the complete vote.

Among the returns during the day from southern and border states, Hoover showed a gain of 1,000 in Texas with a majority of 17,296 from 251 out of 253 counties; Virginia, a 24,142 majority with 1,624 out of 1,665 precincts reported; Oklahoma, a majority of 159,531 with only 244 precincts missing; North Carolina, a 28,000 lead with 2000 precincts unreported and Missouri, a 161,446 majority with 158 precincts missing.

In New York, Gov. Smith's home state, Hoover registered a plurality of 97,492 with only 22 districts unreported.

He was swept in by a record-breaking majority of 282,015 in Indiana on complete returns, while on virtually complete tabulations in Illinois he received a 421,150 majority and in Iowa more than 225,000 lead.

The president-elect plans to recuperate from his arduous campaign effort during the remainder of the week at his home in Palo Alto, Cal., while Senator Curtis, the vice president-elect, returned to Washington and also plans a short rest.

Tabulation of scattered additional returns from 21 states has pushed Hoover's national total past 19,376,000 and Smith's over 13,700,000.

With the votes of Tuesday's polling still far from complete, the unofficial standing last night was:

Hoover, 19,376,449; Smith, 13,717,604.

The president-elect added more than 1,076,000 during the preceding 24 hours and Governor Smith about 730,000.

NOTIFIED FRIEND AND THEN COMMITTED SUICIDE

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—After informing a life-long friend in North Stamford, Conn., by telephone tonight of his intention to commit suicide, Thomas P. Davis hung up the receiver while his friend was protesting and shot himself twice in the left chest with a pistol. He was taken to New York hospital, where his condition was reported as critical.

Police said that Davis, 30 years old and a resident for two years in a Bachelor hotel, was despondent over a love affair and purchased the pistol several days ago in Connecticut with the express purpose of killing himself.

Tonight he called A. Romeyon Pierson of North Stamford and told him of his plan. When a physician Pierson had called by telephone arrived at the hotel Davis already had shot himself.

His mother, Mrs. J. A. Davis, was notified in Palm Beach, Fla., where she is staying.

NEGRESS FOUND FATALLY WOUNDED IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Emma Bowman, a Negress of 54 Foote street was found lying in a pool of blood in her bed shortly after noon today by her father, William H. Lynn. The woman's body was covered with gashes and an axe lay on the floor between the bed and the wall. Mrs. Bowman was unconscious when her father found her and died a few minutes after she had been admitted to a hospital.

Police are looking for the woman's husband from whom she had been separated for five years, and for a temporary lodger who is said to have given up his room last night.

Rep. Majorities In The Next Congress

...licans Will Have a Margin of 22 Votes in the Senate and 165 in the House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—(AP)—Republicans have established clear majorities in the next congress in both senate and house but have failed to keep full pace with the record-breaking sweep of their party head, Herbert Hoover.

Almost complete returns tonight showed that the new congress, going into office after next March 4, will be divided as follows: Senate, republicans, 55; democrats, 39; farmer-labor, 1; vacant, 1. House: republicans, 267; democrats, 167; farmer-labor, 1.

Republicans held all of their 18 seats at issue in this election but captured only seven of the 20 democratic positions at stake. The senate is almost evenly divided at present.

In the house election with all 435 seats involved, the republicans won 27 places now held by democrats, and replaced the lone socialist, Victor Berger of Wisconsin and one of the two farmer-labor members, William L. Carss, of Minnesota. Democrats succeeded in capturing three seats now held by republicans, one each in Indiana, Rhode Island and West Virginia.

Despite these increased majorities, neither branch of congress will show as large a republican membership as the congress elected in the 1920 land slide for Warren G. Harding. Then the republicans were given a margin of 22 votes in the senate and of almost 165 in the house. Four years ago when President Coolidge was elected the republicans won a majority of 17 in the senate but a margin of only 60 in the house.

There were 435 house seats and 35 senate seats to be filled in the fall elections and in these 470 contests there were only 39 switches in political makeup.

These calculations are made with returns in from all but five districts in North Carolina now held by democrats and count these seats as democratic until final returns are received. Two republican seats in the house are still in doubt, those of Representative Wurmbach, of Texas, and of Representative Beck of Pennsylvania.

While Herbert Hoover went into the south and captured North Carolina, Virginia, Florida, Texas and Tennessee, these states yielded only a half dozen seats to republicans of their almost solid democratic representations in the house. No republican senators were elected in southern states.

Kentucky and Missouri were subjected to the major raids of the republicans for democratic seats, each state replacing six of its present democratic members in the house. Missouri also elected a republican senator to succeed the democatic veteran, James A. Reed, who has retired.

For the first time in years, Virginia will have republican representation in the house, three members being elected from that state. North Carolina also elected two republicans from the ninth and tenth districts and close contests were still on in some others.

Republicans picked up three democratic positions in Ohio and two in New York. The party's other gains were one each in the states of Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

The apparent defeat of Senator Neely, democrat, of West Virginia, by Henry D. Hatfield in late returns today gave the republicans their seventh democratic seat in the senate.

MINOR STATE OFFICES IN BAY STATE REPUBLICAN

BOSTON, Nov. 8—(AP)—Latest returns available from Tuesday's election tonight indicated that all the republican nominees for minor state offices in Massachusetts were elected by safe margins and showed a margin of 290,000 in favor of professional Sunday sports in the referendum on that question. In 1282 election precincts, including the City of Boston complete, out of 1605 in the state, the vote on Sunday sports was: Yes, 626,950; no, 336,156.

The vote for minor offices in the 1282 precincts was: Lieutenant governor: Youngman, r, 556,612; Malley, d, 527,085.

Secretary of state: Cook, r, 542,285; Santosuosso, d, 494,604.

State treasurer: Haigis, r, 542,799; Bergin, d, 501,899.

Auditor: Cook, r, 497,497; O'Gorman, d, 449,937.

Attorney general: Warner, r, 540,436; Barry, d, 516,258.

ALBANY DISPLAYS ITS LOYALTY TO GOV. SMITH IN HIS HOUR OF DEFEAT

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 8—(AP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith, the vanquished "happy warrior," returning tonight to the state capital after his two months political battle, received an ovation from Albany residents which brought tears to his eyes.

A crowd jammed Union station when his train pulled in and hundreds swarmed about the station's doors to get a glimpse of him.

As the governor stepped to the platform from William F. Kenny's private car, the "St. Nicholas," now sharing fame with the brown derby itself, a National Guard band struck up the battle song "Sidewalks of New York."

After a triumphal progress through the main streets, the governor, standing on the veranda of the executive mansion, Mrs. Smith by his side, told the throng which milled over the spacious front lawn that, though he had had "wonderful receptions all over the country, the welcome home to his adopted city was the warmest of them all."

Fully an hour before the upstate special, bearing the governor's car arrived, crowds gathered about the station and at 7:31 the building was literally packed to the roof.

As the governor with Mrs. Smith, their elder daughter, Mrs. John Adams Warner, and Major Warner, Supt. of New York state police, stepped from the train, they were officially greeted by Mayor John Boyd Thacher of Albany, who was accompanied by Mrs. Thacher.

Through a scene which approached pandemonium, the governor's party, escorted by state and city police, struggled through the mob in the station, with familiar cries of "hello, Al!" "you're all right, Al!" throated above the din.

Outside, all vehicular traffic was held up in Broadway, a blaze of red fire, as the crowds filled the street. Then with Mayor Thacher and Judge John J. Brady, newly elected to the children's court, on each arm, the governor started on foot to the executive mansion, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Warner followed in a closed car. As the governor first saw the throng outside, his eyes filled with tears.

At the executive mansion Governor Smith in response to cries to "speech" from the crowd, spoke briefly after Mayor Thacher expressed the gratitude of the people of Albany for the "distinguished manner in which Gov. Smith has conducted his campaign."

The governor, waving a new brown derby, then said:

"It is with a deep sense of gratitude that I receive this reception. I have met with some splendid ovations in my travels over the country from east to west during the past months. I received a greeting in New York city such as might be expected in my native town, but right here in Albany, my adopted city, I have found the warmest and most cordial reception of all.

"I will never forget Albany," he continued, "and you may be sure that I will come back here as often as I get the opportunity."

The band then struck up "The Star Spangled Banner" and Gov. Smith held high the brown derby in gesture, of farewell.

16 KILLED, 7 INJURED IN EXPLOSION AT LYNN, MASS.

Twelve of the Victims Were Killed Outright or Burned to Death—Six of the Dead Were Members of One Family—Explosion and Fire Destroyed the Plant of the Preble Box Toe Company and Damaged Six Nearby Dwellings—Celluloid and Other Explosives Were Used in the Process of Making Box Toes.

LYNN, Mass., Nov. 8—(AP)—Sixteen persons were dead and seven others were in a serious condition at the Lynn hospital tonight as a result of an explosion and fire which destroyed the plant of the Preble Box Toe company and damaged six nearby dwellings in East Lynn today.

While both state and city authorities were conducting an investigation in an effort to determine the cause of the disaster, firemen were continuing a search of the ruins, although they expressed belief that the bodies of all the dead had been recovered.

Twelve of the victims were killed outright by the explosion or burned to death in the fire which followed it, while four others died after being taken to the hospital. Six of the dead and one of those now at the hospital were members of the family of Harry Blaney, who lived in a two-tenement house within 10 feet of the rear of the plant.

His wife, Mrs. Lillian Blaney, and four of their children were burned to death in the fire which swept their home after the explosion. These children were Thelma, 13, Arthur, 10, Helen, 7, and Harriet, aged 6 months. Another Blaney child, Vivian, 15, was rescued from the burning house while still alive but died a few hours later at the hospital. The father was in a serious condition at the hospital tonight. Two other members of the family, Harry, Jr., 17, and Norman, 14, were also taken to the hospital but were discharged after treatment. Two other children had left the house just before the explosion occurred, Ella, to go to work, and William, 12, to go to a newsstand for a morning paper.

The others who lost their lives were employes of the Box Toe plant, a one-story building of concrete construction. The plant manufactured box toes for shoes, using celluloid and other explosive materials in the process. The plant employs about 90, but several workmen had not reported when the explosion occurred. The employes killed were Lewis E. Puffer of Seampscott, foreman; William Clements, John Wilson, Percy H. Smith, Alfred P. Harris, John Cowder and Charles Mitchell, all of Lynn. Three others, Joseph McCarthy, Everett Lewis and Israel Clements died after being removed to the hospital.

Five other employes were taken to the hospital where their condition was serious tonight. They are David McCoy, John Coleman, Lewis Rogers, James Wright and Kenneth B. Kerwin. Mrs. Annie Gallagher, who lived in the upper tenement of the house occupied by the Blaney family was also at the hospital with a fractured leg and other injuries received when she leaped from a window to escape the flames.

The explosion blew out the rear wall of the factory and a section of the roof collapsed. Houses in the neighborhood were shaken and windows shattered. Six of these dwellings caught fire but the flames were checked by the fire department which arrived soon after the explosion.

Mayor Ralph S. Bauer, in a letter to State Fire Commissioner George C. Neal asking for a thorough investigation of disaster recommended that the fire marshal "revoke all permits to factories handling explosive materials that are not located at least 500 feet away from any other buildings and that may be located in a building in connection with other industrial efforts."

Residents of the neighborhood said that there was one heavy explosion followed by a series of smaller blasts. The flames shot from the plant to houses across the street as well as to those situated closer to the factory, and caused a panic among the occupants.

Ambulances were rushed to the plant and as the victims were removed they were hurried to the hospital or to the morgue if they had already died. Most of the dead were burned so badly that it was difficult for relatives to identify them and in some cases identification was made by rings or other jewelry.

LAVA FROM MT. ETNA WORKING DESTRUCTION

CATANIA, Sicily, Nov. 8—(AP)—Devastating floods of molten lava in three main streams tonight were slowly making their way down the slopes of Mt. Etna spreading a trail of destruction and driving the terror-stricken population of towns at the foot of the volcano from their homes.

Although heavy property damage has been caused in the overflowing of fertile fields and several small villages, the loss of life was small, only three deaths being reported. These were in the town of Mascali where three men, a father, son and grandson, were overwhelmed in their home while their fellow townsmen, helpless to aid them, watched death overtake them from beyond the lava lake. The men had returned to their doomed house to rescue various goods. They slept there overnight and this morning found them trapped.

The onrush of the three principal lava streams which for a time threatened the whole region between Mascali and the sea, seemed to have diminished in intensity late today.

In view of the fact that the lava tonight was only about 200 yards distant from the railway bridge and station of Mascali, orders were given to assure service by steamer between Messina and Catania by means of the ships Vulcania, Tolemaide and Garibaldi.

Mascali, once the home of 10,000 persons, is now a mass of lava and shooting flames, nothing being left but pitiable wreckage.

Pathetic incidents in Mascali were numerous. Last night two poor peasant women tearfully begged permission of the authorities to disinter the body of one of their relatives in order to bury it in a safer place. The advance of the lava, however, made it necessary that the request be refused as time had become too precious.

A monument to the World war dead which was to have been unveiled next Sunday was hastily dedicated just before the lava reached it. Fascists performing their rite of calling the names on the roll of dead while the crowd answered "Present" after each.

Etna's eruption, which began last Friday, reached an acute stage today.

Several companies of engineer troops have been trying to lay mines in order to form trenches so as to divert the flow of the lava current.

The populations of towns unaffected by the lava flow have been giving generous hospitality to the homeless.

POINCARE MAY FORM NEW UNION GOVERNMENT

PARIS, Nov. 8—(AP)—Efforts of the extreme radicals to reorganize the old coalition with the socialists for the purpose of forming a new government have proved a failure. The group known as the "Radical Left," which was invited to join the new Anti-Poincare majority met this afternoon and passed a resolution urging M. Poincare to remain in power.

This clears the situation so far as it concerns the radical extremists and makes it more likely that M. Poincare will finally consent to constitute a new ministry. The radical members who resigned from the old cabinet were in conference during the day. It is thought that they had under consideration the formation of a new union government to be headed by Poincare.

FIGURES OF COMPLETE VOTE OF MASSACHUSETTS

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY TO VIOLATE THE DRY LAWS

CHICAGO, Nov. 8—(AP)—Officials of McHenry county and authorities of both McHenry and Woodstock in that county were hit in a blanket indictment returned today by the McHenry county grand jury naming 114 county residents on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

Included in the list was one state legislator, a former state's attorney now a fugitive, a former sheriff, the mayor of McHenry, the McHenry chief of police, an alderman of Woodstock and two deputy sheriffs. The grand jury under the direction of Charles Hadley, special state's attorney, had spent several weeks investigating charges that county officials were conspiring with roadhouse and resort owners to promote violations of the liquor laws and gambling.

Previously the jury had voted about 50 indictments against individuals and in today's blanket indictment appeared the names of scores of road house owners, including those of George Druggan, brother of Terry Druggan, Chicago beer baron, and Con Shea, former Chicago labor leader.

Among others named in today's indictment were Roy Stewart, state representative; Mayor Peter W. Frett of McHenry, Martin J. Vandrack and Sylvester Muldoon, deputy sheriffs; Lester Edinger, former sheriff; John Walsh, McHenry chief of police, and Gus Peters, Woodstock alderman.

DECLINES TO CONCEDE ELECTION OF ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Albert Ottinger, republican candidate for governor, tonight still declined to concede the election of his democratic opponent, Franklin D. Roosevelt, in spite of the latter's apparent plurality of 21,656 votes.

"I am still on the firing line," he told reporters who saw him while it still appeared that he would cut Mr. Roosevelt's lead to somewhat less than 20,000 through returns from republican upstate districts.

When these districts were all in and he still lagged by more than 20,000 votes he declined to answer a question as to whether he believed there had been any fraud.

Mr. Ottinger pointed to the reported discovery of errors in early upstate returns, as justification for his refusal to concede election.

"I believe," he said, "that there is a splendid chance that I am elected. The same thing happened two years ago, when I was running for attorney-general. The official count ther removed an apparent adverse plurality and returned me winner.

Mr. Roosevelt and Governor Alfred E. Smith, who at the end of the year will complete his fourth term as chief executive of the state, met today for "an exchange of yarns" and a discussion of state problems.

PETITIONS FOR RECOUNT OF VOTES IN THE BAY STATE

BOSTON, Nov. 8—(AP)—Petitions for a recount of the votes cast in the presidential contest in this state Tuesday, were being circulated throughout Massachusetts tonight. The action was taken after a conference between members of the Massachusetts republican state committee and the Hoover volunteer committee.

Complete returns of the state gave Gov. Alfred E. Smith a margin of 21,702 votes over Herbert Hoover. It was said that, as Brig. Gen. Charles H Cole, democrat, who opposed Frank G Allen, lieutenant governor in the gubernatorial contest had asked for a recount, it would be no added difficulty to conduct the two recounts simultaneously.

JUDGE ORDERS BRIEFS FILED IN ALLOWANCE CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 5—The hearing of the case of John and Claude Costello of Storrs against Martin Hanson, administrator of the estate of the late Dennis Costello of Storrs took up the entire session of the Windham county superior court held here today with Judge Yeomans on the bench. Two other cases assigned for today were postponed. All of the testimony in the Costello vs. Hanson case in which John Costello sought an allowance of $2,000 additional and his son Claude Costello sought $600 from the estate of the late Dennis Costello was heard. The attorneys were ordered to file briefs within one week after which the court will render judgment. Court adjourned at 4.30 o'clock until next Thursday morning at Putnam for the hearing of the reward claims in the case of Albert J. Raymond and Roland G. Lalone, Worcester, Mass., the "ice-box" bandits who were convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to life imprisonment in superior court here this fall.

In the Costello vs. Hanson case it was explained that Dennis Costello died intestate at the home of his brother, John Costello, one of the plaintiffs in December, 1926. On January 7, 1927 Martin Hanson of Mansfield Depot was appointed administrator of the estate. The plaintiffs presented their claims on June, 1927 and on July 15 of that year there were notified in writing that they were disallowed.

As the first witness for the plaintiff side, John Costello testified that he was 69 years of age and that Dennis was 72 years old at the time of his death. He said that Dennis Costello lived alone on his farm, was unmarried and for years excluded himself from companionship. The farm occupied by Dennis was of 400 acres and witness said that he had assisted his brother Dennis on the farm since the latter had been in failing health during the past 25 years. In 1920 an ox stepped on Dennis' foot, injuring the big toe which in time dropped off causing Dennis, who had persistently refused to have medical aid, to walk about with home-made crutches. Dennis subsequently became unable to care for himself and his livestock. The state humane society and the selectmen of the town conducted an investigation and agreed that the stock would have to be sold unless it received proper care. Witness said that at that time he was putting in much spare time in caring for his brother and the stock. He said that the farm had practically all been sold off at this time by the administrator and he estimated that the estate was worth $20,000. There was but little stock left on the place at the time of his brother's death.

John Costello further testified that he had been told by his dead brother that he intended to leave the farm and all his property to the witness and his son Claude. He said that his bill of $2,000 was a fair one for the services he had rendered his brother in the several years mentioned. He said that he had never been paid for what he had done in caring for his brother and the farm. Under cross-examination he said that Dennis was obstinate and "very tight" in regard to money matters. The property was to go to four heirs as far as he knew. They were John and Timothy Costello of Storrs and the children of Jeremiah Young and Michael Horrigan of South Coventry.

Dr. William L. Higgins of South Coventry testified to having attended Dennis Costello during his last illness in December, 1927, at the home of John Costello. He said that the deceased was afflicted with senility and was obstinate in that he would not stay in bed and wanted to do everything opposite to what was prescribed for him. Septic pneumonia was the final cause of death.

James Greene, a farmer in Mansfield Depot said that he knew the deceased and had talked with him several times in 1927. He knew that John Costello had done considerable work for Dennis on the latter's farm and on one occasion he had heard Dennis say that he intended to make a will and leave his property to John and his son Claude.

Claude Costello, the plaintiff in the case with his father John Costello, said that his claim of $600 was for 600 days work at $1 per day. He said that he had worked for his uncle Dennis during the last five or six years of his life by working on the farm and caring for the uncle during illness.

Thomas Clark testified that he was at the home of John Costello during the latter's illness and he noted the friendship Dennis entertained for his brother John.

Robert W. Gardiner, member of the board of selectmen of Mansfield testified to having notified John Costello that a bull on his brother's farm must be tied up and not allowed to continue roaming. He also advised John to take his brother Dennis to some institution where he could be cared for, unless members of the family undertook to do this themselves.

John Brown said that he worked for Dennis Costello for a time and for John Costello for about 15 years. He said that Dennis had told him that he was going to leave his property to John's children.

John Costello was recalled and said that after being turned by the humane society that conditions must be improved on Dennis' farm in August, 1920, he did much work on his brother's behalf.

Walter Costello, son of John, said that he remembered the talk his father had had with a representative of the humane society and that his father had arranged to care for Dennis and the farm, going to the farm every other day in winter and helping to prepare fuel for the house.

John Costello, Jr., another son, testified to the work his father had done for Dennis and said his father had never been paid by Dennis.

The first witness for the defense was Timothy Costello, brother of John and the late Dennis Costello, who shared in the estate. He testified that Dennis always paid his bills and that he always had ready cash on hand to pay what he owed at once. Timothy did that Dennis had offered to pay for work done on frequent occasions but witness had refused. He said that on one occasion Mrs. John Costello telephone him to say that a man was at Dennis' home and that he wanted to consult with the family regarding Dennis. Timothy went there and found the man to be a representative of the humane society who said that a conservator or guardian should be appointed to care for Dennis Costello and the livestock on the farm. Timothy testified that Mrs. John Costello at that time had said that Dennis should make out a will and that her husband and Timothy were entitled to money for services.

Fred Costello, son of Timothy, corroborated this testimony.

John, Claude and John Costello, Jr. were recalled and all three denied that anything had been said by Mrs. Costello or others regarding a will. This concluded the evidence, the order to file briefs was then made.

A special criminal session of the court which was to have been held at 8.30 o'clock this morning before Judge Yeomans was called off and will be reassigned. The case is that of William Goldstein of Hartford, charged with reckless driving in this city on April 20, last. Goldstein was found guilty in lower court and fined $25 and costs, to which he took an appeal.

The case of the Jordan Hardware company vs. Nathan Gilman of Bozrah, a suit for $200 damages, which was to have come up this morning, was also ordered continued when it was found that the attorneys the firm of Brown and James of Norwich for the defense had not been notified of the date of the hearing. The suit is to recover a bill of $146 for merchandise sold to the defendant on November 8, 1926.

The organization to be voted on at the state convention at New London, Nov. 14, 15 and 16, was given by Mrs. Ruth McIntire Dadoorian of Hartford, chairman of the legal status of women committee of the league.

"OVER THE COUNTER"

Dear Dot:

Well I've made the plunge at last. I mean by that that I have been thinking and talking Fur Coats long enough and now I have finally put unnecessary discretion to the wind. I have joined the ranks of the thousands of women who will wrap themselves in the exquisite warmth, charm and durability of a Fur Coat this winter.

Yesterday I visited the establishment of Turansky Brothers, Manufacturing Furriers at 53 Union street. Turansky Brothers have had 22 years of experience in fur selection and coat-making and with their assistance and my own candid opinion I made a selection. It's a beauty, just wait till you see it. No, I won't describe it now, I would have to write too long a letter.

But read, Dear Dot.—Turansky Brothers are to have a Two-Day Sale next Friday and Saturday, November 9 and 10. The prices on every coat and on all orders taken will be at great reductions. Why did I not wait for the sale? I was over-anxious when I finally made up my mind and so the opportunity remains entirely for You and Your Friends.

I found the coats of very distinctive style and beauty. Every coat in stock is manufactured by Turansky Brothers and the confidence they have in their product is such that they do not hesitate to offer a One Year Guarantee against any defect.

Turansky's coats, while of highest quality, are low-priced because they are manufactured right in their own establishment and other forms of "overhead" have been eliminated. There is no secret to that. Collars and cuff sets and coats are made to order and you will do wisely to go to Turansky's and compare prices before buying. Especially, you should take advantage of the Two-Day Sale.

Now a word about their repairing and remodeling and I will close. Turansky's cleanse and steam old fur coats to bring out the richness of the fur. They make necessary replacements in the worn-out spots and put in new linings if desired. Then, for a remarkably low cost you have an old fur coat looks like new. Why not have your old coat revived and re-styled if you do not feel you want to buy a new one this year?

Anyhow, whether you do one thing or the other Turansky's is the place. It is the place of quality and low price without any strings to it, something rare thees days but nevertheless true in this case.

Call at Turansky's Friday or Saturday and see for yourself.

Faithfully,
JANE.

LIGHT PLANT OWNERS HAVE SPOKEN

If we are to judge by the large attendance at the special city meeting on a rainy night, there is certainly much opposition to the new electric rates which have been put into effect in Norwich by the commissioners of the gas and electrical department.

Furthermore there appears to be no question but what the sentiment is strongly against those rates and their continuance. Evidently the feeling of the citizens is that those rates are unfair and unjust. The protest that has been registered and the request for the withdrawal of them clearly indicate that the mayor was justified in the calling of the special city meeting for the purpose of giving the consumers and owners a chance to be heard.

Sentiment in regard to the sales department is more evenly divided and yet the majority of those who voted favored discontinuance.

Through the medium of a city meeting the citizens have acted. They have expressed dissatisfaction and appealed directly to the commissioners for a return to the old rates until a fair and reasonable rate can be provided for all consumers, something which does not prevail under the present schedule.

Furthermore when the meeting instructs the corporation counsel not to defend the present injunction proceedings and instructs the common council not to approve any bills for defense for commissions in the sales department after a certain date and names a committee to confer with the commissioners regarding new rates, there is a definite expression from the citizens which cannot be wisely disregarded by the commission.

The owners of the plant have spoken in no uncertain terms. They have indicated their disapproval of rates and methods and they have good reasons to expect that their wishes will be complied with. It is unfortunate that such action was necessitated but it should serve to clear up a situation which has been developing for a considerable time.

WILL PRESENT CONGRESS ACT?

It will not be long now before the final session of the present congress opens to continue until the fourth of March. In such a short session much can be accomplished if there is a desire. Invariably it is a case of placing obstacles in the way of progress for the sake of embarrassment. Whether that will be the sentiment of the coming session will be awaited with much interest.

It will be remembered that it was stated by Mr. Hoover that if the agricultural problem was not taken care of in the coming session he would proceed to call a special session of the new congress to deal with it. By the verdict of the voters of the country faith has been manifested in the policies he set forth for the treatment of this matter. Furthermore it is apparent that the country is reconciled to the position which was taken by President Coolidge concerning the equalization fee.

Such being the case the present congress should be alive to the need of so dealing with the farm problem that the advantages of new legislation may be obtained in the coming year. It can of course leave it to the new congress elected in a campaign during which there was plenty of farm discussion, but it has the opportunity to redeem itself for the failure to do anything because of the insistence upon the equalization fee or nothing.

The voters of the farm belt, as well as the voters of the country, have recognized the justice of the position which has been taken by Mr. Hoover. Not all of those in the present congress will have a chance to deal with the matter in the next congress. Nevertheless it is possible, if there is a real desire to serve the farmers, to get busy in the coming short session and, through their action, make it unnecessary to call a special session. On the other hand resentment at the outcome may be sufficient to so influence enough members of congress, as to prevent the accomplishment of anything worth while before adjournment. It wouldn't be a new experience in a short session, but it would show a disregard for the expression of the country as recently made at the polls. The temper of the present congress will be disclosed soon after the concluding session opens next month.

REVOLT AGAINST TAMMANY

In the campaign just ended great emphasis has been laid upon the fact that Alfred E. Smith has been elected governor of New York state four times. On all those occasions it has been evident that his election was made certain by the vote obtained in the city of New York. The remainder of the state felt differently about it.

But even New York city rebelled when it came to the presidency and Mr. Smith failed to get the support that he had expected there. He was by no means the only one to suffer for it is recorded that Mrs. Ruth Pratt was sent to congress after a successful term as a New York alderman and George U. Harvey has been elected a president of the borough of Queens in which county the sewer scandal gained so much notoriety.

The voters of that borough had had their eyes open to the influence of Tammany. They became aware of what the 17 years of Connolly control has meant and when the democratic candidate for the presidency got the approval of the head of Tammany Hall they decided it was time for a change and made it in the choice of Mr. Harvey the voters in that New York borough have selected the man who has done much to give the public an insight into what has existed and the contrast with what ought to be. They look upon him as the man to meet the situation and restore honest government to the borough.

That this situation aided in keeping down the expected Smith vote in New York city is apparent. They have shown that they have a mind of their own and a disposition to use it when the facts are placed before them. They are not committed to Tammany willy nilly, however much that organization may expect it. The popularity of Mr. Smith didn't prevent this upset from undermining the support he had received there in the past.

PROPER PROSECUTION

In connection with flying and the increasing number navigating the air, it has been deemed wise in certain states to regulate such flying by legislation. Regulations have been established in Connecticut and also in Rhode Island and in both states prosecutions have taken place.

Some months ago Bert Acosta assisted upon stunt flying in the Naugatuck valley that was regarded as dangerous. His low flying was considered a menace to human life with the result that he was penalized under the flying law. It didn't amount to much because it was not long after that he was denied the use of a flying field at Chicago for violation of regulations.

Rhode Island had reason for action when Joseph Lyman, of Northampton, Mass., flew over Providence and the Brown university football field last month at such a low altitude as to occasion fear on the part of those in attendance at the game. Through the number of the machine his identity was obtained and when he learned that he was wanted gave himself up and admitted being the pilot, though he claimed he had no idea of frightening the crowd and made a public apology. He was given a fine of $200 and it is believed it will be a valuable lesson to him as well as others.

It is to be realized that those who fly are not going to crash if everything goes as they wish it to, but there's no telling when the unexpected is going to happen, and for the protection of the public it has been decreed that such acts must not be committed.

It is impossible to look upon flying under those conditions as other than indulgence in stunts. If something should go wrong, as it does frequently, it would endanger the lives of many people. If there are a few permitted to indulge, it will soon mean that others will be doing it. Trouble of a serious nature can and should be prevented by putting a stop to such stunts before something actually happens, and the course that is being followed in Rhode Island and this state in promptly prosecuting those who disregard the law is commendable.

FRANCE'S CABINET TROUBLE

It has been some little time since France was bothered by a cabinet crisis. Such harmony, or near harmony, cannot be expected to continue indefinitely. When the point was reached that Premier Poincare failed to get the support of his entire cabinet, and four members resigned, he declined to carry on and resigned himself.

France is in a much better position to stand a cabinet change today than it has been at times. It hasn't dealt with all its problems but it has adjusted certain of them in a manner which has strengthened the government and relieved the tension. The cabinet resignation now may be quickly adjusted if it is found that it can be met without the support of the radical socialists.

At least President Doumergue believes that Poincare is the man to keep at the head. This is disclosed by his action in asking him to form a new cabinet. Until he makes up his mind, or until he has canvassed the situation and come to a decision as to what he can do in that direction, there will be no thought of turning to someone else to reorganize the government.

Poincare has not been having clear sailing in the premiership. He has experienced plenty of opposition both within and outside the cabinet, but there is the possibility that he can get together a cabinet that will command support though there is never any telling how long it will last, or how soon something new will bob up to alter the entire situation. In a country where there are so many parties and where cabinets have to be made up through representatives from each in order to get support there is always uncertainty until the radical and uncertain elements are minimized by an election.

HIS WIFE'S VACATION

Bradbury sat at his desk toying with the engraved letter opener that Marjory had given him the day she went to the country. That was just two weeks ago, but to Bradbury it seemed like ages.

However, no one could say that he had been lonely. Their friends—Marjory's and his—saw to that. Monday night he had dined at her mother's and the folks had done their utmost to keep him from missing Marjory. Tuesday night had found him at the home of his sister and Wednesday—well, the week had just been flooded with dinner engagements. And now this week it was all starting over again.

Suddenly Bradbury sat up straight. Tonight? Where on earth was he scheduled to dine tonight? The Clarks? No; that was tomorrow. Marjorys folks again? No.

"Well, that's a mess, all right. Here some hostess is preparing dinner and I'll be hanged if I know who she is!"

All day Bradbury's face wore that harassed look. Who on earth was he dining with tonight, anyway?

"Try concentration," suggested his stenographer hopefully.

Bradbury tried concentration. He would gladly have tried anything by the time 3 o'clock rolled around. But concentration did nothing for Bradbury.

"Try not thinking about it at all for a while," came the next bit of advice from Miss King. "Sometimes the subconscious brings things back whe it is let alone, you know."

Bradbury let the subconscious alone for as long a time as he could. Four o'clock. Four-thirty. This was getting serious.

"I could say I've been detained at the office," he began. "No, that won't do. Such an excuse should precede my absence, not follow it."

Four times during the next hour Bradbury jumped to answer his telephone. It might be his hostess, reminding him of this evening. But four times his hopes were dashed.

Looks like I'm done for, he smiled ruefully at Miss King. "I just dont recall—— By Jove! I have it. It's the Clays. And a mighty good thing I remembered. Mrs. Clay is a perfect stickler for etiquette. She'd never have forgiven me."

A half-hour later Bradbury arrived at his hostess' home, a box of her favorite candied fruit under his arm.

"Why—how do you do!" exclaimed Mrs. Clay, a puzzled look in her eyes as Bradbury followed her into the house.

"I—ah—how do you do?" queried Bradbury lamely, sensing that something had gone wrong. "Er—I'm a bit early, Hellow there, Clay; how're you?"

His host's smile was an exact duplicate of the look on Mrs. Clay's face. "Well, it's good to see you, old man. How do you like 'baching' it, anyway?"

"Oh, all right. All you folks are so good to me, inciting me out——"

"Well, glad to have you take pot luck with us!" Clay's voice sounded somewhat forced. In spite of the hearty ring to it. And suddenly, in the midst of the dinner, Bradbury looked up in alarm.

"The Carsons!" he muttered.

"What did you say?" smiled Mrs. Clay, absently.

"Oh nothing. I have a headache—or—had it all day long. Concentrating on a big deal. You'll excuse me; won't you? I'm sorry." He put his hand to his head. He did have a headache by this time.

It served as an excuse to get away early, especially as the Clays were dressed to go out. Bradbury left as soon as he decently could.

"Seven-thirty. Still time to get there if I grab a cab. Here's where I'll have to eat another dinner, I guess. Mrs. Carson would never forgive me if she knew."

He jumped into a cab, instructing the driver to "rush it!" They made the trip in less than a half hour. Gratefully thrusting a bill into the driver's hand, Bradbury dashed up the stairs of the Carson home.

A furious ringing of the bell brought no response. Bradbury stood in the vestibule, bewildered. And then he remembered. Ye gods above! How could he have forgotten? It wasn't the Carsons either! It was Marjory herself! She had told him she'd be in to do some shopping——

With a groan, Bradbury fled down the stairs and signaled a cab.—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Armistice Day

Mr. Editor: On the tenth anniversary of the Armistice, the commander in chief of the allied armies, Marshal Foch, sends the following message to America: "Tell your American comrades that they are not and shall not be forgotten by France. Tell them we remember Cantigny, Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, the Argonne forest. We remember their happy natures and their fine comradeship, their abilities and their courage. Tell them that we shall remain friends and that no pacts were necessary to insure such a friendship—a friendship older then 100 years and one that shall endure in the years to come through the mutual understanding of America and France. Tell them upon the tenth anniversary of the wars ending France salutes them in remembrance and affection."

Does America still remember that eventful day—a day that should stand alongside the Fourth of July in the thoughts of our citizens? It sometimes seems that the only ones that do remember it are the ex-service men themselves. That day should mean as much to every citizen of our country. But for that day, what might not have happened. The loss of many more thousands of what was termed at that time "the flower of American manhood," a yastly larger expenditure of our money and much suffering by our people at home.

Through the efforts of the American Legion, the 11th of November has been made a legal holiday in our state of Connecticut. The 11th of November, 1928 is the second of these since the law was passed. What observance has been made by the people of our city? Practically nothing. Perhaps they look to the veteran organizations to start such things. How can they start anything? They receive no support from those that should give it to them. In fact their efforts are more often blocked then supported. Business houses and factories could not have pursued their usual activities if they wanted to on November 11, 1918, why not recognize the day in a small way in these later days? That day in 1918 is still fresh in the minds of thousands of the veterans of the World war, some of them still in hospitals suffering from their efforts to uphold the honor of our country. France still remembers.

The action of the Retail Merchants association is most certainly appreciated by the American Legion in allowing their employes to have the day off to participate in the monster celebration to be held in New London on next Monday. But why not go further, observe the day as it should be observed. Close the shops and factories, also the schools and give vent to a small portion of the joy and happiness of the day in 1918, not forgetting to pause for a little while and think of the maimed and crippled veterans in the many hospitals of the country who are not now and never will be able to enjoy the comforts that the vast majority of the citizens of our country now enjoy, and are only enjoying through the noble work that they carried through? The American Legion does not forget and assures Marshal Foch that his message is appreciated and returned by the American Legion and we hope by the whole American people.

The Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, the American Legion, is going to parade in New London next Monday and they invite the ex-service men of the city who do not belong to any ex-service men's organization to parade with them. Details will be given to the papers within the next few days and we hope that in that parade in New London next Monday, Norwich will be well represented, giving them the co-operation that they gave to us in 1926.

Jos. Bellefleur, Past Commander,
R. O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, A. L.
Norwich, Nov. 7, 1928.

Aftermath

Mr. Editor: It is said that never before has a candidate been so badly defeated and it might as truly be said that never before has one been so greatly admired and loved.

He will go down in history as a shining example of courage, honesty and fearlessness, an inspiration to American youth.

We have taken his picture out of our windows but not out of our hearts.

MRS. MARY V. O'NEILL
Norwich, Nov. 8, 1928.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—With the death of Robert Lansing war time secretary of state, all three of the men who played the most vital parts in the shaping of American policy in the difficult period preceding entry of the nation into the World war have passed on, leaving behind them only incomplete personal records.

Of that trio, Woodrow Wilson, William Jennings Bryan and Lansing only Lansing wrote his personal memoirs. His book, published after President Wilson left the white house, is concerned more with the post armistice peace treaty turmoil, where his break with the president began than with the period of American neutrality. It therefore sheds only incidental light on the neutrality period.

Yet the most eloquent testimony of record so far as the Bystander knows that Wilson to the very last hoped to win the European belligerents to peace by mediation and avoid American participation in the conflict is that of Lansing.

Bryan's Resignation.

It chanced that this writer was an onlooker at the state department virtually throughout the period of the World war. As a member of the Associated Press staff, he had the advantage of being associated with the late Edwin M. Hood, then dean of the entire Washington corps of correspondents; and Hood was a personal and trusted friend of Bryan, of Lansing, and of a score or more of the men whose figures "ulked the greatest in that critical time in the affairs of the nation.

Out of the crowding memories of those hectic days one picture comes back very clearly. It created the day of Bryan's resignation a secretary of state owing to differences with the president over the framing of the second note to Germany on the Lusitania sinking.

The white house announcement came late in the day, but Bryan had been in hour late in attending the cabinet meeting of that day and rumors were running wild. After the meeting Bryan secluded himself in his office, but he sent for Ed Hood his friend and told him in confidence what had happened.

Hood was a newspaperman first last and all the time. He realized he had in confidence a "story" of world shaking significance, that forecast possible American participation ultimately in the World war, but a confidence was a sacred trust with him. He came back to the Associated Press staff room in the state department his eyes blazing with excitement, but could say to the three or four juniors to whom he spoke only that there had been a circuitic news development which they "must get." At 5:26 p. m., June 8 1915, came this terse first word to the world over the Associated Press wires: "Flash: Secretary Bryan has resigned."

Why Lansing Was Named.

Ever then Hood knew that Lansing would succeed Bryan. And he knew, also, that President Wilson virtually has determined to take into his own hands the state portfolio with Lansing's long diplomatic experience and deep training in international law and practice to support him. That to Hood, accounted for what was in fact a non-political selection, at least so far as considerations of party political exigencies were concerned.

MORE SAFETY AND NO PAIN IN LOCAL ANESTHESIA

By R. B. Henline, M. D., New York

The greatest advance in the past 15 years, especially in urological surgery, has been the progress made with the use of various forms of local anesthesia. It is now possible to do any operation on the urinary organs, including the removal of kidney, with local anesthesia.

Ether, chloroform, or various gases, which rendered the patient unconscious, were previously used. Now local anesthesia is obtained by injection of the area to be operated upon with procain solution. This injection renders the area of operation numb or deadened so that the operation is free from pain. Thus the patient is conscious and awake throughout the entire procedure. The important point is that the entire operation is attended with more safety.

Procain solution is used for this purpose because it has proved to be the most efficient drug, and to be perfectly safe when used properly. Various methods of administering the procain solution are necessary for different operations, but all can be done satisfactorily and without danger.

There are many advantages to the patient who is operated upon with local anesthesia. A patient who is quite sick and who could not stand ether or other general anesthetics may still be operated upon by this method. One suffering from diseases of the heart, lungs or kidneys can undergo an operation without danger. The patient's bodily functions are not interfered with and consequently there is practically no shock. The convalescence is much shortened and the patient may leave the hospital sooner. There is rarely any nausea or vomiting, or any "gas pain" after the operation. Pneumonia and other lung complications are rarely seen after local anesthesia. All of these disagreeable occurrences are avoided by the patient who is operated upon under local anesthesia. The anesthesia persists for three to four hours after the operation.

It is more difficult for the surgeon to operate with local anesthesia because he must be more careful of the tissues. Pulling and tugging or any roughness cause some discomfort to the patient and therefore must be avoided. The patient benefits from this fact that the surgeon must do his work much more carefully and accurately.

The object of all surgery, as well as medicine, is the relief of suffering and the prolongation of life. Since patients are more comfortable, with fewer complications, and fewer deaths many surgeons now use local anesthesia for nearly all operations.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot put away. And it's always ready for the cruelest pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8—With the death of Robert Lansing war time secretary of state, all three of the men who played the most vital parts in the shaping of American policy in the difficult period preceding entry of the nation into the World war have passed on, leaving behind them only incomplete personal records.

Of that trio, Woodrow Wilson, William Jennings Bryan and Lansing only Lansing wrote his personal memoirs. His book, published after President Wilson left the white house, is concerned more with the post armistice peace treaty turmoil, where his break with the president began than with the period of American neutrality. It therefore sheds only incidental light on the neutrality period.

Yet the most eloquent testimony of record so far as the Bystander knows that Wilson to the very last hoped to win the European belligerents to peace by mediation and avoid American participation in the conflict is that of Lansing.

Bryan's Resignation.

It chanced that this writer was an onlooker at the state department virtually throughout the period of the World war. As a member of the Associated Press staff, he had the advantage of being associated with the late Edwin M. Hood, then dean of the entire Washington corps of correspondents; and Hood was a personal and trusted friend of Bryan, of Lansing, and of a score or more of the men whose figures "ulked the greatest in that critical time in the affairs of the nation.

Out of the crowding memories of those hectic days one picture comes back very clearly. It created the day of Bryan's resignation a secretary of state owing to differences with the president over the framing of the second note to Germany on the Lusitania sinking.

The white house announcement came late in the day, but Bryan had been in hour late in attending the cabinet meeting of that day and rumors were running wild. After the meeting Bryan secluded himself in his office, but he sent for Ed Hood his friend and told him in confidence what had happened.

Hood was a newspaperman first last and all the time. He realized he had in confidence a "story" of world shaking significance, that forecast possible American participation ultimately in the World war, but a confidence was a sacred trust with him. He came back to the Associated Press staff room in the state department his eyes blazing with excitement, but could say to the three or four juniors to whom he spoke only that there had been a circuitic news development which they "must get." At 5:26 p. m., June 8 1915, came this terse first word to the world over the Associated Press wires: "Flash: Secretary Bryan has resigned."

Why Lansing Was Named.

Ever then Hood knew that Lansing would succeed Bryan. And he knew, also, that President Wilson virtually has determined to take into his own hands the state portfolio with Lansing's long diplomatic experience and deep training in international law and practice to support him. That to Hood, accounted for what was in fact a non-political selection, at least so far as considerations of party political exigencies were concerned.

Cesare Del Carlo

Cesare Del Carlo, 57, a leading building contractor and Norwich citizen for approximately a score of years, whose handling of contracts took him through New England and as far south as Florida, died at his late home, 583 Griffith street, Jersey City, N. J., November 1, following a fight of more than 11 years against the ravages of Bright's disease. During the past year his case had been considered hopeless, although it was not until several weeks ago he became practically helpless. Since then he sank rapidly until the end.

The funeral was held at 10 o'clock last Saturday morning at the funeral parlors of G. C. Bosetti, Union City, N. J., immediately followed by the celebration of a solemn mass of requiem at St. Anthony's church at Union city. Burial was in the Cemetery of the Madonna at Fort Lee, N. J.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Margaret V. Del Carlo, he is survived by five children; Mrs. John King, Mrs. John Laurcell, Mrs. Julius Mandelli, Mrs. Malcolm Eiseman and Joseph A. Del Carlo. The last two children were born in Norwich. All of the children were students at St. Patrick's school this city, until removal of the family so as to be nearer the scene of his many contracts.

The deceased was born at Lucca, Tuscany, Italy, received an exceptionally thorough education in his native city and was graduated with high honors from Lasalle institute in Italy. He was a son of Attilio and Zephyr Del Carlo. Coming to America during October, 1894, he first settled in New York, where he remained in business until 1905, when he came to Norwich to establish a building-contracting line, handling many of the important contracts in the city. Prior to locating in Norwich, he was married Nov. 1, 1899 to Miss Margaret V. Farrell at St. Bridget's church, Eighth street and Avenue B, New York city, by Rev. Ernest Coppo, a college chum of the deceased at Lasalle Institute in Italy from which both had been graduated with honors. Rev. Fr. Coppo is now head of the Italian Diocese of New York city.

BACKUS HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

Today begins the annual drive of the W. W. Backus hospital to secure for their organization this year at least 2,000 members. In the past four years of its history, the women of the community have responded with generosity to this appeal and have considered it their duty and pleasure to help carry on the work of this important institution. Mrs. Aurin Payson, chairman of the membership committee, heads a large and representative group of women who will canvas the friends of the hospital. They are confidently expecting to carry their campaign to a successful finish. As usual the dues for annual members are $1 00 and life memberships $25 these last, when sufficient, to form a nurses' scholarship fund. All money raised, whether by dues or in other ways, is used only for the Backus hospital. There are no paid workers.

The local institution, like every other hospital, needs outside support. All hospitals are expensive to run and give far more than they charge, no matter what that charge may be. They need endowments, gifts and various money raising efforts in order to avoid a recurring deficit and in order to grow. Backus hospital, by great effort, has come back into Class A which means that it is a hospital equipped with the most modern apparatus. That this has happened is due in part to the work and interest of the auxiliary and in the four and one half years when they have stood godmother to the local institution, many interesting things have happened. Over $16 000 has been raised by the women in that short time. No part of the hospital but has been more perfect by their gifts —namely, the X ray room and the equipment, the up-to-date fixtures for operating rooms, private rooms furnished and other appaartus too numerous to mention, both large and small. Also, the money raised has carried on the work of the departments of the auxiliary which has been done quietly and systematically in the four years of the organization's existence.

Has the effort it has cost been worth while? Ask the new mothers who have benefited by the modern appliances in the maternity wing; ask the children in the ward whose days are brightened with visits, books, toys and delicacies; ask the ward patients what Christmas time means with its gifts and decorations and cheer and the long days when visitors bring the magazines, books, flowers and music; ask every doctor or patient who has used the X ray room with its fine equipment. Holidays have been made gay with pretty favors on patients' trays; Christmas, a real feast day with turkey dinner, and Thanksgiving, too; patients have been taken to ride by the motor corps; the nurses have been given good times to keep them fit to work; thousands of bandages and dressings have been made to relieve the nurses for other tasks; hospital shelves have been stored with old linen and cotton; with jellies, fruit and vegetables. These and so much more has been the work of the different branches of the auxiliary in the past but greater things are in store in the coming year. There are many needs that our dollars can supply.

The hospital has made great strides but it still needs the Womans' auxiliary to provide the humanising touch that cannot be properly included in the maintenance cost but which is of greatest benefit to the patients. This work has been backed in the past by the community and the membership drive this fall should reach its goal with enthusiastic support.

VOTES RETURN TO OLD RATES WHILE NEW SCHEDULE IS FORMULATED

When the board of gas and electrical commissioners last week brought here to explain to a public meeting the expert who had led them into adopting a new schedule of rates for electricity, Mayor Lee Roy Robbins did not attend their meeting.

When Mayor Robbins called a special city meeting for Thursday evening to discuss the whole subject of the conduct of the municipality owned gas and electric plant, none of the members of the board were present, apparently, at least none responded when the meeting gave opportunity for any of them to speak.

The board's meeting last week at the Community house had an attendance of between 150 and 200. The mayor's meeting Thursday night had an attendance of something between 1,200 and 1,500, who packed the town hall with a standing room crowd that extended out in a dense mass into the corridor.

Five different resolutions applying to the new electric rates, the sale of appliances, the defense of an injunction suit, payment of commissions on sales of appliances, and creation of a committee to confer with the gas and electrical commissioners were passed by the meeting.

After City Clerk Weston C. Pullen had read the call for the meeting, Mayor Robbins announced that he had received on Wednesday from the board of gas and electrical commissioners a communication which they requested he have read at the meeting, but since then this communication had been published in the Norwich Evening Record and the gas and electrical board had advised him that they would not insist on having the letter read at the city meeting.

The mayor asked the meeting to express its pleasure regarding the communication and when a vote to have it read was passed, Clerk Pullen read the long communication, occupying about ten minutes in this detail of the meeting.

Mayor Robbins spoke a word of caution that non-residents of the city had no vote in the meeting and went on to say that the board of gas and electrical commissioners was created by statute and was free of control from the city administration or a city meeting. Because of that he said that any votes passed would have to indicate the sense of the meeting, rather than be orders to the gas and electrical board. He spoke of the business of the meeting as a serious matter and said that the gas and electrical department was the greatest individual asset which the city owns. He warned against snap judgment or taking hasty action. The members of the board, he said, are serving voluntarily and without pay, they are reputable and respected citizens and are entitled to respect. He asked that any smoldering anger which any one might have be kept under control and that personalities and abuse be eliminated. He asked that speakers be brief and to the point and that the meeting might be one of action rather than of general discussion.

Resolution on Rates

Charles L. Stewart moved the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved: that it is the sense of this meeting that the schedule for electricity recently adopted and put into effect by the board of gas and electrical commissioners is discriminatory, unequitable and unsatisfactory; and it is the further sense of this meeting that said board of gas and electrical commissioners at the earliest possible date suspend the operation of said schedule and substitute therefor the schedule formerly enforced until such time as fair and reasonable rates to benefit all consumers may be determined upon and put into effect.

Mr. Stewart commended the mayor's admonition about the spirit to be followed in the meeting and went on to say that he was informed that the gas and electrical commission had spent $5,000 to put the new rates into effect. You don't have to be an expert to see the inequality in them, he said, and he instanced his own case where he was charged last month at 5 cents per kilowatt hour at his house and $3 for 2 kilowatt hours at his office. You don't need an expert to see error by such a schedule, he declared. It is going into the pocket of the small consumer to pay the bill of the larger user. It is unfair and unjust and the place to correct it is here now.

The resolution was passed by a viva voice vote with two or three shouts of 'No" against it.

Sale of Appliances

Henry H. Gallup offered the following resolution:

Resolved: That it is the sense of this meeting that the board of gas and electric commissioners discontinue the sale of gas and electrical appliances of all kinds commencing on or before May 1, 1929, and that the city clerk be instructed to notify said commissioners of this action.

Speaking on the motion, Mr. Gallup said this was not a new subject with him but he still felt that it was unfair to the merchants of the city, who were paying taxes, paying rents or own their own property, to have this competition from the gas and electrical department. They claim that it brings increased use of appliances and thereby adds to the income of the department, but that doesn't affect the unfairness of it, said Mr. Gallup, who also declared he believed the department had no legal right to sell appliances and he hoped the meeting felt as he did about it.

Seconding Mr. Gallup's motion, Adelard Morin said there was more than the tax side to the question. Approval of the petition, he said, had been given by 300 merchants, not because of competition but because of unfair methods of merchandising. He spoke of expensive installations made and left out for more than two years without a dollar of return. This is no good merchandising and if the commissioners don't know what is going on it is time they found out. Let it be stopped. Private corporations, said Mr. Morin, will tell you that the sale of appliances is not a profitable department. The expert whom the commission brought here had but one alibi, he was afraid people would buy at the five and ten cent store. It is extravagant merchandising, said Mr. Morin, who charged that all sorts of inducements are made to some and high prices are charged to others. If competition were fair, I'd have no objection to it. If they were to put this department on its own feet, they would find they didn't want it and I wouldn't want it.

Former Board Member Speaks

E. C. Carpenter, who was a member of the board for five years some time ago, arose to the defense of the board. This merchandise department, he said, was put in while he was a commissioner. At that time you couldn't buy a decent electrical flat iron or reliable appliances. None of the local merchants would take a chance of going into the business and the city department went into the business after calling the merchants into conference. The department advertisements read that these appliances can be bought at the Eaton-Chase company or O'Neil's or other places. It's pretty nice, said Mr. Carpenter, to have a department where the city treasurer can get $20,000, when he needs it and as he has done.

Mr. Carpenter spoke of the way sales had increased, resulting in increase in the gas output at the plant and the meeting started to heckle him when he made some reference to putting $100,000 into his own business without getting anything back in Norwich so that it made little difference whether he lived here or not. Some credit, he said, was due the commissioners and the meeting ought to appoint a committee to work with them. You may wake up and find something has been taken from under your feet.

Albert Boardman declared he was rather on the fence on this matter, for he was a believer in municipal ownership, but he had signed the petition because he believed the department was not being worked right. If statements were being made about the department which were not true, the commissioners should be exonerated. If they were true, they should stand the blame. If the commissioners don't feel any obligation, they are not fit to hold their places. They should know what is going on and not take the manager's word for it.

Herbert B. Cary of the Eaton-Chase company spoke briefly, saying that he thought the members of the board were fair-minded men and he was not criticising them, but the department was not run right. Mr. Cary got a storm of applause when he declared that he wanted to stay in Norwich, where he was born and where he liked to stay.

Conditions in Bridgeport

William Shanley, who is connected with the gas department, came from the rear of the hall to the front and spoke of what he knew of conditions in Bridgeport where he was in charge for five years before he came here. The Bridgeport Gas Light company, he said, was paying out more money for servicing than they were making. Then the Bridgeport Gas Appliances company was formed, which made a charge for services and is gouging the people $1.50 every time anyone calls for service. Here you call for service and you get it at any hour of the day or night. The people in Bridgeport own nothing. One service man there does all the trouble work on Bridgeport houses. You get what you pay for there and nothing more.

Speaking of the way appliances are left out in Norwich and not paid for Mr. Shanley raised laughter and applause when he said "The people are taxpayers and own the plant and you've got to trust them. Bridgeport shuts off the gas if the bill isn't paid in 15 days, but the bigger the people are the harder it seems to be to get the money".

He spoke of an incinerator left in a house for three months and not paid for. "I wish Mr. Morin would answer and tell why he didn't pay for that incinerator," declared Mr. Stanley as he took his seat.

Mr. Morin Answers

Mr. Morin replied at once, saying he was glad Mr. Shanley had mentioned this. He said that Earl Taggart came to him and said "Why don't you put in an incinerator for your apartment house." The price, according to Mr. Morin was $165, but Mr. Taggart told him it would cost him $125 if he kept it. "If you don't want it, it will cost you nothing and I'll take it out." was what Mr. Taggart said, according to Mr. Morin. He was told it would cost $2 per month, but the cost ran up to $3 per month and when he found refuse was being left around just as usual he didn't want it. "I didn't pay for it because I didn't agree to pay for it," declared Mr. Morin, who went on to speak of an electric stove which was put into an apartment for a tenant at a cost of $300 with $100 more for service. The tenant never paid for it and it was taken out in six months. He spoke also of some heaters that were put in and declared it was not a business proposition from any angle you want to look at it.

The meeting enjoyed the spirited exchange between the two speakers, giving them both applause and cheers.

Claims Unfair Competition.

Carl W. Brown, agent here for the Delco Light products and Frigidaire, spoke of the city of Pittsfield, where the New England Power company sells appliances. The merchants can't live there, said Mr. Brown. When material is sold there it is paid for, but not so here, declared Mr. Brown, who charged that there was discrimination and said the Norwich merchants would never have taken action if the matter was handled on a fair basis It is unfair competition which the merchants complain against.

James P. Sheridan added humor to the meeting when he said he was afraid the gas and electric department was to be put into one of these incinerators. He said he had heard rumors of another offer for the gas and electric department and he warned the citizens to be careful what they do. "All the stores will let you have appliances. I can go anywhere and get what I want." he declared.

"Who are you?" came a voice from the crowd.

"They let me have it because they think I'll pay. Of course I know they are taking a chance," responded Mr. Sheridan as he turned the laugh in his favor. If the appliance department needs rectifying, let's fix it and do it right.

He compared a bill in Baltic for $3.56 for 30 kilowatt hours from the Eastern Connecticut Power company with his own September bill for $3.40 for 24 kilowatt hours, and went on to say that he would like to tell anonymous letter writers what he thought of them. George Pitcher, he said, was the only man who had the courage to sign his name to a letter when he put it in the newspapers.

Mr. Carpenter spoke again and called attention to the new hydraulic plant which the department had put in and paid for. He clarified his former statement about getting something back from Norwich by saying that he meant his business had no local field, but he was as good a citizen as any other and he wanted to stay in Norwich.

Mr. Gallup added a few remarks about the overhead expenses of the department and said he didn't believe they they were making a dollar out of the sales department because it was costing too much.

John F. Carney asked if it wouldn't be fair to the commissioners to ask them to make some statement.

Mayor Robbins called on any of the commissioners who were in the hall to speak, but there was no response.

The meeting then called for a vote on the motion involving to the sales department.

On the first shouted vote, Mayor Robbins declared that the "ayes" had it. His decision was doubted and the vote was taken again. This time the mayor declared he was in doubt and directed that the vote be taken by ballot.

Although the hall was crowded to standing room only a small proportion passed in front of the desk to deposit their ballots.

The voting started a few minutes after 9 o'clock and at 9:30 o'clock the ballot box was closed, as all who wished to vote had cast their ballots. Mayor Robbins appointed Henry L. Saxton and A. S. Comstock as tellers to assist Tyler D. Guy and Lawrence E. Miller, owing to the large vote.

234 Yes, 221 No

The count was completed at 9:45 o'clock, at which time City Clerk Pullen announced the result as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Total votes cast | 455 |
| Necessary for choice | 228 |
| In favor of the resolution | 234 |
| Against the resolution | 221 |

The resolution was adopted by the ballot vote.

Vote on Injunction Suit

H. H. Gallup then introduced a resolution instructing the corporation counsel not to defend the injunction suit pending against the gas and electric commissioners to restrain them from selling electrical appliances. The resolution was read by the city clerk, as follows:

Resolved: That inasmuch as no monetary damages are asked, that the corporation counsel of the city of Norwich be instructed not to defend the injunction suit now pending against the gas and electrical department of the city of Norwich to refrain them from selling gas and electrical appliances of all kinds, and that the court of common council be instructed not to approve any bill of expense contracted for such defense.

Mr. Gallup moved the adoption of the resolution and it was quickly seconded. No one spoke in favor or against the resolution and it was adopted by acclamation.

Against Commissions on Sales

Mr. Gallup then introduced and moved the adoption of a resolution instructing the common council not to approve any bills for commissions for the sale of appliances by the G. and E. department. The clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved: That on and after May 1, 1929, the court of common council be instructed not to approve any bills for the payment of commissions for the sales of gas and electrical appliances by the gas and electrical department of the city of Norwich.

There were no remarks on this resolution, which was adopted by acclamation, there being but two or three "noes."

Committee of Five

Charles L. Stewart presented a resolution appointing a committee of five citizens to confer with the board of gas and electrical commissioners for the purpose of recommending to the city a "fair and reasonable schedule of rates for consumers of gas and electricity." The city clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved: That Roy D. Judd, M. L. Bergstresser, H. H. Gallup, Michael H. Hourigan and Albert Boardman be appointed by this meeting a committee of five to confer with the board of gas and electrical commissioners of the city of Norwich, for the purpose of recommending to said city a fair and reasonable schedule of rates for consumers of gas and electricity; and that a report embodying such recommendations be made to a special city meeting to be called by the mayor not later than January 15, 1929; and be it further

Resolved: That should any member of said special committee be unable or decline to serve, the mayor is hereby expressly authorized and empowered to fill by appointment any vacancy or vacancies occurring in said committee.

In moving the adoption of the resolution Mr. Stewart called attention to the fact that the meeting had already voted to return to the old rates for the time being. He said there is still a question as to whether or not the old rates cannot be improved on. He said the purpose of the resolution was to appoint a committee to work with the board of gas and electrical commissioners in order that a satisfactory schedule of rates might be secured.

The gas and electric commissioners are all honorable men," said Mr. Stewart. "I am their friend and hope they are my friends. While we may differ, let us resolve to cherish no personal animosity."

The resolution was unanimously adopted by an acclamation vote. This brought the business of the meeting to a close. Just before a motion for adjournment was made, Mayor Robbins said that instead of a smouldering sense of anger at the meeting there was evidently a smouldering sense of humor. He thanked the meeting for the general good order shown during the two-hour session. The meeting adjourned a minute or two before 10 o'clock.

PLAINFIELD PROS OPEN SEASON NEXT WEEK WITH BECKMAN'S CLUB

The basketball season in eastern Connecticut opens next Wednesday night at the Plainfield Community house when the Plainfield Pros take on Johnny Beckman's Detroit Five. Manager Lester Salisbury has made a happy selection in choice of opponents for the opener as Johnny Beckman, formerly a member of the world's champion Original Celtics, is known from coast to coast as one of the best forwards in the game.

Johnny Beckman has been playing basketball for the past 16 years and is as fast today as he was ten years ago. Johnny started his basketball career with a church five in New York city in 1912 as a guard. After playing two games he was moved to a forward position. He remained with this club for two years and then his ability attracted the attention of the Kingston management in the New York state league and he was given a tryout. He immediately made good and the following year was bought by the Pittston team of the Eastern league. It was in this league that Beckman began to attract nation-wide attention by his wonderful playing against Jim Thorp. Beckie captained the Pittson team in four championships and then was bought by the New York Celtics and for six years led this team. His running-mate was Nat Holman. In 1926 Beckman was sold to Baltimore and under his management he finished in second place in the American league, being beaten only by his old teammates, the Original Celtics.

Now Beckman is engaged in barn-storming, and has collected a fast bunch of basketeers in Roxbury, Kellatt, Bergen and Franks. This club so far this season has won ten games, tied one and lost one to the Celtics by a single point.

To oppose this team, Manager Salisbury has the same team as last season with Whitey Bernot, the six feet two inch blonde, and one of the flashiest basketball players in the game, teaming with Leo Normandin as guards. Roy Dissinger better known as "Diss" is being heralded as one of the greatest basketball players that ever wore the Plainfield uniform. Dissinger can play any position but will probably start the season at center. Brusso and Kasper, the midget forwards, are expected to go even better this season than last when they made a very enviable record. The record of Normandin is still fresh in the minds of the basketball fans and needs no reviewing.

In the preliminary the Buddies will encounter the U. S. S. Camden five, champions of the navy. The Buddies will again line up with Mercier and Mercer forwards, Bromley center and Marriott and Peterson guards, and are out to hold their claim to the Junior championship of New England—challenging any team between the ages of 16 to 21.

RACING TO BE RESUMED AT HIALEAH TRACK

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 8—(AP)—Racing at Hialeah Park, plant of the Miami Jockey club, will be resumed this winter with a meeting opening Jan. 17 and continuing through March 16, officials of the club announced today, adding that the meeting would be "within the law."

The Florida Derby, carrying a $10,000 purse, will be one of the features of the program, as yet uncompleted, although stake blanks are being mailed to stable owners throughout the nation.

It was understood, however, that purses this year will not be as large as when Hialeah operated with the pari-mutuel system of betting.

Citizens Challenge

The Norwich Citizens, challenge the Mahoney All Stars to play at the Chelsea parade at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Captain of Norwich Citizens is Herman Ferry. If accepted answer in this paper.

MASS. VOTE ON SUNDAY SPORTS PLEASES HEYDLER

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—In the decision of Massachusetts to allow Sunday baseball, President John Heydler of the National league finds a compliment to the game as well as a significant indication of the present-day attitude toward it. A statement issued today by Mr. Heydler concerning the Massachusetts referendum says that the favorable vote is a result of the way baseball has been conducted in other states which allow Sunday games. Pennsylvania now is the only state in which the major leagues operate that does not allow Sunday ball.

Mr. Heydler's statement:

"The vote of Massachusetts last Tuesday to allow Sunday baseball in that state should be a matter of gratification to all liberal-minded people. That a million or more of the men and women of that state should take the time and pains to study and vote on the Sunday sports referendum is significant. The majority that the measure received is also significant, for that simply bears out the liberal and progressive trend of the times.

"We have had Sunday baseball for some years now in Greater New York and it has been of benefit to the city. It has provided a wholesome and happy background for a Sunday afternoon, for more ladies attend baseball on Sunday than on all other days of the week put together.

"We now have Sunday baseball in every state in which the major leagues operate except Pennsylvania. Organized ball has kept faith with those who gave her Sunday ball and as a result has enjoyed the support and best wishes of a very large majority of the people in all major cities.

"The indorsement given by the people of the great commonwealth of Massachusetts, I consider, is not only a distinct compliment to the game but to the sportsmanlike manner in which it is conducted on the field."

BLIND BOYS TO PLAY FOOTBALL GAME SATURDAY

HARTFORD, Nov. 8—(AP)—The Connecticut School for the Blind will be represented by a football team for the first time since its foundation, when 11 blind students play the team from the Watkins farm school Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Three members of the school for the blind team are totally blind. The rest have only slight vision, none more than one-tenth. The coach is Milan H. Palmer, former Middlebury college player.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

Windham, quite flushed with the victory over the Academy, plays Bristol this week end and has an even chance of winning.

The Academy-Hartford battle Saturday will be hard-fought, no doubt there, but Hartford is the favorite.

A Chapman Tech victory over Bulkeley in Hartford today would not surprise.

Stonington and Westerly are idle this week preparing for their battle next Monday. That ought to be a good game.

Torrington's defeat by Naugatuck was a distinct setback to the New City team and its followers. Torrington had high hopes of an unbeaten season and had run up a real impressive record.

INDOOR SIGNAL DRILL FOR HARVARD SQUAD

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 8—(AP)—Rain drove the Harvard varsity football team indoors in the baseball cage today but Head Coach Arnold Horween, was able to put the squad through a long workout and signal drill.

The first team was pitted against the ineligibles who used Pennsylvania plays. Then Horween gave the regulars a few new plays and perfected them by sending the team through the usual signal drill.

Though the Crimson coach refused to name his starting lineup against Pennsylvania as has been his Thursday custom this season, he said that George "Shorty" Crawford, who made an excellent showing as quarterback in the Dartmouth game, would probably start against the Red and Blue eleven. Pennsylvania has not played in the Harvard stadium since 1904.

Horween received encouraging news from Dr. Tommy Richards, his chief medical aide, who pronounced Tommy Gilligan and Sam Burns, two of Harvard's most valuable replacements, as fit for action. Both were injured in last week's Lehigh game and it was expected then that they would be out for at least two weeks.

Lou Young's Pennsylvania squad, 35 strong, was expected to arrive here tomorrow morning and arrangements have been made for them to work out in the stadium at 11 a. m.

BROWN PRACTICES PASSING IN BIG GYMNASIUM

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8—(AP)—A driving rain falling on a gridiron already ankle-deep in water today forced the Brown varsity football squad to don gym suits and hold the first indoor workout on record on the big floor of the new gymnasium.

The first and second teams went through a long dummy scrimmage against Dartmouth plays with Dave Michell, backfield coach throwing the ball. With the plays not actually engaged in the drill lining the running track overhead, Mishel completed several passes which travelled nearly the full length of the gym.

Three teams also ran through a signal drill and Link Fogarty and Sam Flora polished up their forward passing.

CARNEGIE STUDENTS TO ATTEND GAME IN PLANES

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 8—(AP)—Seven Carnegie Tech students including W. C. Vickery of Brewer, Maine, and one member of the faculty plan to hop off in two planes for Albany, N. Y., Friday afternoon to attend Saturday's football game between Carnegie Tech and Georgetown university.

Time will not permit them to go by train so they will leave by plane shortly after noon Friday, planning to return to Pittsburgh immediately after the game.

FEUD ON BETWEEN ORGANIZATIONS SPONSORING SIX DAY BIKE RACING

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—The sports public in general may not know it, but the feud that goes up every ten years or so in the world of the whirring wheels is on again.

This time it is the Sports Stadium Incorporated that is furnishing the opposition to the all-powerful National Cycling association, whose president, John "Little Tex" Chapman, has ruled the six day bicycle game for many years. Chapman, in between the annual grinds in Detroit, New York and Chicago, helps Tex Rickard run Madison Square Garden.

The new organization, has gathered some 40 discontented riders under its banner. The field is headed by such international stars as Pete Van Kempen, Rene Beegman, and Mike Rodak, of Holland, the Belgians, Debates, Wynsen, and Declerck, and the American stars, Bobby Walthour, Jr., Mike Fenn, Winter, Coburp, Garrison and Hill.

The first test of strength between the old organization and the new was staged in the midwest last week when the Sports Stadium ran a six day race in a Chicago armory while Chapman's organization opened the long distance season in Detroit, now the insurgents are heading for New York. "Czar" Chapman's home territory, with a race scheduled to open in an armory here the week of Nov. 24, seven days before the National Cycling association opens its sleepless week in the Garden.

Ten years ago an organization similar to the new Sports Stadium, Inc., attempted to break the National Cycling association and crashed in the attempt. Before that others tried and failed. The new company, with firm financial backing, is planning to build a rink of its own at Coney Island to seat 28,000 and thus provide itself a permanent home, the downfall of previous competitors.

The color and history of the six day game is as exciting as the races themselves. Back in the 90's Teddy Hale, an Englishman, won the first race staged in an old railroad station that stood on a site later occupied by the old Madison Square Garden, itself now a faint memory. Hale rode the whole way without a partner and with only occasional rests. About 1894 Miller and Waller won the first team race, when the combatants got as far ahead as possible and stayed there without ever sprinting.

Sprinters such as the famous Bobby Walthour, Sr., Harry Elks, Eddie Rutt, Joe Sogler, Clark and McEachern came into the game around 1900 and revolutionized the industry. They added an hour of sprints to the tail end of a race and gradually adopted the "Berlin" system of counting points for sprints staged every few hours throughout the grind. This system added the thrills necessary for box office satisfaction and the game grew steadily in popular favor. Whereas Al Goulett alone could command as high as $175 a day for the one race a year in those days, now the grinds at home and abroad net a good rider such as Reggie McNamara, Francisco Georgetti and Charlie Spencer, an average of $25,000 a year.

The advent of the new organization probably will be welcomed in New York if only to provide another excuse for staying out all night or even all week. Many a stenographer will have to add "Armory" to the boss' address that for two weeks out of the year used to be just "The Garden."

CURTIN WINS VERDICT OVER TONY LUCCI

WATERBURY, Nov. 8—(AP)—Irish Danny Curtin, Jersey City, 135, won an eight-round decision over Tony Lucci, Clinton, Mass., 134 1-2, in the main bout of the Waterbury A. C. staged at Buckingham hall here tonight. Results of four other bouts were as follows:

Paulie Sykes, Jersey City, 153, knocked out Lou Carmel, Holyoke, 154, first round.

Charlie Pitts, Clinton, Mass., 124, six-round decision over Frankie Carlton, Jersey City.

Danny Murphy, Waterbury, 162, knocked out Charlie Brown, New Haven, 160, first round.

Paddy Jones, Waterbury, 191, was awarded his bout with Jim McCarthy, New Haven, 185, when the latter dropped to his knees without the force of a blow in the first round.

Acmy Basketeers Challenge

The Acmy Basketball Five of New London would like to book games with Norwich and teams in that vicinity, to be played away from New London. The Acmy have been members of the Y. M. C. A. city league for the past five years and have been runners-up four successive times. Any teams desiring games write to A. Mortensen, 23 Mahan street, New London, Conn., stating dates and amount of guarantee.

B. C. Has Short Workout

BOSTON, Nov. 8—(AP)—The rain forced Coach Joe McKenney to give his Boston college football squad but a short workout today in preparation for next Monday's game with Fordham. McKenney, who has decided that his backfield cannot penetrate the heavy Fordham line, stressed on forward passing and end runs.

AGGIE COMPLETE DRILL FOR NEW HAMPSHIRE GAME

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 8—Despite a drizzling rain that continued throughout the practice session this afternoon, Head Coach Sumner A. Dole ran his Connecticut Aggie charges through the final drill for the New Hampshire university contest at Durham this Saturday. Most of the afternoon was given over with signal practice and a review of the aerial attack that is expected to do some damage against the eleven at Durham next Saturday.

The Connecticut Aggie varsity will face one of the hardest tests against the New Hampshire eleven which has been going along at a steady pace thus far this year. The Nutmeggers have a slight edge, however, since they have gone through five games without tasting defeat or being scored upon. As a result, Coach Dole's 1928 varsity eleven is amongst the few remaining college elevens in the country that are in the undefeated column. In the five years of relationships with the New Hampshire university, the Connecticut college has taken three out of the five games and tied one, giving New Hampshire one victory. In 1923, the first year of the meeting, the score was tied at the end of the game with neither team scoring. On the following year at Storrs, New Hampshire tasted defeat by a margin of 6-3. They evened the score on the following year by a wider margin and won 17-3. In 1926 and 1927, the Aggies won by 3-0 and 9-6 scores indicating that field goals had a great deal to do with the outcome of the games. Last year when the game was played in Manchester, New Hampshire as a benefit feature, the Aggies did not place the winning touchdown until the last few minutes of play. They were trailing by three points.

This year the Nutmeggers are unfortunate in not having a drop kicker of ex-Captain Eddy's type. Eddy played in the backfield last year and his foot work was a main factor in Nutmeg victories. This year the Nutmeggers have punters but not goal kickers. Coach Dole will resort to the aerial attack, however, and rely upon his strong defensive machine to ward off the line plunges of the New Hampshire backs. The Durham eleven has used this form of offensive all season and due to their large sized linemen they have not developed an open type of warfare. On the other hand, the Nutmeggers are confident in the work of such runners as Ryan and Fisher coupled with the line plunging of Harger for short gains. The work of these three men on the offensive should place the Aggies in the winning column providing the field is in good conditions for wide end running and open plays.

HOCKEY HOLDOUTS SIGN TERMS WITH PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 8—(AP)—Hib Milks, and Harold Darragh, stars of the Pittsburgh Hockey team, came to terms with the management tonight, officials of the club announced following a conference with the holdouts.

Roy Worters, sensational goalie, now the lone holdout of the club, failed to adjust his salary differences with the Pirate officials, and said he would leave tomorrow for his home in Toronto. Club officials said Joe Miller or Verne Forbes would be here in a day or so to take his place.

The Pirates open the National Professional Hockey league season here next Thursday night against the Boston Bruins.

RAIN AND MUD PREVENTS PRACTICE OF YALE SQUAD

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8—(AP)—Rain and a muddy field forced Coach Stevens to call off the practice today of the Yale football squad. Tomorrow the lineup to start against Maryland will engage in a strenuous session with a scrimmage against the scrubs winding up the day's work. All the first string players with the exception of Charlesworth at center, will face the southern foe as Stevens considers Maryland a scrappy aggregation and will take no chance of a setback.

Palmer, substitute center last year, will be in the starting lineup. All the other members of the squad with the exception of Ellis, second string quarterback and Loeser, a center, will be available for duty on Saturday.

BRIDGEPORT MEN TO GET E. L. FRANCHISE

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 8—(AP)—Fred J. Voos, Jr., representing a group of Bridgeport businessmen, headed by Walter Anderson, former owner of the New York Rangers hockey team, will be awarded the Bridgeport franchise in the Eastern league at a special meeting of the circuit in Springfield tomorrow, the Bridgeport Telegram will say tomorrow. The franchise was turned back to the league at the close of last season and the club went into voluntary bankruptcy as the result of failure of stockholders to invest money in the project.

The new owners will assume all financial responsibilities of the bankrupt club, the Telegram will say.

HAWLEY NOT SATISFIED WITH HIS FOOTBALLERS

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 8—(AP)—Although Al Marsters, Fred Brelthut and Shep Wolff, Dartmouth's best ball carriers, were in the lineup today, the workout was discouraging to Head Coach Jesse Hawley because his stars have not mastered the new plays and signals he gave out for this week's Brown game.

These men, none of whom saw action against Yale last week, have been absent from dummy scrimmage for the past ten days and their return today resulted in slowing up the Green's running attack. All of them showed the effects of their long lay-off and several times during the session the new signals were confused.

HILLHOUSE ATHLETES GIVE BLOOD FOR TEAMMATE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8—(AP)—Five members of the Hillhouse high school football team promptly volunteered blood transfusion for Robert Stack, regular lineman of the team, when it was called for today. Stack was injured in a game with Crosby high school of Waterbury on Oct. 12 and has been confined to a hospital since.

Singer Scores Technical K. O.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—Al Singer, Bronx featherweight, won on a technical knockout in the fifth round of his ten-round bout with Johnny Lawson of Jersey City, N. J., at the St. Nicholas arena tonight. Until the finishing punch the fifth was unexpectedly close. Singer weighed 127; Lawson 129 1-2.

Kid Chocolate, latest Cuban bantamweight sensation, pounded out an easy ten-round decision over Pinky Silverberg of Ansonia, Conn. The Kid could not drop the New Englander but outpointed him by a wide margin. Chocolate weighed 119 1-4; Silverberg 118.

A Challenge for Talbot

Jimmy Jackson of the West Side issues a challenge to Harold Talbot, the Montville Panther, for a bout either in Norwich, New London or Montville. Jackson will make any weight that the Panther might desire. Al Jackson wants is a chance to swap punches with the Montville lad. Chick Spivery is handling Jackson and arrangements for the bout can be made through him.

BEAUREGARD WINS FROM LUCCI

HARTFORD, Nov. 8—(AP)—Al Beauregard of Norwich staged a rally in the last three rounds to win the referee's decision over Pete Lucci of Clinton, Mass., in the eight-round feature bout of a card at Foot Guard hall tonight.

The two slugged through every round of the match. Beauregard was a harder puncher and Lucci tired near the finish. In the other bouts, Vernon Cormier of Worcester, 118, won the decision in eight rounds over Ruby Bradley, 114, of Hlyke; Mickey Roberts, Hartford, 122, won the decision in eight rounds over Hop Wah, 119 1-2, of New York; Frankie Portelle, 142 1-2, Hartford, won the decision over Ray Hogan, 142, Terryville; Nick Christie, 132, Bristol, won technical knockout over George Welch, 132, Hartford, in the third round.

COLLEGE TEAMS WIND UP HARD DRILLS

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—Eastern college football elevens wound up intensive workouts today and sat down to wait for the signal that will send them into actual combat Saturday afternoon. Here and there a little polishing up will have to be done between now and game time but otherwise the pigskin chasers will get only enough work to keep them on edge.

Head Coach "Biff" Jones gave his undefeated Army warriors only a short workout with a dummy scrimmage as the principal feature. The Cadets tangle with Notre Dame in one of the most important battles of the difficult schedule. Some 86,000 persons are expected to pack the Yankee Stadium for this outstanding intersectional fray with the odds favoring the Cadets by as much as 2 to 1.

Navy, getting ready for another important intersectional game with Michigan's Wolverines, devoted its attention to a defensive scrimmage. The scrubs, strengthened by the addition of several ex-Navy stars, used Michigan formations in a vain attempt to pierce the varsity's defense. This game, to be played at Baltimore, probably will draw a crowd of close to 70,000.

Although he declined outright to predict a victory, Lou Young did intimate that he would be disappointed if his Pennsylvania eleven did not conquer Harvard. The Quaker squad of 36 left for Cambridge tonight.

With good reason, Carnegie Tech students appear most excited about the Tartans' clash with Georgetown at Albany, N. Y. Ten budding engineers Lowry's place in the backfield today announced they would make the trip from Pittsburgh to the New York state capital by airplane. Georgetown and Carnegie, both undefeated and untied, at present share with Boston college and Army the honor of leading the eastern football parade. One of both may be eliminated. Boston college, incidentally, gets a real test next Monday when Fordham's Maroons are encountered.

Washington and Jefferson will have its regular lineup for the Pitt game, all of the cripples having recovered, but the Panthers probably will have to go into action without Tom Parkinson, hard-plunging fullback.

Although West Virginia anticipates little trouble with the Oklahoma Aggies, the Mountaineers were not sorry to learn that Eddie Stumpp, sophomore halfback, who has been on the injured list for several weeks, would be available for duty if needed.

Sam Sebo and Warren Stevens will be out of the Syracuse lineup when the Orange meets undefeated Ohio Wesleyan. These two varsity backfield men will go to Hamilton to scout Colgate against Hobart tootsed.

Rain and snow at Ithaca cut short Cornell's preparations for St. Bonaventura but Penn State's Nittany Lions, who meet George Washington next, had to undergo another scrimmage.

Princeton will take the field against Washington and Lee without the services of Mike Miles, Jack Whyte, Levine and Jones. Requardt was at

Johnny Shows Bobby How

By Alan J. Gould
Associated Press Sports Editor

Johnny Farrell's winning gesture in the 1928 National Open championship at Olympia field was his uphill thirty-foot putt on the home green, but it would never have been possible except for the wonderful recovery shot preceding it.

Leaving the 36th and final tee in his memorable playoff for the title with Bobby Jones, Farrell was fighting to keep his one stroke margin on the great Georgia. Johnny's drive had sliced into rough at the base of a bunker. Bobby's was hooked into trees at the left of the fairway on this tricky 490-yard hole.

It looked like taps for Farrell when he walloped his second into the near edge of a ditch crossing the fairway about 100 yards from the well-guarded green. Jones, with a mighty poke, sent his second about hole high, a trifle to the left of the green. He was within easy distance of the pin, however, for a birdie 4 that looked good enough to win.

Farrell's ball was in thick grass. It looked as though he would be lucky to get out of it, let alone reach the green, but Johnny swung the niblick that had been doing him such good service all day and to the big crowd's amazement sent his ball on a dead line to the flag. It was rolling straight for the cup when it stopped eight feet short. This marvelous recovery enabled the slim New York "pro" to halve the hole in sensational fashion, both getting their birdie fours, and win by the single stroke margin he had gained on the 34th.

GOOD SPORT RODNEY CRANE PAYS HIS ELECTION BET

With the big election out of the way it is time to pay the bets lost on Smiling Al Smith. One bet was made that if Hoover won, the loser would walk from Old Mystic to the town dock in his bare feet and jump into the cold water with his clothes on. So Rodney Crane left in an automobile for Old Mystic to pay the bet he had lost. Several fellows went along to see that he did it all right. Good Sport Rodney took off his shoes and socks; a sign on his back read "I bet on Smiling Al Smith and lost". He started on his way and all along the line was given a big cheer. With a smile he said the ground was cold but it felt good on his corns. Getting near the town dock the bet was almost paid. The school children with their lunch boxes lined both sides of East Main street and they cheered and sang "It won't be long now Rodney!" The auto was following close behind. Reaching the dock a little tired from his six mile walk, taking a short rest, he made a pretty dive into the harbor and swam about for five minutes. Then he came ashore and said "Well, I will wait until 1932 before I take another swim for the democratic party! Then the good sport hurried home to change his clothes, so he would not get a November cold.

Had Thumb Crushed

Raymond Rathbun was working near Stonington Wednesday afternoon for the Providence Wrecking company taking up trolley rails. He got hold of his end all right but slipped on a banana peel that was in his way and the rail caught his thumb so as to split it through the middle. Only quick work on the part of his mate, Matterson, saved him from losing his thumb. Matterson lifted the rail off quickly. He was given first aid by Ben Chappell until the day was over and he could get the injury dressed by a doctor. It will be several days before he will be able to go back to his duties.

Alden Brocky has returned from a short visit at Woods Hole, Mass., with relatives.

Nuggets' Coach Grooms Team

The Nugget basketball team held its first practice under Coach Roy Abate, Wednesday evening at Corona hall. Ten players were on hand to try out for the team. Manager E. Rathbun had them run around the hall for 15 minutes to get their wind and then started them shooting from the center of the floor. Spark Plug B. Bracci made seven shots out of eight. Gee, what an eye he has! the coach said. He is the find of the year! New suits are on the way from New Hampshire for the players, colors black and orange with an orange on the jersey. After one and one-half hours of fast practice they went into the dressing rooms where Coach Abate gave a blackboard talk, pointing out the weak places and telling how to build around them. For an hour the coach told them about basketball when he was rated one of the best forwards on St. Luke's college team back in 1919. All the college papers had my picture on the front page. Gee what a send off I got when I left college for Connecticut. The students, 1200 of them went with their band to the train. That was in Texas. Say, what a time they gave me.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Reddy Tries a Trick

By Thornton W. Burgess

What honest effort can't attain
A clever trick will often gain.
—Reddy Fox

Two people were very much puzzled. Indeed they were! It is a question which was the most puzzled. Reddy Fox was puzzled by the problem of catching Rusty the Fox Squirrel. Rusty was in an old hole of Johnny Chuck's, but there was a back door as well as a front door to that hole. If Reddy should dig in by the front way Rusty could run out the back door and escape. If he should try to get in by the back way Rusty could escape through the front door.

On his part Rusty was puzzled. He couldn't tell at which door Reddy Fox was watching. If he should poke his head out at either door he might poke it right into the jaws of Reddy Fox. How was he to get out of that house and still escape Reddy Fox? He couldn't stay there indefinitely. In fact, he didn't like the idea of staying there at night. Rusty is in the habit of sleeping at night. He is afraid to be abroad in the dark, for he cannot see well enough. If he should stay there until dark Reddy Fox might creep in and surprise him without his knowing anything about it until he was caught.

Reddy sat down to think things over. He knows squirrels and their ways. He knew that Rusty would not be content to stay very long in a hole in the ground. A hole in a tree would be a very different matter, or even a hole in a log. But Rusty isn't naturally a ground-loving animal, and Reddy knew this.

"He'll come out of there just as soon as he thinks he has a chance," thought Reddy. "The trouble is, he won't know when he has the chance. He doesn't dare poke his head out, for he doesn't know at which hole I will be waiting. I must try some trick to get him out. The thing for me to do is to go hide a little way off and remain hidden. I shall have to remain patient a long time, but a fox squirrel is worth a long wait."

Reddy poked his head down the hole. "You're a lucky squirrel!" he barked. "If it were not that I have something better to do I would just sit down up here and keep you a prisoner until you were starved out. As it is I haven't the time to waste. So you may just consider yourself lucky, Rusty. Just consider yourself lucky. Goodby until next time."

Reddy withdrew his head, ran off a short distance, waited a moment or two and then barked softly, so as to make his voice sound far away. After that he stole swiftly but softly over among the bushes along the old fence within a couple of good jumps of both the back door and the front door of the woodchuck hole. Then he stretched himself out very flat and prepared to wait.

Now, Rusty the fox squirrel hadn't believed a word of what Reddy Fox had said. "I know that fellow," thought he. "I don't believe he has an engagement anywhere else. I don't believe he has something else to do. He's probably watching right close by in the hope that I'll think he has gone and will come out."

But when a few minutes later Rusty heard the faint bark of Reddy Fox, as if at a great distance, he wasn't so sure that Reddy hadn't done just what he said he was going to do. The longer he waited the more uncertain he became. It seemed to him that he just couldn't stay down in that hole much longer. First he would start up the long back hall, intending to peek out the back doorway. When he was almost there his courage would fail and he would go back and creep up the front hall until he was almost to the doorway. Then again his courage would fail and down he would go to sit and wonder if Reddy really was on watch outside.

Avoid Ugly Pimples

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

... AND HARD TIMES.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Well, now that the election's over, are you satisfied with the result? Owing to practical newspaper-making necessities, this talks has to be written before the outcome is known,—even before the votes are cast. Therefore I can't say "I told you so," nor can I crow over your defeat, for I don't know which side is to be licked. I may be rubbing my own sore head and wondering what hit me, when you read this. Anyway, there's one gain that comes to us all with old age,—we grow less partisan and more philosophic. We're more inclined to take what comes and make the best of it than to cry babyishly over spilt milk.

I can't keep from thinking of the old story of the Dutchman who had lost his wife. The neighbors came to condole with him and one of them asked if the lady was "reconcile to go?" "Reconciled?" surprisedly retorted Hans, "Mein Gott, she hatt to be!"

Whatever may have been our own hopes about the election result we may as well reconcile ourselves to it. We've got to, anyway.

And when you arrive at years of fullest discretion,—up around the eighties, you know,—you'll understand that government is about like all other things human, a mixture of good and bad. Our candidate wasn't and isn't a haloed angel; the other fellows' candidate wasn't and isn't a spike-tailed devil. There's some bad in the best of us; there's some good in the worst of us. Any government, headed by any man, is going to have some good in it, just as any government, headed by any man, is going to make some mistakes and commit some sins.

The part of wisdom as well as that of comfort is to hope for the best, even when we're worst disappointed. In the meantime, let's take our drubbing philosophically, if we are the ones licked, and our triumph humbly, if we are the winners. And both of us whole-heartedly rejoice that the tumult and the shouting are over for a while and be can go back to our farmin' or our flahin', whichever it is. Pope's famous couplet is highly appropriate to the present situation:

"For forms of government let fools contest;
That which is best administered is best."

And now,—let's talk about something else. I heard what struck me as a rather interesting story, the other day. A farmer of the neighborhood who still finds it possible to employ a "hired man," was approached by said hired man with a demand for an increase of wages. The employe was getting his house and rent free, a big and good garden, his milk and his fuel and $48 a month in money. "We can't live on it," was his plea. "Why, our grocer's bill last month was over $35," he said. The farmer's grocer's bill wasn't half that and he began to wonder.

"What did you have for supper last night?" he queried.

Hank scrotched his head a minute and then replied, "Oh, just a coupla cans sardines and one of French peas and bread and butter and tea," he answered.

"Baker's bread I s'pose," said Mr. Farmer, "and India-Ceylon tea at a dollar'nd half a pound?"

"Yep," answered Hank.

"Well," said Mr. Farmer, "at my house we had corn-meal mush and milk for sup'er."

"Corn-meal mush!" scornfully retorted Mr. Hired Man; "when I have to eat cattle fodder, I'll move into the barn and live with the other critters."

During the campaign which is now happily over, there has been a rancorous dispute as to whether or not the people of this country are prosperous or not. One side contended that, on the whole, America was in a state of rather unusual prosperity; the other side replied by citing instances of undeniable hardship and want. Perhaps neither side was quite impartial. In any event the federal government's share in brooding prosperity or breeding poverty was rather unduly over-stated.

Under any ordinary and normal conditions there will be men who will prosper,—and there will be men on the verge of pauperism. In a majority of cases,—not in all, but in more than half,—their differing conditions will be due to their own conduct.

There will always be cases where accident or disease or some other unforeseeable emergency reduces or destroys one's earning capacity. Such cases call, not so much for public charity, as for neighborly assistance. It really is not and should not be called "charity," the help which is lent or given in such emergencies. Nor should there be any stinting of it. It should be full, hearty, generous and without condescension on the one side or obsequiousness on the other.

Likewise, there will always be cases, no matter how high the average of general prosperity, of self-induced and self-propagated pauperism. Of pauperism wilfully chosen instead of the independence which comes with wage-earning labor. Any demagogue who is willing to hunt for them can find such cases. But no reasonable and honest man will blame the government, either national, state, town or city, for the existence of hobos, tramps and paupers. In a majority of cases they are such because they prefer to sponge their living off others rather than earn it for themselves.

And the tax imposed upon the self-sustaining members of the community to maintain them is not so much charity to the worthy poor as it is blackmail in behalf of loafers.

Quite a good many years ago, the city of Hartford found that its bills for outside poor relief were getting pretty big. The officers in charge of the dispensing of city charity had been in the habit of issuing to those pleading poverty orders for certain gross sums of money, to be presented by the applicants at any grocery and paid by the city. An impartial and non-partisan investigation showed that a great majority of the applicants for public relief, having secured their warrants, bought with them porterhouse steaks, high-priced cakes and cookies and candies, gilt-edged butter and the most costly brands of tea and coffee and the like. As a result of this investigation, the city stopped its hit-or-miss methods and gave orders on specified stores for corn meal or wheat flour or pork and beans or medium-priced coffees and teas, etc., according to the immediate need of each individual case. I have forgotten how much the city saved by this change, but it was a worth-while amount. Not only did the sensible foods scheduled cost less, they were more nutritious. There was no visible increase in the number of deaths from starvation in Hartford, but there was a noticeable decrease in the applications for public aid. A can of pork and beans at fifteen cents wasn't nearly so tempting as a pound of assorted chocolates at fifty cents.

A big New Haven grocer once told me that Artisan street, a street inhabited mostly by the poorer classes, demanded and took much higher grade groceries, especially in the lines of butter and meats, than Hillhouse avenue where "the nobs" lived.

In which fact lay one very real reason why the buyers of costlier grades lived in a near-slum while the buyers of cheaper qualities lived on the avenue. The first wasted their money on riotous living, the latter saved theirs by more economical buying.

Going back to our tale of Hank, the hired man, and his employer, it is easy to see why the two held those relative relations. Hank wanted to live like a lord and, of course, considered himself poor because he couldn't afford it. In the meantime, he lived up to the last cent of his wages. His employer, who might very well have lived higher than he did, thriftily kept his expenses down to a lower limit, laying aside the difference saved for the unknown but practically certain emergency which the future would bring.

Hank will never own his own farm, probably never his own furniture free from debt. He prefers present satisfaction to future security. He likes sardines better than chuck steak, and French petits pois better than pork and beans, and chocolate layer-cake better than corn meal mush.

Well, so do we all. Ninety-nine people out of the hundred prefer gilt-edged butter to tub run; costly packaged teas to common Oolong; Rolls-Royces to Fords; fifteen-cent cigars to "two fers;" champagne to brook water.

Nevertheless, we can live on our second choices, if our incomes don't warrant the more desirable. Not only can we live on them but, by judicious management, many of us can save enough money to insure a first step upward into the class we envy.

Heaven forbid that I should say one word in criticism of the charity which seeks to offer help to those whose misfortunes have put them in need of it. But to neglect innocent and deserving victims of evil fate is hardly worse than to pamper and pet self-made paupers who expect society to give them a living, whether they're able to earn it for themselves or not.

The widow left stranded by the death of her husband; the orphan left homeless by the loss of his parents; the family left hungry by a disabling accident to the wage-earner;—to help such as these is not so much charity as a social duty and opportunity. But to be inducted of the money one's own industry and thrift have accumulated to maintain loafers who have been too lazy to work and too selfish to save, savors more of blackmail than of charity.

If you find a usually hard-working man starving because his broken arm forbids his earning bread money at his trade, you'll naturally share your own last loaf with him. But, when a chronic idler and spendthrift wants a "hand-out" and won't even saw wood to pay for it, that's another proposition.

Such fellows are always "on their uppers," and always complaining about "hard times."

No government can by any possibility bring them prosperity.

THE FARMER.

TO PETITION HIGHWAY DEPT. TO SPEED UP CONSTRUCTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 8—Unending delay in getting the Danielson-Brooklyn state highway into reasonable good condition for travel is the cause of a rising tide of impatience that was promising today to end in a petition to State Highway Commissioner Macdonald to have something done about the matter before winter sets in and forces stopping of the work until next spring. It was forecast today that the Danielson chamber of commerce will be asked to lend its aid when it meets next Tuesday evening to the end that something be done to relieve a trying situation, and it is known that Brooklyn people are practically a unit as to supporting aggressive action to bring about a relief from an exasperating situation.

Work on this highway was started soon after the first of the year. Parts of the traveled way have been torn up since last spring. For weeks past that section from Ledge hill into Brooklyn has been more or less of a mess. The progress has been snail-like. Attachments placed on the contractor's equipment have stopped work from time to time. Individuals have stormed about the situation and some of them have gone even beyond that. It has come to a grade. Meanwhile Ledge hill is torn up and dangerous to traffic. December is only three weeks away. Long stretches of the highway that is in those sections nearly completed are lined along the shoulders with piles of surplus dirt and other material, giving promises of real blockages of the highway when heavy snowstorms come. The entire situation borders on the intolerable and a rising tide of indignation is the result. It is contended that there must be some way in which the state highways commissioner can improve the situation through immediate action and get this trunk line in passable condition over all the distance between Danielson and Brooklyn before the real freezing period sets in. The contention is that asking this is no less than asking for justice and some real consideration.

A recent issue of a Boston paper carried a feature story relative to Jack Moody, a graduate of Killingly high school, now a junior at Tufts college. The story said: "There is one Tufts student who is earning his way through Tufts college solely on his merits as a big candy and smokes man. He is Jack Moody, who, since enrolling at the institution, has been paying his tuition, board and other fees with profits he counts up daily from the sale of candy, ice cream and tobacco. As a salesman he is regarded as a knockout, the students of the college already having been taught to patronize the 'one and only Jack Moody' or his staff of assistants, made up of freshmen, who aid him every day in dispensing the sweets he has discovered many of the students at the institution have a special liking for. Not only does he cater to the male students at the college, but also the co-ed dormitory occupants patronize Moody's baskets, of which there are a dozen in number. Jack makes all his sales after class hours, of course. At every football game and inter-class meet it is he and his crew of salesmen who are in great demand. Included in his wares are peanuts, cigars and cigarettes you recognise, blindfolded or not. Moody is majoring in the department of economics with the hope of entering bigger business when he graduates. His extra curricula activities includes cross-country running."

OBITUARY

Mrs. Nathaniel G. Williams

Mrs. Susie Elizabeth Morse Williams, 74, widow of Nathaniel G. Williams of Brooklyn, died about noon today at the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam, where she was taken late Wednesday. In her average good health until last Saturday, Mrs. Williams became ill at that time, though her condition was not regarded as at all critical. Mrs. Williams has been making her home with Mrs. A. E. Withington of Spring street. Announcement of her unexpected death this afternoon came as a great surprise to her many friends here and in Brooklyn, where she lived for many years.

Mrs. Williams was a native of Woodstock, a daughter of Nathan and Sarah Fowler Morse. Her education was obtained in the schools of her native town, and, following graduation from Woodstock academy she became a teacher and was in schools in Southbridge and in Brooklyn until her marriage to Mr. Williams in 1885. Mrs. Williams was a woman of charming personality, gracious and kindly.

She leaves no relatives nearer than cousins. William Morse and Mrs. Emma Roberts, brother and sister of former Secretary and Congressman John Davis of Massachusetts, and now residents in Santa Barbara, Cal. Mrs. Roberts left here only a week ago for Boston after visiting with Mrs. Williams.

Mrs. Williams' body was brought here this afternoon by Undertaker A. F. Wood.

The body of Dwight Adelbert Davis, 79, a native of Killingly, was brought here today from Smithfield, R. I., where he died last night, by Undertaker A. F. Wood and is now at the latter's funeral home. Mr. Davis, who was engaged for years as a farmer, had been making his home at Smithfield with his daughter, Mrs. Emma Winsor. In addition to Mrs. Winsor he leaves another daughter, Miss Eva Davis, of Smithfield, and a son, Clarence Davis, who is principal of the high school at South Manchester, this state.

Damase Boulais of Danielson is the builder of the new $45,000 Hall Memorial gymnasium building at Woodstock academy that is to be dedicated next Tuesday. Several addresses are included in the program of exercises.

It is believed that the estate of the late Mrs. Marinda C. Butler Robinson, still unsettled, contains a bequest for the fund to erect Windham Hall at Connecticut college, New London, Mrs. Robinson, who died in California a few months ago and who is buried in Westfield cemetery here, was an ardent worker in the interest of this fund.

Week end sale of guaranteed stock of dresses, sizes 16 to 48, at 20 per cent. discount. The Alice-Eleanor Shop.—Adv.

Misses Gertrude Stone, Mayme Dunn, Agnes Payne and Rose Laroche were visitors in Norwich today.

Conrad Bilodeau of Goodyear will set a ride along the Main street of that village as soon as the mill closes Saturday noon. It will be in a wheelbarrow propelled by Joseph Labonne, and will be in settlement of an election bet, Mr. Labonne having been under the impression that Governor Smith would be elected.

Gerald Boulaine left today for Bridgeport, where he will be a guest at a wedding.

Bob Macdonald's orchestra, American Legion Armistice dance, state armory Saturday evening.—Adv.

Representative-elect John M. Bessette, democrat, of Brooklyn, will be serving his third term in that office when the legislature opens in January. Mr. Bessette, who has been tax collector of Brooklyn for 26 years, won over Sidney W. Bard, republican, by a vote of 374 to 319.

Out of Eastford comes a substantial report that Eugene Jones of New London, who has been visiting with his parents at Eastford killed a wildcat weighing 35 pounds this week. From time to time since deer have become plentiful in northeastern Connecticut a wildcat has been killed, though they are not plentiful.

Charged with reckless driving, before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court today, Samuel Sposato of Danielson pleaded not guilty and was found not guilty. He was represented by Attorney Harry E. Back.

Due to upsets in normally republican towns there will be more democratic members of the legislature from Windham county the coming session than for a long term of years.

Only routine business was transacted yesterday at the regular monthly meeting of the selectmen.

In observance of Armistice day, banks in Danielson will be closed next Monday. There will be no general suspension of business here, however.

HEARING TO DECIDE REWARD IN "ICE BOX BANDIT" CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 8 — A Webster, Mass., paper today carried a story relative to Thomas L. Martin's claim for the reward of $1000 offered by the state of Connecticut for the information that led to the arrest of the Ice Box bandits, Albert Raymond and Roland G. Lalone, slayers of State Policeman Irving H. Nelson at Danielson barracks. The paper intimated that State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford, of this city, was showing partiality and would use his influence to secure the reward for Harold Lester of Willimantic. Mr. Bradford has in his office the claims of several persons who figured in giving information that led to the arrest and conviction of the two youthful bandits, other than that of Martin in Webster. To insure a fair deal to every claimant Judge Edward O. Yeomans, of Hartford, who sentenced the bandits for second degree murder to life imprisonment in the state's prison at Whethersfield, will hold a public hearing at Putnam, on next Thursday, Nov. 15. Every person who has filed claim will appear and testify in his or her behalf, and Judge Yeomans will render a decision. At present there is little hope that any one claimant will receive the full amount of the reward, as Lester, in Willimantic, Officer Raymond P. Gallagher, of the Springfield police, were instrumental in identifying the bandits, while Martin obtained much information that set the authorities on the Worcester trail where the bandits were found a few days after the murder of the policeman.

Frank Belisle, of Danielson, in the employ of the Quinebaug mill, is at the Day Kimball hospital in a critical condition as the result of being struck by a belt while at work. His head was badly cut and he suffered several lacerations about the face. After medical attention he was taken to the Putnam hospital where after 24 hours he failed to rally and hope for his recovery is doubtful. It was disclosed today that the man is suffering from a severe fracture at the base of the skull.

The town of Thompson has cleaned up the final liquor cases, that grew out of the numerous raids by state police all over the eastern part of the state a few weeks ago, by a session of town court in North Grosvernd ale, Wednesday evening, Judge Percy P. Tourtellotte presided. Mrs. Aurore St. Germaine, charged with the manufacture and sale of liquor, plead guilty to the counts and received a fine of $100 and costs of the court. Mrs. Antoinette Kaminski, also of North Grosvernd ale, charged with owning and keeping with intent to sell and sale, was found guilty of the charge and received a fine of $100 and costs. Attorney Cohen of Webster, representing both clients, entered an appeal to superior court for the next criminal session.

Peter Condos and his wife, Sophie, were also scooped in by the law on liquor charges, but were allowed to go upon payment of costs of court.

Leon T. Wilson, Jr., is now employed as a chemist at the U. S. Rubber company in Providence.

The one time famous "Hammond Estate" on Oak Hill was offered for sale at public auction today to settle the estate of the late George A. Hammond, who before his death was Connecticut's leading silk manufacturer. The Hammond home on Oak Hill, overlooking the city, was at one time the most beautiful residence in the city, but since the death of its owner three years ago, the structure was given little care, its contents of beautiful and costly antique furniture was quickly taken by lovers of ancient furniture and many of the articles going at high prices. The Hammond mansion was placed for bid. Silence prevailed among the spectators and no offers were made for the purchase.

John M. Hogan and Lawrence Phaneuf, both of this city, left today for New York city, where they will seek employment. Both are well known in this city. Hogan is a graduate of Putnam high school and St. Joseph's college in Philadelphia.

The honor roll at Putnam high school for the first quarter has been announced by Principal E. L. Robinson and is as follows: First honor roll, all students having an average of 90 per cent or higher in all subjects: Seniors, none; Juniors, none; sophomores, Beatrice Green; freshmen, none; post graduate Edith Goyette. Second honor roll, students having an average of 80 per cent or higher in all subjects: Seniors, Philip Arnold, John Ash, Elizabeth Bennett, Miriam Daith, Ruth Hawks, Aline Tourville; juniors, Ellie Pinkham, Helen Varbedian; sophomores, U. Labossiere, William Moss; freshman, A. Aframe, Ruth Amidon, Leonard Guertin, Murial Johnson, and Russell Ryan.

The annual meeting of the Wind-ham County Farmer's association will be held on next Wednesday, Nov. 14, at Odd Fellows hall, the programme to commence at 10.30 a. m. and will continue throughout the day. Reports of the officers will be given at the opening of the meeting. A report of the county agent, Raymond E. Wing, will be given, followed by a report of County Club Agent Marion A. Mills. At noon a basket lunch will be served. The afternoon programme will open with the presentation of certificates to the 4-H club leaders by Miss Elsie A. Trabue, assistant state leader. A talk will also be given to the 4-H club leaders by a leading state official and by the leaders. At 2 o'clock Miss Edith L. Mason will give a home demonstration. A number of state extension service workers have been engaged to speak at the meeting and will discuss interesting subjects.

County Secretary L. Edwin Hill, of the Windham County Y. M. C. A., has announced that the association is having much difficulty in securing the necessary number of cars to transport the boys to Providence, on Nov. 17, who desire to see the Brown-New Hampshire state football game in the Brown stadium. Tickets may be had by applying to Mr. Hill, but the youngsters must show the county secretary their means of transportation, otherwise the tickets will not be issued. Mr. Hill urges parents who are to take their boys to the game, to inform him of any available space as several youths are desirous of seeing the college grid encounter, but will be disappointed because of the lack of transportation.

Edward V. Dolan, of Philadelphia, who has been for the past six weeks relieving Mrs. Frazer at the local Western Union office was relieved today by another operator and has left for his home in Philadelphia where he will pass a short vacation. Mr. Dolan expects to return to Putnam to manage the Putnam office.

JEWETT CITY

DEPRAVITY AND CRUELTY IN THIS FAMILY MIX-UP

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 9—In the Griswold town court this morning John Kruel of Woonsocket, R. I., was bound over to the next term of superior court, charged with abandoning children. In default of $2,000 bonds he was taken to the county jail in Norwich. Local police and State Humane Agent F. H. Wyant of Norwich, have been working on the case for more than a month.

This morning, leaving here at four o'clock, Officer Henry Veglard went to Woonsocket and got his man. The case was presented by Prosecuting Attorney Richard J. Dudkowski, before Judge John T. Barry.

October 6, Kruel came here from Woonsocket, with his three small children, aged 2, 5 and 7 and left them in a vacant lot off Brown avenue, with a dress suit-case of clothing. At the time a great crowd gathered, and Officer Veglard and Wyant were notified, and temporarily secured for the children care and keeping with Mrs. Rys, who lives near by. The mother of the children is living here now with her husband on High street. During the time the children were born, Kruel was a boarder at the home of the mother. The husband of the mother of the three, was then doing time in the Cranston jail. Kruel tried several times after the husband left jail to rid himself of his children, which have now been lodged in the county home at Norwich by Officer Wyant.

Finn's tonight, four acts, Keith vaudeville. Lang's orchestra. Dolores Del Rio in No Other Woman.—Adv.

A man, a native of Jewett City, came to town on a visit a short time ago, and spent several days. When a boy and young man he was employed in the W. A. Slater mills, where his father, more than 50 years ago, was overseer of spinning. As cotton spinning was operated in those days, he was rated as an expert. The younger man was born to the textile business, and has not only been widely associated with cotton manufacturing as Boss spinner, but in Fall River, New Bedford, Manchester, N. H., and other places he was associated in quite recent years, with the King Philip, Wamsutta and Amoskeag mills as superintendent.

During the recent visit to his home town, from which he had been long absent, he "put up" at the local hotel. This man was born under the very shadow of the Slater Mills, now the Ninigret division of the Fisk Tire Co. All his younger life, when awakened in the night, soon he would hear the soft mellow note of the great mill bell, upon which with the long tolling rope, the watchman used to slowly strike the passing hours. This man is no different from the many older residents of the town today.

They too, were accustomed to listen when awakening, for the welcome note, which, when heard in the dark small hours, brought a feeling of content and comfort difficult to define.

Beside the slow, steady announcing of the hour, it whispered, "Some one is awake, and all is well."

But the custom has been discontinued. The returning visitor listened in vain for that old familiar sound which had brought to him in boyhood such a feeling of soothing content. Today, the watchman goes as was his custom then, keeping guard from room to room of the great mill. As he passes through the tower, the tolling rope is hanging from the belfry, but he doesn't touch it—merely winds his watchman's clock.

Paul Geist, who lives in Lisbon on the state road, only a short distance below the town, has a barn situated a few feet from the highway. Wednesday, along toward evening, a man, a stranger rushed into Mr. Geist's kitchen door, shouting to him to come out at once if he wanted to save his barn from burning. Both men fought the blaze for some time in the dry leaves and grass, preventing its kindling upon the barn, only by the most strenuous effort. Mr. Geist believes that the flames originated from a cigarette butt, or match, thrown from a passing automobile.

When the Woman's Mission circle of the Baptist church met in the church parlor Tuesday afternoon for its November program meeting, Mrs. E. E. Scates conducted the devotional service, using "Our Relation to God as Co-Laborers," as the theme of a short talk. She read a passage of Scripture and offered prayer. Mrs. A. M. Brown presided at the business meeting. A satisfactory balance in White Cross funds showed ample provision for work in that department. Overland supplies must be ready before Christmas and the work will be distributed among members to be done at home. Special envelopes will be provided for the Christmas missionary offering. The barrel for the Mather school at Beaufort, S. C., will be packed next week, with Mrs. Nathan Babcock in charge. It was voted that the president send to Washington the petition for the passage by the senate and house of the multilateral treaty for the Prevention of War, as being the mind of the sixteen women present. Mrs. R. A. Wilbur had charge of the program which took up "The Penetration of Africa." All those present took part in reading extracts from the study book "The New Africa," under the heads of government Colonial Policies, Commerce, The Passing of the Slave Trade, Exports and Imports, Railways and The Effects of Trade on Modern Life. A general discussion followed. Tea was served by Miss Foster, assisted by Mrs. Wilbur.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

ELECTION CELEBRATORS BLAMED FOR FALSE ALARMS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 8—Chief George E. Egger is determined that false fire alarms must cease. The police are investigating the turning in, at early hours Wednesday morning, of two false alarms. The Pawcatuck police are investigating the theft of valuable radio tools from a parked automobile as part of the aftermath of Westerly's election excitement. The fire alarms were turned in from the street and Park avenue and apparently were the work of celebrators. The first alarm sounded at 1:30, calling the entire department to Spruce street and Park avenue. The second alarm sounded shortly before 3 o'clock, from box 21, Granite street and Newton avenue. Suspecting it was another hoax, Chief George E. Egger sent only one truck. His suspicions were confirmed. Police Chief Brown last night said that he had clues which he anticipated would lead to the arrest of the boys who turned in the alarms. On both instances they were seen opening the alarm boxes. They fled, however, before witnesses could stop them. Luther Dock, radio engineer, had his car parked near his shop on West Broad street while he listened to election returns. When he went to get it early yesterday morning he discovered that a case of radio tools and instruments had been taken. He placed his loss at $160.

As delegates from Westerly, Mrs. David A. Lowry, Mrs. Benjamin A. Peabody, Mrs. Howard D. McFarland, Mrs. Fred Lueck and Mrs. G. Edgar Tobin of Christ Episcopal church were in Providence Thursday to attend the meeting of the Rhode Island branch of the Women's auxiliary to the national council, held in St. John's Pro-Cathedral.

The speakers at the meeting were Rt. Rev. Thomas Casady, bishop of Oklahoma, and Rt. Rev. William M. M. Thomas, bishop of southern Brazil. The morning session was followed by a basket luncheon. An afternoon meeting was held also.

DIVER WORKS IN RIVER THRILLING SPECTATORS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 8—That the almost impossible had been accomplished in making fire burn under water was the opinion of many passing pedestrians on the south side of the Broad street Pawcatuck river bridge Wednesday and Thursday. The flash of a submarine torch in the hands of a diver at work in the Pawcatuck river on what was left of the bottom of a steel caisson was what caused the wonder. The diver was entirely out of sight with only the bubbles of escaping air to attract attention. An elderly man watching these bubbles when the diver thrust his head above water, jumped a foot.

Mr. Novogroski awarded the contract to the Electric Arc Cutting & Welding company of Newark, N. J., a branch of the Merritt-Chapman-Scott company of New York and New London, to finish the work. Beneath the ray of a strong electric light the men worked on the job until midnight Wednesday night and were again at work Thursday morning.

L. F. Hagglind is in charge of the work and Harry Tepelman is the diver. The outfit used in this underwater cutting work is very expensive and was shipped here from Newark.

FUNERALS

Mrs. Otis P. Chapman, Jr.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mabel Vose Chapman, wife of the late Otis P. Chapman, Jr., were held Thursday at 2 o'clock at 46 Granite street. Rev. S. M. Cathcart officiated.

Burial was at River Bend cemetery. The bearers were Maurice Laing, Robert Brundette, Howard E. Thorp, William A. Wilcox, Orlando Smith and William Howard. For over 20 years, Mrs. Chapman had managed Hillcrest Dahlia gardens on Granite street and in national flower shows had won many prizes with her dahlia blooms. She had a wide circle of friends and the funeral services were largely attended.

Thomas Owens

The funeral of Thomas Owens, 67, whose death occurred Saturday at the hospital in South Weymouth, Mass., was held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at his late home, 6 Cottage Court. Rev. A. L. Schoning, pastor of Broad street Christian church, was the officiating clergyman. Burial was at River Bend cemetery, where the committal service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Schoning. The bearers were David Lowry, Joseph J. Crooper, Thomas R. Platt and William C. Mudge, all members of Manchester Unity, I. O. O. F.

Mrs. George Lytle, of Twin Mountain camps, New Hampshire, after a visit with Misses Mary L. and Ruth C. Durdick Wednesday and Thursday, returned Thursday to New London, before proceeding to her home.

George Browning was in Boston Wednesday.

Samuel R. Gould and Ray P. Littlefield of Wakefield, were in Westerly Wednesday evening.

Church Family night will be observed by the members of Grace Methodist church this (Friday) evening.

Judge William A. Wilcox was host Wednesday evening, with a chestnutfed, Narragansett bronze turkey victory dinner, at his home in Pawcatuck, to a few Westerly and Pawcatuck political leaders and their wives.

The tug Westerly, Capt. Harry Baker, Thursday morning towed the extra large box barge, "S. R. Thorne" of the Keeler line, from the docks of Frank N. Wilcox down the Pawcatuck river to New London. The barge had discharged 579 tons of anthracite coal.

Thursday evening at the Episcopal church rectory, Elm street, The Girls' Friendly society held its meeting in the form of a miscellaneous shower for one of its members, Miss Doris Hartridge of Clark street. Her wedding will be a church event Saturday, Nov. 24th at 2 p. m.

WHAT IS A ONE-CENT SALE?

IT is a sale where you buy an item at the regular price, then another item of the same kind for one cent. As an illustration: The standard price of Klenzo Dental Creme is 50c, you buy a tube at this price and by paying 1 cent more, or 51 cents, you get two tubes, and save 49 cents. Every article in this sale is a high class standard piece of merchandise, just the same as is sold every day at regular price. No limit—buy all you want, but on Thursday, Friday and Saturday only!

A PROFIT SHARING METHOD OF ADVERTISING

THIS sale was developed by the United Drug Co. as an advertising plan. Rather than spend large sums of money in other ways to convince you of the merit of these goods, they are spending it on this sale in permitting us to sell you a full size package of high-standard merchandise for one cent. It costs money to get new customers, but the sacrifice in profit is justified, as we know the goods will please you.

STOCK SALES CROSSED 5,000,000 SHARES IN MARKET FOR SECOND TIME

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—The stock market tore dizzily forward in response to a flood of extra dividends today, and turned a somersault when struck by a strategically timed bear raid in the final hour of trading. Total sales crossed the 5,000,000 share mark for the second time in history, and the ticker was so congested with the terrific pace of trading that it did not record the final transaction until an hour and a quarter after the closing gong. The longest delay on record.

Commission houses had ben advising caution for some time, on the ground that the market was in need of a correctional reaction. The bear party took advantage of the resulting nervousness by launching its attack when the ticker was nearly an hour late, with the expected result that traders turned panicky when the information filtered into brokerage houses stocks were selling 3 to 4 points below ticker quotations.

There was a rush to sell out before the close, with the result that final quotations were sparly irregular, both gains and losses running to about 10 points in some cases.

The final result, however, was a slight increase in the Associated Press average price of 20 industrials, to a new high record at 229.78, 15 cents higher than the high mark recorded yesterday.

An unsettling factor was wide anticipation of the increase of nearly $72,000,000 in Federal Reserve brokerage loans, carrying the total to $4,978,968,000, the highest mark in history, and roughly $7,500,000,000 greater than a year ago. Call money was in adequate supply at 6 per cent during most of the session, but rose to 6 1-2 per cent in the afternoon.

The long expected 2 1-2-for-1 stock split up as recommended to stockholders by General Motors' directors after the close of the session. They also declared a $2.50 cash dividend, and extra disbursements were announced by Packard Motor, Vacuum Oil, Imperial Oil of Canada, American Machine and Foundry, International Cigar Machinery, and several other companies.

The late reaction sent Montgomery Ward down more than 20 points from its high record price of 372 recorded earlier. It then rallied, however, closed with a net gain of 7. Wright Aero soared about 12 points, crossing the 200-mark for the first time in months, was sent tumbling about 15 points, then rallied for a net gain of about 6 points.

Oils, utilities, and coppers, favorite playthings of the infant "Hoover Market" encountered heavy profit taking, although nearly a dozen new high prices were achieved by the coppers and oils, before the setback. Greene Cananea shot up about 7 points, then lost about 5. Kennecott dropped 5 points, Cerro de Pasco mounted 3 points to a new top, then lost most of its gain.

In the oils, Standard of New Jersey crossed its previous high, and closed about a point up. Texas Coal and Oil climbed to a new top, but closed lower. Marland suffered a net loss of about 2 points, after extending its gain, while Sinclair lost 3 points and Pan-American and Amerada about a point.

General Motors mounted to within a fraction of its previous high, but was carried down for a net loss of about a point, despite the expected stock split. Chrysler lost about a 3-point gain, and Graham Paige eased. Brockway Motor, however, jumped more than 2 points to a new peak price.

In the utilities, Columbia Gas and Electric fell more than 3 points.

Coty was a strong point, retaining most of a gain of about 12 points. American Express, General Electric, Liquid Carbonic, Otis Elevator, Pittsburg preferred and Vanadium gained 3 to 10 points. Westinghouse jumped 8 points to a new high, but lost most of its gain. A number of independent steels made good progress, Colorado Fuel and Iron selling up about 7 points at one time, while Midland Steel preferred made an extreme gain of about 6 points and retained most of it. U. S. Steel sagged more than a point.

Curtiss Aero fell about 10 points, and Warner Brothers issues and Woolworth reacted around 6 points. American International, Atchison, A. M. Byers, International Nickel, Timken Roller Bearing, and Simmons, were among shares falling from 3 to 5 points.

Rails generally were firm. Louisville and Nashville, Delaware and Hudson, and Chicago Northwestern advancing 2 to 3 points.

Gains of $2.00 to $3 in cotton on publication of the unexpectedly low government crop estimate was a feature of the commodity markets. Grain rallied somewhat after easing on lower Liverpool cables.

Foreign exchanges were quiet but slightly firmer, yen advancing 5 points to 46.45 cents.

RESOLUTION

At a special meeting of the Board of Management of The Norwich Building and Loan Association, Inc., held on November 2nd, 1928, the following minute and vote were unanimously adopted:

The members of The Norwich Building and Loan Association, Inc., are grieved and saddened by the death of Mr. John M. Lee, Vice-President of this Association.

Mr. Lee was elected a Director of the Association on January 16th, 1922, and as Vice-President on May 18th, 1925. He was deeply interested in the welfare of the Association and was a man of broad and sound judgment, whose advice was greatly sought and carried weight. He was unassuming in his manner; faithful, loyal and punctual in his duties and firm in his convictions but presenting his views in such a way as not to antagonize those with whom he might differ. He could be depended upon to help in any worthy cause which was for the business, civic or moral welfare of the community. Sociable, friendly, likable, he was respected and held in high esteem by his associates in many activities and he will be much missed by them.

In their deep bereavement, we extend to the family of Mr. Lee our heartfelt sympathy.

Voted, that a copy of this minute be sent to the family of Mr. Lee, that it be entered upon a page of the records of the Association and published in the daily papers, and that the Association be represented by a delegation at the funeral service.

Attest:
ERNEST O. RODIER,
President.
HENRY D. JOHNSON,
Secretary.

Palace Theatre

Amazing contrasts incorporated in a logical story that grips, with outstanding performances by a great aggregation of players, makes Paramount's "Forgotten Faces," which opened at the Palace theatre last night, an exceptional motion picture.

The production is billed as an all-star special, and it is. Clive Brooks, Mary Brian, Baclanova, William Powell, Fred Kohler and Jack Luden head the imposing list of talent in the cast. The story interest, unusual sets, vivid contrasts and dramatic value of the production entitle it to the rating of a special in the most complimentary sense of that term.

Imagine a picture that starts out with a night hold-up of a fashionable gambling house perpetrated by two crooks in evening clothes, carries on to the grim interior of a penitentiary, shows an attempted prison break, gives intimate glimpses of social life in a homes of wealth and culture and then depicts the terrified reactions of a woman being slowly driven mad by fear.

A splendid vaudeville program in addition to the feature was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience at yesterday's opening performance. It was headed by Billy Barnes & Co. in a musical comedy entitled Dollars and Scents. The Four Eastons, a clever acrobatic act, billed as Fun in a Railroad Station, Kelsay and Francis were a riot of laughs in "Strollin' Home," Tom and Lee Donley, a very entertaining team, in songs and dances, and Ted Gordon & Co. in a clever musical act.

Telephone Directory

It was announced at the offices of the telephone company Thursday that November 10 is the final date on which changes in present telephone directory listings and new listings can be received for publication in the forthcoming winter issue which will be effective early in January.

Subscribers who contemplate any addition to the service they now have and who wish an additional listing in connection with their new service, or persons who contemplate having telephones installed at their homes or places of business are advised to make the necessary arrangements before Saturday of this week, so that their new listings may appear in the winter issue of the directory. To act in time is, of course, of a decided advantage to the subscriber and likewise has some service advantage to the telephone company. To have a telephone installed, or even the order placed after November 10 means that the person taking service at that time will have no directory listing until the next summer issue, a period of six months.

Naturally the telephone people desire to have their directory as complete as possible and ask the cooperation of the public in this matter.

NICOLO LONGO, 7, NEW LONDON, SHOOTS SISTER, 5, IN PLAY WITH REVOLVER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 8—While playing with a revolver at their home, 20 Shaw street, this morning, Bondazio Longo, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sebastino Longo, was fatally injured. Her brother, in brandishing the weapon, took aim at his sister, sending a bullet through the child's head, the wound resulting in the girl's death an hour later at Home Memorial hospital. The police made an investigation, as did Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman, who gave a verdict of accidental shooting and no action will be taken against the brother, Nicolo, aged 7.

Shortly after the father of the children left for his work for the city as a laborer, Mrs. Longo went to a nearby store to make purchases. With Bondazio and Nicolo was their other brother and the three went to a dresser drawer where it was known that their father kept a loaded revolver. Nicolo took the weapon, .38-calibre, and after flourishing it for a time, took aim at his sister and pulled the trigger. The bullet entered the child's forehead above the left temple and she dropped. Tony DiLaura, a neighbor, heard the explosion and rushing to the Longo house found the unconscious child lying in a pool of blood on the floor. Longo took the child and rushing her to his automobile, speeded with her to the hospital, where she expired within an hour.

OAKDALE DRIVER STOPPED AFTER A TOM MIX CHASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 8—George R. Holmes, of Oakdale, was arrested this afternoon on charges of driving while under the influence of liquor, reckless driving and failing to stop when given a signal to do so. He is locked up at police headquarters tonight with a ugly scalp wound, inflicted with a blackjack and the Ford police car is in a garage, partially wrecked. Holmes will be in the police court tomorrow on three counts. About 4 o'clock the police received information that a man was on Broad street extension, driving while drunk. Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin went to Broad street where he came upon Holmes in the auto, which is registered in the name of Mrs. Bessie L. Holmes, also of Oakdale. Martin signaled Holmes to stop, but the latter refused to do so. After a chase of several blocks, Martin pulled his revolver and started shooting at the tires of the fleeing car. ## SEVEN PLACES RAIDED— LIQUOR IS FOUND AT EACH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 8—The police resumed their efforts to break up many of the so-called speak-easies this afternoon and as a result seven arrests were made. As usual the evidence was obtained by two United States Coast Guard sailors for it is not difficult for a blue jacket to purchase liquor in New London, even if he is not known to the dispenser. The stool pigeons had been at work obtaining evidence nearly a week and with this in the hands of the authorities, Judge S. Victor Prince, acting on information supplied him by Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin, issued search warrants for all of the accused men and women. Besides having actual sales on all of those arrested, liquor was obtained in each instance when the warrants were served. The raiding force consisted of Detective Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith, Sergeants Patrick Murphy and Samuel Hick, Motorcycle Officers Augustus Ray and Clarence Martin and Patrolmen Dennis Murphy, George McCaskey, Albert Ivarson, James McKenna, William Corcoran, Carlos Stone, Dennis and Thomas Cavanaugh. All were held in bail of $1,000 and will be in court tomorrow. Mrs. O'Connor has been arrested three times within a year, as has also Joseph Poretta, or his wife. ## ANNOUNCEMENTS

BROADWAY THEATRE

"You know, I never thought I'd be converted," says Al Jolson, now at the Broadway theatre in Warner Bros. "The Singing Fool."

"Even in my wildest flights of fancy, I was never able to visualize myself as a motion picture star. I could hardly see myself even as an extra. In fact, I was thouroughly convinced that if there was one place in the world where I did not belong, it was in front of the business end of a camera.

"A few years ago D. W. Griffith assured me that I would be a success on the screen. His arguments were so sound and so plausible that it would have been unkind to doubt them. And so, as a preliminary step, I donned my makeup one fine morning and underwent what is known as a camera tests.

"And the next day I saw the result on the screen. I was shocked and elated beyond expression—so much so that I promptly went away from that place and took the first boat for Europe. I felt that there was not enough room in this country for both me and my shadow.

"Then, a year or so ago, the Warner Bros. surrounded me.

"Well, I surrendered, and somehow I didn't think I was so awful as I had before. In fact, I thought I was pretty good. But little did I realize how much I would have to unlearn before the unfeeling camera would agree with me. I found myself in entirely new surroundings, and there was nothing to do but start at the foot of the class.

"We made 'The Jazz Singer' and the verdict o the public was unmistakable. And now 'The Singing Fool!' Really, folks—you ain't seen nothin' yet!"

GASOLINE PRICE LEVEL IN N. Y. AND NEW ENGLAND

Taking into consideration the differences in the various state taxes, the retail price of gasoline in the New England states and New York state has remained the same for the past several months, according to a monthly survey of gasoline prices which has been conducted by the Connecticut chamber of commerce for over a year. This is a direct contrast to conditions last year, when the prices fluctuated throughout New England, the price in Connecticut being rather higher than that in surrounding states.

During August, September and October of this year, the price of gasoline in New England has been 20 cents a gallon plus the state tax in those states which levy such a tax. In New Hampshire and Maine, because of the 4-cent tax gasoline has been 24 cents a gallon; in Vermont, because of the 3-cent tax, 23 cents; in Connecticut and Rhode Island, which have a 2-cent tax, the price has averaged 22 cents. In Massachusetts and New York, which have no tax, the price has been 20 cents a gallon. A year ago the price of gasoline in Connecticut, including the tax, went as high as 27 cents a gallon, 4 cents higher than the highest price this year.

LAND UNIT-PRICE IS SHOWN FOR STREETS IN CENTRAL PART OF CITY

The first announcement of results in the revaluation of Norwich taxable property by the Manufacturers Appraisal Co. is given with the publication of the accompanying map in The Bulletin.

The map printed herewith shows the outlines of the various streets in the center of the city and vicinity. This map covers only one section of the town, there being four more maps and these are to be printed in sequence. The street or section of the town in which the reader is interested may not be shown above, but a map covering his section will appear later. Those interested are advised to save the maps as they appear, until all have been printed, and then make comparisons of the street unit values.

Accompanying the map is the following explanatory statement:

The figures appearing on the map are the unit values of the streets and blocks where they are shown and are the result of the opinions of the members of the Citizens Advisory committee. This committee was appointed by the selectmen, who requested the various organizations of the town to select some member to serve on an advisory committee to assist the Manufacturers' Appraisal company in establishing equitable unit values on all the streets and roads in the town. The unit values shown herewith are the basis of the computations of land values, an important part of the revaluation for assessment purpose of the real estate of the town.

The principal object of any revaluation for assessment purposes is to establish equality and it was with this in mind, that your committee spent many hours, without recompense other than the desire to aid the town. The task was not an easy one and some inequalities may still exist but they are the result of oversight and not intent. Considering the size and importance of the task, the results obtained are worthy of commendation.

The figures which you see on the various streets are the values to be applied to a piece of land one foot in width along the street and extending at right angles to that street to a depth of 100 feet. Any variation from the depth of the unit which is 100 feet, is taken care of by the Somer's depth curve or table. This table is the result of many years' study of the effect which the depth of a lot has on its value. The analysis of this study showed that the front part of a lot has the most value and that the value of the rear portions of a lot drop very rapidly as the distance from the street increases. Further study showed that the front 50 feet of a lot had about 72.5 per cent. of the value of a 100 feet lot and the lot of 150 feet in depth had only 135 per cent. of the value of a 100 feet lot, while a lot 200 feet in depth had only 122 per cent. of the value of a 100 feet lot. Following are some of the percentages used for the various depths:

| Depth | Depth Factor |
| 50 feet | 72.5 per cent. |
| 100 " | 100.0 " " |
| 125 " | 108.7 " " |
| 150 " | 115.0 " " |
| 175 " | 119.2 " " |
| 200 " | 122.0 " " |

It can readily be seen that with the unit value of a street the frontage and depth of a lot known, it is an easy matter to figure the value of the lot. The figures shown below are some sample computations, using a street with a $10 unit value:

Dimensions 50 ft. front x 50 ft. depth, unit value $10, depth factor 72.5 per cent., front foot value $7.25 valuation $362.50.

Dimensions 50 ft. front x 100 ft. depth, unit value $10, depth factor 100.0 per cent., front foot value $10, valuation $500.

Dimensions 50 ft. front x 150 ft. depth, unit value $10 depth factor 115.0 per cent., front foot value $11.50, valuation $575.

Dimensions 50 ft front x 200 ft. depth, unit value $10 depth factor 122.0 per cent., front foot value $12.50, valuation $610.

Because a street has a $26 unit value for example, it does not necessarily follow that a lot 50 feet x 100 feet will have a value of $1250 for deductions will be made if the nature of the land warrant it.

It must be understood that each lot will be computed as if it were an ideal lot, level and without detracting topographical defects such as standing water, sharp rises or declinations, or other factors which detract from the value, and then depreciated. It is roughly estimated that at least 80 per cent. of the land in the town will be depreciated in varying degrees because of the reasons mentioned above.

The reader may say, "There isn't a lot in my block worth as much as the value it will show by computation, using the unit value and the known dimensions." It must be remembered, however, that the values will be decreased, because of topographical conditions, where such exists.

Those interested are urged to save the maps, as they are printed until the series is completed and then make comparisons. Even though the values seem high, the final test is whether the task of obtaining equality has been accomplished. If it is, the efforts of your committee have been successful, and the revaluation will have accomplished what it was meant to do, equalize assessments.

The assessors and the Manufacturers' Appraisal company invite interested parties to meet with them at any time within the coming two weeks, and discuss with them the unit values as shown on the maps.

The following changes have been made in the unit values, shown on the maps:

Oak street—Hobart avenue to Cliff street, reduced from $23 to $22.

Cliff street—Elm street to Hamlin street now $30 instead of $40 and $30, Hamlin street to Roath street, now $22 instead of $20.

Hill street—Now $24 instead of $30.

Elm street—Now $24 instead of $30.

Spalding street—Now $24 instead of $26.

In State Park System

Sunset Rock park which lies between the city of New Britain and the town of Plainville in Hartford county, wholly in Hartford county, has been added to the state park system. The name comes from the beautiful sunsets seen from its summit over the broad valley and the distant hills to the west.

The park is a joint gift of the Sunset Rock association of New Britain and Plainville and the Landers, Frary & Clark company of New Britain, and lies on the west slope of Bradley mountain overlooking the Quinnipiac valley, is about one-half mile long and contains 13 1-2 acres. In 1908 Sunset Rock came very near losing the forest setting which goes far to increase its charms. A lumberman bought the timber rights and was preparing to cut it off. To save the beauty of the place an association of New Britain and Plainville people bought the land and have preserved it for the past 20 years. They built a stone cabin upon it which will be repaired and made useful to park visitors by the state park commission.

At the city court session Thursday morning Carl Moton, 26, colored, was fined $25 and cost on a charge of taking an automobile without permission of the owner. Pendleton who claimed he took a second hand machine from Mr. Pendleton's garage on Shetucket street and failed to return it as he agreed to do.

On September 29th Moton told Mr. Pendleton that he desired to purchase the machine and asked if he could take it out for a trial for a few hours. He said his sister would sign the necessary papers. He did not return the machine until Wednesday. It was learned that Moton's sister had not agreed to sign any papers for the purchase of the machine.

MASS. VOTE FAVORS REPEAL OF THE 18TH AMENDMENT

Voters in 33 of the State Senatorial Districts Voted For Repeal of the Prohibition Amendment, While Three Districts Returned a Majority Against Repeal—Vote Instructed Senators From Districts to Request Congress to Take Action for Repeal of the Amendment.

BOSTON, Nov. 9—(AP)—Sentiment in favor of repeal of the prohibition amendment was expressed by majority of the voters in 33 of the state senatorial districts of Massachusetts in Tuesday's election, while three districts returned a majority against repeal. The matter came before the voters in the form of a "question of public policy" which appeared on the ballots in all but four of the 40 senatorial districts.

The question was in this form: "Shall the senator from this district be instructed to vote for a resolution requesting congress to take action for the repeal of the 18th amendment to the Constitution of the United States, known as the prohibition amendment?" It was excluded in the 2nd Essex, 2nd and 6th Middlesex and the Norfolk and Plymouth districts because the limit of questions of public policy permitted on the ballot had been reached in those districts before this question was proposed.

The three districts which returned a "no" majority were the Cape and Plymouth, made up chiefly of towns in Plymouth county, and on Cape Cod; the Franklin and Hampshire, largely rural in population; the Norfolk and Middlesex, rural and suburban.

In several of the 36 districts voting on the question there was a margin of only a few hundred votes between the "yes" and "no" totals. All the Boston districts were heavily in favor of the instruction to the senators.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE GERMAN REPUBLIC

BERLIN, Nov. 9—(AP)—The tenth anniversary of the German revolution and the proclamation of the German republic was observed by the Berlin newspapers merely according to the tenets of their respective parties, while the public paid little more than passing attention to the observance.

As was expected, the appeal by the association of ex-officers that citizens should hoist the monarchical colors, draped with black, at half mast as a token of mourning, was not taken seriously and was completely ignored by the present generation which appeared not to be interested in the historic event.

Dr. Gustav Stresemann, the foreign minister, commemorating the occasion in an article in the Leipziger Neueste Nachrichten, writes that the reconstruction of Germany justified the existence of the republic, which, however, he added, might long ago have become more inviolable if certain superrepublicans did not persist in showing their republican allegiance by lip service, instead of deeds."

Contradicting the criticism that Germany is politically isolated among the great powers, the foreign minister says: "Our relations with the United States, certainly the largest and mightiest nation in the world, were not better in the days of imperialism than today."

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND AT BOTTOM OF AIR SHAFT

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP)—The body of a woman about 25 years old was found late today at the bottom of an air shaft in a six-story office building by jumping from a window on the stair landing between the fifth and sixth floors, where her pocketbook and gloves were found.

In the pocketbook the police found a letter addressed to "Miss Jean Marks, Franklin Square Hotel," from her mother, who lives at the Mayfair Apartments in Hartford, Conn. There also was a card from an employment agency which indicated that the young woman was looking for work as a typist.

In the letter the young woman's mother said she was enclosing a check for $55, and that she hoped the daughter would soon recover from her ailment. There were a few dollars in the pocketbook.

ENTHRONEMENT OF NEW EMPEROR OF JAPAN TODAY

KYOTO, Japan, Nov. 9—(AP)—Twenty-six foreign nations will be represented at the enthronement of Hirohito, 124th emperor of Japan, here tomorrow. Of the 26 chief envoys, only ten will convey the congratulations of other monarchs, a dwindling company to the new occupant of the throne of a "lineage unbroken for ages eternal." The other sixteen come from republics.

Only eighteen nations sent envoys to Kyoto in 1915, when Hirohito's father, the late emperor Taisho, was enthroned. The eight additions represent the alterations in the political complexion of the world in the intervening thirteen years. Germany and Turkey, then enemy countries, again are friendly. New nations have arisen in Poland, Czechoslovakia and Finland. Japan has opened diplomatic relations with Brazil, Mexico and Rumania.

RICHMOND, Cal., Nov. 9—(AP)—A terrific explosion at the chemical plant of the Western Industries corporation here today killed two men, injured two others probably fatally and seriously hurt a dozen more. ### PEASANT GOVERNMENT PREVAILS IN RUMANIA

BUCHAREST Nov. 9.—(AP)—After 50 years of almost uninterrupted rule by powerful capitalistic and landed interests, greater Rumania, with its Agrarian population of 16,000,000, passed today into the hands of a peasant government led by Juliu Maniu.

"It is a triumph of constitutionalism over despotism," declared Maniu enthusiastically as he bounded down the palace steps after the regency had given him the mandate. "In the future our country will be governed by a parliament elected honestly by the people and not by a professional clique."

Huge crowds gathered outside the palace and the modest home of Maniu near the American legation and gave the new premier a tremendous ovation.

The designation by the regency of Maniu to form a cabinet after Nicholas Titilescu had failed caused profound gloom among the liberals, who throughout the day had been in blissful expectation of being summoned by the regency as the only party capable of solving the crisis which had endured for a week.

Scarcely any member of the new "peoples' ministry" has had experience in national office so that the rural governments accession to power presents a rare experiment in modern democracy and political science.

When the regency entrusted Maniu with the mandate, the Transylvanian lawyer acted with characteristic promptness. Drawing a typewritten list from his pocket he said "here is my cabinet. I am ready to assume the government immediately."

His first act undoubtedly will be to ask dissolution of parliament and new elections for he has repeatedly charged that body with not being representative.

TWO FARMERS CHARGED WITH SLAYING FARMHAND

TUSCOLA, Ill., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Awo Atwood, Ill., farmers were arrested today on a warrant charging them with the murder of a farm hand of one of them with the collection of insurance on the farm hand's life as the motive behind the alleged slaying.

Emil Carroll and his brother, William, are the men under arrest. Warrants charging them with murder were signed by Charles McAllister, a brother of Walter McAdster, 52, employed by Emil Carroll.

Walter McAlister was found dead on October 12 after a freight train had struck an automobile in which Emil Carroll and his employe were riding. Carroll said he leaped from the car as the train bore down upon it but that McAlister was unable to jump.

McAlister's body was exhumed after it was learned that insurance policies totalling more than $15,000 recently had been taken out on McAlister's life naming Emil Carroll or his wife as beneficiaries. Members of the train crew said McAlister's body was wrapped in a blanket and that an automobile inner tube was twisted about his feet. A coroner's physician said McAlister's skull had been crushed with a baseball bat found near the scene of the wreck, and a coroner's jury recommended that the grand jury make an investigation.

SOLDIER'S AUDACIOUS PHONE MESSAGE TO HIS GENERAL

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 9.—(AP)—A soldier's confidence in his commanding general's ability to cook eggs properly was causing military and Tacoma police to unite tonight in a search for the private who was still A. W. O. L. at last report.

As explained by the police the soldier, a trifle tipsy, entered the Tacoma restaurant very early this morning and ordered ham and eggs. He disliked the way the chef prepared the dish and after some argument declared that he would "call" up the general and he'll tell you how to cook ham and eggs the way I want them."

Going to the telephone the soldier put in a call for Brigadier General Michael R. Lenihan, commander at Fort Lewis, ten miles from here. General Lenihan, aroused from a sound sleep, answered. Giving his name, grade and company, the soldier said:

"General, I want you to come down and show a chef how to cook ham and eggs the way I want them."

There was an audible click to the receiver at the general's end of the line and the search was on.

Poincare May Form New French Ministry

Late Premier Has Yielded to the Persuasion of President Doumergue.

PARIS, Nov. 9—(AP)—Efforts were being made tonight to form two different cabinets to succeed the Poincare union government, with the premier himself seeking to set up a government.

Yielding to the persuasion of President Doumergue, Poincare consented to make an effort to put together a cabinet while the socialist radicals at the same time were endeavering to reorganize the coalition and to form a cabinet of their own.

Poincare, with customary diligence was in conference with all of his colleagues of the outgoing government excepting the four radicals who resigned thus forcing the break in the Poincare cabinet. A few minutes later he told the president that he would see what he could do.

It is generally concluded from this that the premier proposes to retain in his new combination all those disposed to remain with the likelihood of including even the radicals in case they will revise their point of view.

After reaching a decision to attempt the formation of a cabinet, Premier Poincare called Minister of the Interior Sarraut and Minister of Agriculture Queuille, both radicals, into his cabinet and it was announced after they left that another meeting would take place tomorrow morning. These developments confirmed the belief which has been entertained ever since the beginning of the crisis that if Poincare remains at the head of the government he will insist that all of his old colleagues remain with him.

The premier's task is considered in political circles most difficult in view of the pressure being brought to bear by the militant radicals on all their leaders to ostracize him. The radicals have been soliciting ardently the help of the socialists. At the beginning of the governmental upsets the socialists were careful to hold themselves aloof but latest developments indicate that they are yielding to the idea of taking a share in a new ministry with the radicals.

BEQUESTS IN WILL OF GAMBLER ROTHSTEIN

Crowds Rush to View Eruption of Mt. Etna

All Trains Are Packed With Tourists and Automobiles Choke the Roads.

GIARRE, Sicily, Nov. 9—(AP)—News that the eruption of Mount Etna has taken on renewed intensity has caused a [illegible]bling of crowds rushing to[illegible] zone of fire. They pack [illegible]es into the available trains [illegible]automobiles choke the roads. [illegible]e impromptu tourists are mainly [illegible]cilians.

This is the third time in the recorded history of the eruptions of Etna that the lava has descended toward the sea like a colossus advancing with slow but inexorable pace, destroying everything in its path.

The plight of the peasant folk, whose land was worth from $2,000 to $2,500 an acre, is most pitiable. Those owning 15 or more acres of this fruitful land are considered rich. This year the demand for lemons has been enormous—and now behold this scourge.

The lemon crop is gathered twice yearly, the fruit bringing nearly three cents apiece on the tree. This portion of Sicily has now become a land of the "newly poor."

The Sicilians gathering to watch the latest exploit of their natal volcano, pass the night among the vineyards and gardens between here and Taormina, watching the splendor of the flaming serpent as it slowly crawls on, and then leave at dawn to resume their daily tasks.

To these are added many foreign visitors who had come to spend the winter in Taormina and its environs.

ROTHSTEIN PICTURED AS MAN WITHOUT PRINCIPLE

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP)—Another—and less romantic—picture of Arnold Rothstein, popularly known as the gambler prince of Broadway, was drawn in the district attorney's office today by one of his own cronies, the host at the dead gambler's last fling at cards.

Before he was fatally wounded last Sunday, the small fry along Broadway looked up to Rothstein as a sort of a gambling Galahad. He didn't drink and he didn't smoke, even profanity was uncommon with him; he never cheated at cards, they said, and could lose with the same stoic calm with which he won.

And when he died the rumor went about that he had been killed because he refused to pay a debt incurred to sharpers who stuffed a deck with marked cards. His admirers saw his death as a sort of martyrdom on the altar of honesty.

But Jimmy Meehan, Broadway betting commissioner, in whose apartment Rothstein played the game where he dropped a roll of $380,000 and then welched on his I. O. U., told his version of the affair today and through his eyes Rothstein was seen as a mean spirited sport. A "squawker" who was merciless in collecting debts but who pleaded poverty or cried thief when he lost.

HOOVER PLANS GOOD WILL TRIP TO SOUTH AMERICA

Announcement Made at the White House and at the Home of the President-Elect—Departure Probably Will Be Made From San Francisco Late Next Week on a Battleship—Latest Election Returns Give Hoover Popular Plurality of 6,186,109.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Nov. 9—(AP)—A good will trip to certain Latin-American countries is proposed by Herbert Hoover, before he returns to Washington for his inauguration on March 4.

Announcement of the intention of the president-elect was made almost simultaneously at the white house in Washington and at the Hoover home here today.

"I have had the suggestion of a visit to certain Latin-American countries before me for some days," said the statement issued by the president-elect. "It has been cordially supported by President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg. There are considerations of the time required and other matters which delay final determination for a few days."

Although the plans necessarily are indefinite at this time pending diplomatic exchanges between the state department and the countries of South America, he proposed to visit, it is the understanding that departure will be made from San Francisco late next week on a battleship, probably the Maryland, flagship of the U. S. Battle fleet.

If Mr. Hoover follows the usual routes for such tours of South America, his trip will require about two months as it will take him to all of the larger countries of the southern continent, both on the west and the east coasts.

The expectation is that from San Francisco the president-elect will go to Columbia, Ecuador, Argentina, Peru, Brazil, Chile and the larger countries on that continent. After completing his tour of the continent, Hoover, it is believed, would board another battleship at an eastern Southern American port and return to the United States.

The direction of his future travels and the manner in which he will spend his time between the date of his departure from South America on the return trip still is a matter of conjecture, however. The South American trip would take him away from the United States during the first two months after his election, and freed from the atmosphere of politics, he could give his thought to the formulation of the plans and the policies that he will take into his administration.

Upon his return to this country, he probably would bring back a sufficiently clear outline of his future program to be able to write in the names of his cabinet members after a series of conferences with party leaders.

The president-elect has given much time during his seven and a half years as secretary of commerce to the work of fostering trade between the United States and her Latin-American neighbors to the south but this would be the first time that he has ever set foot upon that continent, although as an engineer, his business carried him into most of the other parts of the world.

SMITH RESUMES HIS DUTIES AS GOVERNOR

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 9—(AP)—Governor Smith returned to his office at the capitol today to resume the administration of state affairs, dropped early this fall to make possible his insuccessful campaign for the presidency on the democratic ticket.

He was asked in his first press conference what he believed would be the future of the campaign issues debated in the campaign.

"Every man, when elected to office, is entitled to a full, fair chance to make good and Mr. Hoover should have every assistance from every citizen," the governor said.

Tipping back in his chair, he greeted the newspapermen and replied to their initial question concerning his health by saying that he was "feeling well and haven't lost a thing."

"I'm going to take a little vacation," he said. "We are beginning to look around to see where we are going to live.

"It's like getting married all over again," he said after a moment of silence.

The governor talked of his reception in Albany last night, when a crowd of thousands cheerd him from the station to the executive mansion.

"The victor can always get a parade," he said with a pleased smile, "but the vanquished can't—always."

The governor said that he had given no consideration to the future and what he was going to do. He denied that he had been offered the presidency of a New York city bank, reports of which were current after his defeat.

The governor will leave early next week for New York and then will go to some resort where he can indulge in his game of golf for relaxation after the weeks of campaigning.

LATEST FIGURES ON THE POPULAR VOTE

By the Associated Press

Returns of the country's avalanche of votes for president, as cast in Tuesday's election, had not been completed tonight, three full days after the close of the polls.

The count including today's straggling returns, disclosed a total of 35,439,715 votes had been cast for the two major party candidates, while the number cast for minor party candidates had not been tabulated. This is the greatest vote ever recorded.

Herbert Hoover's vote was increased today to 20,812,912, the first number ever polled by any candidate. Alfred E. Smith's total stood at 14,626,803, the biggest vote ever polled by a democratic candidate. Mr. Hoover's plurality on the tabulation of tonight's returns was 6,186,109.

While there remained 4,962 election precincts to be recorded, the results will not be materially changed but they are expected to swell the total vote to slightly more than indicated in the Associated Press estimate made ten days before election. Registration of qualified voters was placed at that time at 43,084,257 but it was calculated on the basis of previous elections that qualified voters who would not register their ballot, either voluntarily or involuntarily, would result in a total vote of more than 33,500,000.

SAYS SUPPOSED SHORTAGE OF NURSES DOES NOT EXIST

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 9—(AP)—Speaking before the New England Surgical society at its annual dinner tonight, Prof. C. E. A. Winslow, of Yale, in discussing the problem of the training of nurses in relation to community needs said that the supposed shortage of nurses does not in fact exist.

"This committee representing the American Medical association, the American Hospital association and other medical and nursing organizations finds that as a matter of fact, the profession of private duty nursing is over-populated," he said. "While there is in general a serious unemployment of nurses, the average annual income of the private duty nurse is deplorably low on account of the periods of idleness from which she suffers. The tendency of hospitals to increase the number of their pupil nurses beyond reason tends to make this situation more and more serious.

"The remedy for this condition lies along two lines. First an effort should be made to organize nursing in the home through better equipped registries and through the expansion of paid service by visiting nurse associations and to enlarge facilities for the care of patients of moderate means in semi-private hospital wards under group nursing. Secondly, it is essential that nursing schools should turn their attention from quantity to quality and should aim to turn out a smaller number of better qualified nurses."

A $7,000,000 YACHT IS BEING BUILT FOR FLEISCHMANN

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP)—A $7,000,000 ocean-going yacht to be used for deep water fishing is being constructed by the Krupps at Kiel, Germany, for Max C. Fleischmann, sportsman and head of the Fleischmann Yeast company, it was learned here today.

BATTLING FIRE IN OUTLAW OIL WELL

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 9—(AP)—While deputy sheriffs fought back long lines of sightseers attracted by a 100-foot torch of flame, several hundred men tonight battled the second outlaw well in the Santa Fe Springs Oil field which was ignited when it came in as a gasser this morning. The fire already has caused damage estimated at more than a million dollars.

Nine derricks on nearby locations were destroyed by the flaming gasser and others in the immediate district were pulled down to save them. Another oil well was in danger if the wind should throw the flames in its direction.

A network of steam and mud lines was being connected up tonight to be used in the major offensive against the burning well, on property owned by the Oell View Oil syndicate. The Texas, Inion, General Petroleum, Associated and Wilshire Oil companies will be represented at a general meeting of operators in the field tomorrow called to organize a fire-fighting campaign.

GOV. SMITH'S LEAD IN RHODE ISLAND CUT TO 1,094

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 9—(AP)—The contention of Chairman William C. Pelkey of the republican state central committee here that the official count of ballots cast in Rhode Island, would reveal that Hoover and not Gov. Smith had carried the state, was strengthened today by the reduction of the New York's previously announced plurality by 399 votes.

Election night returns gave Smith a margin of 1493 votes over Hoover but the state returning board, now engaged in counting the quarter of a million ballots cast in the 1926 voting districts of Rhode Island, has discovered that in the first eight precincts so far checked, Smith has suffered a net loss of 399 votes, cutting his lead to 1094.

JEWETT CITY

HOW THE TOWN APPEARS SEEN FROM AN AIRPLANE

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 9—According to records kept by Aviator Kamm on his recent and previous trips to the borough, over 50 residents of Griswold have qualified to give personal impressions, from actual experiences of Jewett City from the Air. Two outstanding features are mentioned by those who "went up" last Sunday. Of these two, the leader is the wonderfully beautiful appearance of the Carely section of the Ashland village. Its peculiar circular setting and metropolitan style of architecture, gives the appearance from the air, as though one approached the Latin quarter of some foreign city. The other feature, spoken of by more than a dozen of the air amateurs, was the appearance of the big cedar swamp a mile above the town, lying mainly to the north and west of F. C. Whiting's residence at the Elms.

No one, not even several of the older residents that passed over it last Sunday, had even the slightest hint of its vast extent. The dull gray of all the surrounding landscape is pleasantly relieved by this expansive area of red cedar tops, now all resplendent with that peculiar shade of unnamed green, which the hemlock and cedar always take on in the lower temperature of approaching winter. Well known facts relative to the water boundaries of the borough, seen from the air all at one time, seemed startling to many, as they came to realize that except for less than ten rods at Dorrville, Jewett City is entirely surrounded by water.

Not an ordinary swampy mixture, but instead, the beautiful Tadpole and Ashland ponds are enhanced by the picturesque Quinebaug and Pachaug rivers, two Indian-named streams, which are in confluence at the extreme southern tip of the borough boundary.

Don't forget Dollar Day at Dearnley's, today.—adv.

MALO IS FOUND GUILTY BUT APPEALS CASE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Nov. 9—Upwards of two hours was consumed this morning in trying the case of the State vs. Ernest Malo of Danielson on a reckless driving charge, the outcome of the hearing being that Malo was found guilty and fined $25 and costs by Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court. Attorney Harry E. Back, in behalf of Malo, took an appeal to the superior court.

The case grew out of an accident in which Malo's car figured on the night of October 1, the machine striking W. A. Graves of Mechanic street as he was leaving his home on his way to work and so severely injuring him that he has not as yet fully recovered, though able to be in court this morning.

In his own defense, Mr. Malo testified that he could not avoid the accident, his claim being that Mr. Graves started to cross the street, stopped when he apparently saw the approaching car and then started ahead again On the other hand, Mr. Graves told the court that he did not see the car and was so badly injured when struck down that he has no recollection of what occurred thereafter, as his mind was not clear for about a week.

It was bright moonlight at the time of the accident. Mr. Graves had been acting as a counter of ballots in the town election that day, and did not conclude his duties until after 7 p. m. He had gone home and was proceeding to his place of employment at the substation of the Eastern Connecticut Power company west of Mechanic street when he was injured.

MASONIC DIPLOMA OF 1797 PRESENTED TO LOCAL LODGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 9—Presentation this week to Moriah lodge, A. F. and A. M., No. 15, of Danielson of a diploma issued by it in 1797, recalls some interesting facts about this lodge, which was formed about 1794. The diploma in question was issued to Elisha Gleason 131 years ago. It was found by Clark Kenney of Hudson, Mass., and has been presented to Moriah lodge by Dr. A. L. Cundall. It was dated at Canterbury, where Masons resident hereabouts held meetings in those days, and is signed by Moses Cleveland, who later emigrated to Ohio and eventually founded the city of Cleveland.

Attorney E. L. Darbie a member of Moriah lodge and an officer of the Grand Lodge of Connecticut, said this afternoon, that in the early days Connecticut Masons were either under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts or the Grand Lodge of New York. Later, there being fourteen lodges of the order in Connecticut, a Connecticut Grand Lodge was formed. Moriah lodge was the first to be organized in this state thereafter and took the number 15, which it still retains.

The coming week brings the annual meeting of the Windham County Farmers' association, to be held in Putnam this year on November 15. This meeting will attract considerable attendance from the towns of Killingly and Brooklyn, where numbers of members are resident and active in its interest. Included in the announcements relative to the meeting is one having to do with the appointment of Miss Alice W. Billings as a home demonstration agent. She is to take up her duties December 3. This new work is expected to be of special interest to women resident on farms throughout Windham county. Miss Billings comes into this county from Waltham, Mass She is a graduate of the Watertown, Mass., high school in the class of 1922, and of the State Normal school at Framingham in the class of 1925. Since graduating from the normal school she has been a teacher of home economics at Shelbourne Falls, Mass., and at Newton high school. Other experience she has gained through acting as an assistant at the Home Information Center at Waltham and as assistant manager of a tea room at Plymouth, Mass.

Recently 75 members of the Social Corner from Norwich, Putnam, Willimantic, Thompson, East Killingly, Elmville, Wauregan, Plainfield, Moosup and Danielson gathered at the home of a sister member, Mrs. Mary A. Whitman, of South street to enjoy a Halloween party. There were six tables of guests when dinner was served shortly after the noon hour. Boston baked beans, pickles, salads, pies, cake, cookies and coffee were served. A program period followed during which recitations were given, jokes told and singing. After the hostess had been voted a good entertainer the members took their departure, delighted with their meeting and with ever feature of it.

What has been a blind and dangerous corner for years is a thing of the past as the result of changes made at the northwest corner of Main and Academy street and now bearing completion. Now that the office and stockhouse builders have been using during the construction of the new bank building has been removed the improvement as to safety at this corner is manifest. Traffic coming out of the easterly section of Academy street has a good view both north and south of traffic conditions in Main street, where travel is consistently heavy. The danger of accidents at the intersection of these streets has been greatly reduced.

Next Monday evening members of Killingly grange are to elect their officers for another year. Ordinarily, the meeting would have come on Tuesday evening, but has been advanced The members are to gather at a supper at Grange hall in Brooklyn prior to their meeting.

Arthur Duprey, World war veteran and a member of the medical detachment with headquarters at the state armory here, has been named as scout master of the Boy Scout troop that is showing so much enthusiasm and activity in Danielson at the present time.

Indications are that there will be plenty of boys anxious and willing to make a planned trip to Providence on Saturday of next week, Nov. 17, to be guests at the Brown-New Hampshire football game. Through the Windham County Y. M. C. A. 500 tickets have been distributed. Private cars generously offered by their owners will be used to convey the boys to the game, the arrangement being the same as last year. The tickets have been distributed in various towns of the county.

A general suspension of business in Danielson was agreed upon early this evening so stores and other business places will be closed all day Monday in observance of Armistice day. This agreement was brought about through circulation of a petition among business men by representatives of the American Legion this afternoon While Danielson has no formal ob-

VETERANS TO ORGANIZE DRUM AND BUGLE CORPS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 9—The second annual carnival of the Albert J. Breault post of Veterans of Foreign Wars was held last evening at St. Jeans hall on Providence street and was largely attended. The proceeds derived from this affair will be devoted to the support of a drum and bugle corps which the Albert J. Breault post has recently organized. The drum corps will be one of the much needed civic additions to the city and much credit is being given to the boys for their interest in such an organization.

The musical equipment has been purchased and is now on display in one of the retail houses of the business section. The soldiers who will take part in the band will be Patrick Donlon, drum major; Charles Woodward, instructor; Fred Durand, Jos. Benoit, Alfred Bernier, Pierre LeClair, Louis Girard, Napoleon Yates, Theo. Lussier, William Lannon, Jos. Martineau, Arthur Provencial, Albert Piette, instructor of bugles; Edward Mathieu, Joseph Lajot, Ovila Courtemarche, Jean Lussier, Arthur Benoit and Wesley Waters, and Arthur Shepherd.

Capt. John J. McGarry of the headquarters company and Capt. Edward F. Perry, M. C., of the Danielson medical outfit, and Lieut. Anthony Conora, Military police, Hartford, were in Branford Thursday, where they made an investigation of an accident that occurred while the state militia was in camp at Niantic last summer. The three officers comprised a board appointed by the National Guard authorities.

L. Edwin Hill, county secretary of the Windham county Y. M. C. A. of Danielson, was in Putnam this afternoon where he issued tickets to boys who are planning to attend the New Hampshire State-Brown football game to be held in Providence next Saturday. Several youngsters swarmed around the county Y leader in an effort to gain tickets. As in all things there is a slight "catch" and this Brown game is no exception, for to obtain tickets the boys must show Mr. Hill their means of transportation. In Putnam the hospitality of several car owners will make it possible for several boys to see the game who would otherwise be unable to reach the stadium. Mr. Hill stated this afternoon that he has tickets for any gentleman who will donate the use of his car to transport a group of youngsters to Providence next Saturday.

LOCAL MAN TO HEAD NEW ICE COMPANY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 9—J. Herbert Miles of Park street, Putnam, has been elected president of the newly organized Leadmine Ice Co., Inc., of Holland, Mass. The new company was recently chartered by the state of Massachusetts and will issue bonds to the extent of $100,000, and is one of the largest ice companies in the state.

Mr. Miles said this afternoon that his company is to harvest ice from a large lake in the town of Holland, to supply the wholesale demand for ice in Massachusetts.

Previous to his election as head of this company, Mr. Miles was a member of the forestry department of the United States department of agriculture and specialized in the work of destroying the pine tree bliste moth that for several months last year had threatened pine growth in Connecticut. He will leave Monday for Holland, where he is to superintend the work of construction of ice houses for the store of the winter harvest.

Miss Harriet M. Sampson of Woodstock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Sampson of that town is one of the poets whose works are contained in the recent issue of Connecticut Anthology. The poems are well known to many readers in this section. Miss Sampson spent the summer and fall at her home in Woodstock, but returned to New York a few weeks ago, where she is on the literary staff of a large New York daily.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Cross of Grove street are removing to Danbury, where Mr. Cross will take up his new duties with the New Haven railroad. He has been for the past two years in Putnam as track supervisor and his transfer is a promotion for him.

Merenzie Brown of South Main street is a patient at the Day-Kimball hospital where he is suffering from a severe illness. Mr. Brown was reported this afternoon as to be in a critical condition with recovery being doubtful.

Monday will be observed as a legal holiday in Putnam and a very appropriate observance of Armistice day, which falls on Sunday, will take place. All banks, mills, stores and schools will be closed throughout the day. A parade will form in front of the Soldiers' monument on Grove street at 11 o'clock, with speaking ex-

THE HOSPITAL AUXILIARY DRIVE

When one stops to realize the vast amount of excellent work that has been done by the Woman's auxiliary of the Backus hospital there can be no doubt of the value of that organization. It provides for this community institution what isn't to be had in any other way.

We value the hospital for the service it renders to Norwich and the surrounding towns in case of sickness and accidents. It should be the ambition of Norwich to see that it is kept on the highest plane of efficiency possible. Repeatedly have we noted the benefits attached to the additional facilities which have been provided, to the increased attention given to the patients through the efforts of the auxiliary and to the broadening and bettering of the institution. This means a greater asset to the community in these days when hospital service is more and more needed.

Norwich has reason to take pride in the manner in which responses have been made to the appeals in behalf of the Backus hospital. The results speak for themselves, but there is good and sufficient reason for seeing that those commendable efforts are continued. This the auxiliary is hopeful of doing. It believes that many hands make light work and in that belief it is now appealing to the women of Norwich to renew their membership in the auxiliary.

There are many uses to which such funds can be put but there is always that need of general community interest through such membership. In the drive which the auxiliary is making at the present time for 2,000 members it is striving for a most worthy goal. There is no better way of endorsing the work that has been done and the plans that are considered for the future than by getting back of the undertaking and giving it the needed support.

When we stop to think that the auxiliary provides that which cannot be met by maintenance expense, and when we give heed to the things which it has accomplished, there ought to be no question of the success of the campaign. The organization's good work should result in a prompt response to the membership appeal.

WHERE MACHINES ARE NEEDED

Some of the best arguments in behalf of voting machines have come from election experiences.

At the present time in New York state there is uncertainty regarding the outcome of the balloting for governor. It is claimed errors have been made and recounts may be sought.

In Rhode Island the board to which the ballots are returned are recounting the vote and finding errors on both sides.

In the tabulation of votes in Chicopee an error of 300 was made which brings the plurality of the democratic county commissioner to such a small figure that a complete recount may follow.

In the first congressional district Pennsylvania the victor has a lead of but 16 votes and a recount is being urged in the belief that there are errors.

These are of course only a few of the many instances where the closeness of balloting creates the impression that there have been errors, or where the accidental discovery of errors has changed or promises to change the announced result.

In all of these instances it is to be realized that ballots were used, counters passed judgment upon the intention of the voter and did their own adding. How many other instances there are where errors have been made, but about which nothing will ever be known because the vote was so decisive as to create no suspicion, will never be known.

At such a time, however, it is impossible to overlook the decided advantage that comes from the use of voting machines where votes are cast as intended, counted as cast and there is an accuracy to the result which eliminates doubt even though the result is very close. Close elections are entirely possible. It is because of the many instances where recounts have shown carelessness or crookedness in the first count that there is such a willingness to doubt the work of the human counters. The mechanical accuracy of the voting machines not only eliminates this uncertainty but makes the result available at an early hour without leaving any ground for dispute. It is interesting to note that Pennsylvania at this week's election changed its constitution to permit the use of voting machines.

THE PROTECTED DEER

Every year there is plenty of discussion over the legislation that permits deer to multiply and the regulations that exist concerning the hunting of them. This discussion is prompted because of the depredations that are caused by the deer, the belief that there is no need for killing a state with wild animals and the danger which exists while the hunting season is on.

It is a pretty picture to see deer along the roadside, in the fields and on the hills for those who are driving through the country, but that same appeal is not experienced by the farmers whose fields and crops provide the fodder for this steadily increasing number of deer. Neither is there any real keen interest to be experienced by those who have had their cattle shot in mistake for deer or had close calls themselves because of the careless handling of firearms on the part of those seeking big game in congested areas.

Under the circumstances one cannot fail to appreciate the attitude of the farmer in New York state who finds it necessary to paint his cows in order to give them proper protection while in other sections of the state a demand is being made for closing the season on deer hunting at all times in order that the danger of killing the people in thickly settled localities may be eliminated.

Here we find the backers of the closed season and the painters of the cows in agreement, but it isn't noticed that the painters of the cows, or the farmers, are enthusiastic over the idea of standing the expense of maintaining the deer with which the state may soon become stocked.

The whole matter has developed from the encouragement which has been given to deer propagation in the past. They were expected to increase under protection and they have. The result is a situation which is delightful from the standpoint of those who like to see the nimble wild animals, but not so attractive for the farmers or safe for the public in general or the cattle on the farms in particular.

HOUGHTON'S REAPPOINTMENT

The action of President Coolidge in renaming Alanson B. Houghton of New York state as ambassador to London cannot fail to win approval. Ambassador Houghton has given the highest service in that role both in England and Germany. It was with regret that the president accepted his recent resignation when he accepted the call of the republicans of New York to run for the United States senate. New York now has reason to regret that he was not successful in that quest, although his campaign was devoted more to the support of others than in his own behalf. But while New York loses there is the opportunity for the country to regain the services of an able diplomat and President Coolidge loses no time in reappointing him.

It was noted following the acceptance of his resignation, in which the president took occasion to express himself in terms of the highest praise, that there had been no successor named. Ordinarily the acceptance of a resignation is immediately followed by the appointment of a new ambassador but as if anticipating that he might fail of election to the senate no action of this kind was taken. This left the president free to seek his return to the diplomatic corps and thus there will be only a brief interruption in his ambassadorship, no more than would have been the case had he been making a vacation trip to this country.

New York would have been given efficient service in the senate by Mr. Houghton but the advantage now rests with the government in regaining the benefit of his services at the most important diplomatic post in the world. Mr. Houghton has proved himself a most valuable man wherever placed.

THE RADIO COMMISSION

Speculations are bound to be made concerning the action which Mr. Hoover favors when he assumes the presidency. Already there are those who are discussing the possibilities of selections for the cabinet and others are debating what he may do in regard to commissions, including that one having charge of the radio.

Whether that commission is continued will depend upon congress, but it is recalled that the radio situation was quite satisfactorily handled by the department of commerce before the commission was created. There was opposition at the time to taking the control out of its hands and creating another commission. Nevertheless it was done, but that body has been struggling ever since with a complex problem and it cannot be said that it has met the requirements of the situation in all particulars.

Mr. Hoover has made no statement concerning the commission. He has said nothing that would indicate he favored the return of the control to the department of commerce or that he would terminate the life of the commission. What others are saying is based almost entirely upon supposition.

The situation seems to be in the hands of the present congress. If it takes the proper action the existence of the commission will be continued beyond March 15 of next year, but if it fails to do so the commission will automatically go out of existence. It will be remembered that Mr. Hoover made provision in his department for the commission to function at the start when no funds were voted for it and he is thoroughly in touch with the work that is expected of it but speculation upon what he will do amounts to little until he speaks.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is an old story that a Hoover sweeps clean.

Anticipation of Indian summer is never out of date until November has gone.

The day for the settlement of bets means joy to only one party to the transaction.

The man on the corner says: Air may be free but those who want to broadcast don't find it so.

It ought to be possible from now on to satisfy the demand for something else in the way of news besides politics.

There was a grand response to the demand to vote. New voters and old did their duty. There was a record vote and yet there were many who could, not or did not go to the polls.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

If anyone is in doubt of the success of Christian education in the orient, one has only to consider the condition of the colleges fostered by American zeal and wealth in the near east. The latest news from the Woman's college in Constantinople is that among the new members of the faculty will be Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh and Miss Alice Morrow, sister of the ambassador to Mexico. Dwight W. Morrow. Mrs. Lindbergh will be professor of chemistry in the Constantinople Woman's college and Miss Morrow will act as hostess. Let us remember the splendid work that is being done at Robert college in the same city. This is the college that was founded by Cyrus Hamlin. There are the American colleges of Beirut, Sofia, and Athens that are conspicuous examples of American spirit, money and consecration. Christian education may well rejoice in the work that is being done in this part of the world.

The scientific law of inertia as applied to matter means that when an object is in motion the tendency is to continue in the line projected indefinitely. Does not this great law hold as good in other fields of activity as in the material? Who can tell how far the influence of both right and wrong is projected into the future? What is the meaning of this passage of scripture, "visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me" if it does not emphasize the law of inertia? Can anyone tell the ultimate effect of a good deed, simply because it may change the trend of a person's life? To this must be added the reproducing power of a potential word or act. We are living in an age far distant from that of Plato and Aristotle, but think what an influence these great minds have exercised on the great systems of philosophy since their day.

The battle has been fought, the victory won, and now the spellbinder can go to bed either to sleep the sleep of the just or to think over the lies he has told during the last several months. When they wake they can take their leisure in looking over their great political efforts, and ask themselves this question. "I wonder just how the Angel Gabriel thinks of this effort?" Well, if Gabriel should express himself things might be said that the spellbinder would not care to have inscribed on his tombstone. Is it not a bit amusing when we think that the high political priests of both parties seemed to speak ex cathedra as to the results of the election days before the great event occurred? Was it because of the time, being they had the infallible of prophecy or was it deemed necessary to bolster up the drooping spirits of their subordinates? Wasn't it funny to see what a shuttlecock was made of landslides?

"Man may come and men may go but the truth of God goes on forever." The greatest assets that any community can have are its men and women. As the truth of God is designed chiefly for the upbuilding of the characters of men and women it comes to us mainly through the human personality. How much would we know of spiritual truth and life were it not for the world had it not been for human interpretation? We talk about natural theology, and doubtless find pleasure and profit in associating ourselves intimately with Him through the so-called natural world. But the really important thing is the man with a message, and, when successful men leave one parish for another, or retire from active work, we are quite sensitive to the effect. We realize this all the more because no two men are alike. One's thought is as distinctive as his face. For this reason one man cannot fill another's place.

We are familiar with the words: "Work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work. We see the farmer very active these days clearing up his outdoor work. The time is not far away when that work cannot be done. Even the wild animals—at least some of them—are wise enough to lay by enough in store for the zero days when they cannot work. There is a time for the boy and girl to get their schooling, for most of them it is now or never. And thus it is throughout the whole realm of life. Reader! Isn't it true that there is another night coming which as far as experience goes we know nothing about? If so it is not the part of wisdom "to set our houses in order, or in other words to store up something with which to face "The Great Unknown?" No one knows just when he will step out and on. From observation we know that "the night cometh."

Is there danger of commercializing the church in these days? At least there is a lack of refinement among those who would exploit the church for commercial purposes. The appeal is sometimes made to the good women of our Ladies' Aid societies if they will only go about the parish and sell so many boxes of excelsior codfish a certain percentage of the sales will be allowed for the work of grace in China, Japan and equatorial Africa. This is a distant attempt to make capital out of those refiner instincts that support our missionary enterprises. Let it be admitted that our churches do find it hard to measure up to their appointments, but the methods suggested for getting money is rather humiliating. If this gordiness continues much longer there will be peanut stands in St. Paul's, London, and soft drinks sold in the vestibule of Westminster abbey.

If we are inclined to hark back to the "good old days" of the past it was open our eyes to a condition of things quite common that would not be tolerated today anywhere on the globe. We have only to look at the trail left by Columbus and his successors to have evidence of what 'these good old days" consisted of. If the Cpaniards who followed in the wake of the great navigator did not realize what they were after, the gold of the helpless natives and the salvation of their immortal souls, they subjected them to fiendish cruelties. For example take the little black dominion of Haiti. Think of those noble chieftains, whose crimes against humanity were that they dared to resist the invader and that they belonged to the black race. Take only one of them, for example, Toussaint l'Ouverture, whose name has been associated with that of Washington. Why was he allowed to languish so long in a French prison?

As we stand on the verge of another Armistice day, let us not forget the great lessons that it teaches. It makes emphatic the fact there can never again be a war declared between two or more civilized states without a reasonable reason. The time is past, and let us thank God that it is past forever, for one government simply because it has the power to coerce a smaller state can do it with impunity. The league of nations is strong enough to speak with authority and say, "thou shalt not do it." Little states are now protected from those big avaricious wolves that once went about "seeking whom they might devour" simply because they had the brute strength to do it. So much has been accomplished by the concert of nations, and from the popular applause given to the Kellogg pact it would seem that the time is not far distant when all wars would be tabooed by the concert of nations.

The 20th child of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Kelch of Luverne, Iowa, born yesterday, was named Alfred E. Smith Kelch. Seventeen of the children are living. All were born since 1903.

THE NEXT HOSTESS IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

When Mrs. Hoover steps into the white house as its mistress on March 4, she will not be in strange territory, for she has been a frequent and welcome visitor there since her husband assumed the portfolio of secretary of commerce in 1921. No woman of the cabinet has been more intimate or popular as a visitor there, and, like Mrs. William Howard Taft, whose husband succeeded to the exalted place after being secretary of war, Mrs. Hoover also is well acquainted with the duties awaiting her.

From an educational standpoint no former mistress of the white house has surpassed her, while in travel and wordly knowledge her experiences even exceed those of Mrs. Taft. She speaks several languages, has the grasp of a larger hospitality such as the first lady of the land must exercise during her husband's administration and is gifted in the way of putting every one about her at ease.

Almost the only thing that either Mr. or Mrs. Hoover dread in assuming their new positions is the public glare that opens for public discussion of all of their private affairs. Discussion of their clothes, their habits, their manners and, in fact, a constant intrusion on their social and domestic life.

Favorite With Newspaper Women

Mrs. Hoover is a favorite with newspaper women, and while she has never given out an interview in her whole life, she yet mingles with woman writers and gives them every opportunity to use their own wits and judgment. She has nothing to conceal, but it greatly displeases her to have her little philanthropies and acts of kindness and charity discussed. Only a brief time before the Kansas City convention she carried out her promise to become the guest of the Women's National Press club and while enjoying their hospitality in an almost girlish manner she invited them to be her guests at a garden tea. On this occasion she answered their dozens of questions, but refused as she laughingly said, "to be quoted."

It has been written, and truly, that the price of residence in the white house is the loss of liberty and freedom of speech and action, or if not of liberty, at least of privacy. Life in the house of presidents is almost like living in a glass house where one's every action is questioned and commented upon.

Social Traditions Held Sacred

White house social traditions are sacred to the great American public and must be observed to a great extent not more by the president than by his wife. In fact, they are as sacred as the Bible upon which he takes his oath of office. Mrs. Coolidge, who will soon place her mantle of national hospitality about the shoulders of her friend, leaves a wealth of tradition of perfect though simple hospitality. Her richest endowment has been her cordiality and her smile.

Few changes in the white house management are necessary, each mistress of the mansion since the advent there of Mrs. Abigail Adams introducing not more than two or three which threw the country into social convulsions, and to quote Mrs. Taft who made quite as many as did any of her predecessors, "as a matter of fact no president's wife ever needs to make changes unless she so desires, because the white house is a government institution thoroughly equipped and always in running order. Each new mistress of the house has absolute authority, of course, and she can do exactly as she pleases, just as she would in any other home."

Mrs. Filmore's Innovation

It was Mrs. Filmore who introduced a cooking range into the white house kitchen and thereby raised a rebellion among the dismayed domestics, who were accustomed to fireplace and crane and Dutch ovens. There was genuine glee among the below stairs residents of the mansion when after the fire was built the stove refused to draw and the president himself had to go to the patent office and look over the model before he could master the draughts.

Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, when mistress of the mansion, undertook to economize by dismissing the French cook, but she got into hot water, for the chef, who had served Lord Sackville West refused to leave, and Marquis de Chambrun was called in to settle the difficulty. But it was not a first lady of the land who brought down public wrath by turning the green and red parlors of the state suite into dressing rooms, but President Arthur, who chafed more over the limitations of the white house in those days than had any of his predecessors.

In High Official Circle

After all it is not so much the social qualifications that the great American public is caring about in Mrs. Hoover, for in fact only the official element of Washington will meet her in a critical way—high officials and diplomats, with a few society folk from other cities. It is more to the point with the man and woman voters of the country to know what is the nature of the new president-elect's consort. How does she size up in the bigger way—in an understanding of the world as it exists today.

One of her associates in the cabinet has said that if you visit the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover you are likely to find her on one of the porches or in her rugged garden at the back of her house. Her recreation is in sitting in an easy chair on the wide porch overlooking the garden, knitting a baby sacque of soft yarn—something for her little granddaughter or her baby grandson—while she studies the trees and birds or watches some little flower she has just planted in a pot of earth, or takes stock of the squirrels that are so tame that they roam over the porch as well as through the garden at will.

One can vision the south front lawn of the white house a rendezvous for Girl Scouts, the organization in which she is so vitally interested. Mrs. Hoover was president of this organization and later became executive chairman of the national board. If tradition carries out, one of the first garden parties held in the president's grounds will be an open air party for the officers and members of the Girl Scouts. Mrs. Hoover never misses an opportunity to wear her uniform, and when a year or two ago the Girl Scout convention was held in Washington she was never absent from a session, and she generously entertained the delegates and members while they were here.

It is said by officials in the Girl Scout movement in Washington that Mrs. Hoover knows hundreds of the girls by name and she is not averse to teaching them in the arts of gardening, using the hoe and rake with which to demonstrate her work whenever necessary.

Organizer of Kitchen Gardens

It was she who started the kitchen-garden movement during the World war and made a small patch of ground a goodly part of the family income during the days of food shortage and economy. She instigated the gardens in Potomac park and watched the movement grow into great magnitude and become so popular that it is only in the last year or two that gardening is not carried on there and in other big parks of the capital.

Annually Mrs. Hoover presents the Eagle Scout badges, the highest honor in the gift of the organization, to the girls who win them.

It is quite well known that Mrs. Hoover will not attempt to make a great impression on the residents of the United States as a social light. She is not a society woman, and very few of her predecessors have been. She, like most of those who have held the exalted position, cares far more for humanity at large than in the mere tea-drinking and social-calling atmosphere. She likes women and men who do things worth while in life.

However, in her social life she is faultless, being a generous hostess and presenting a charming hospitality that has never been exceeded in the cabinet circle in Washington.

When cabinet Wednesday came around hundreds of visitors were welcomed beside the great open fireplaces and at a tea table laid generously with dainties. California, her adopted state, always was represented—just as it will be in the white house—by the rarest fruits and flowers and other products of that state. Where tall, view-obstructing baskets of flowers generally stand in the center of a banquet board, be it for dinner, tea or luncheon, on her table there always is a low, gracefully shaped basket filled with luscious grapes, oranges, lemons, apples, plums and in fact, all that the orchard produces, and from the kitchen garden or farm lands golden color squashes and other bright hued products. It is probable that even the splendid Monroe gold mirror, used on the white house table for banquets of state, will reflect just such a beautiful picture as this.

Has Wealth of Beautiful Things

Mrs. Hoover will have a far greater wealth of beautiful and interesting things with which to adorn the private part of the white house than has any woman before her, unless perhaps Mrs. Taft. In her travels over the earth with Mr. Hoover she has acquired many lovely things, some of which she has purchased, while others have been presented to her by some grateful friend. That is what has made the Hoover home interesting to visitors all through their cabinet days here. In Mr. Hoover's study is a splendid portrait of the king of Belgium, suitably inscribed, and another object is a richly carved box of dark wood serving as a safe place in which to keep the wonderfully embellished expression of gratitude to Mr. Hoover of the Belgian people. The wording on the parchment is in Flemish, and it rests on the richly embroidered pillow within the box—the needlework being that of Belgian children—the back of the pillow or cushion showing a flour sack with the big letters advertising the Oregon source of the product plainly visible whenever the pillow is reversed. From all around the world Mr. and Mrs. Hoover have brought such treasures, and while there is no needless bric-a-brac in their home, it is gay with reminders of their prowess in travel.

"Tut" to Succeed "Rob Roy"

Accompanying them to the white house will be the great German police dog Tut, who understands and takes care of his master just as the late Rob Roy loved and took care of President Coolidge. There will be other dogs there, too, and cats and birds, of which there are always a number in the Hoover home.

Children in the white house have furnished many pages of interesting history, and from the time Thomas Jefferson entertained his grandchildren there up to the present time many little ones have romped through the white house and now the little granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover, Peggy Ann, and Herbert 3rd, their grandson, are to become the nation's pets. They are the two children of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Clark Hoover, Jr.—the former always called Pete by his father—and are with their parents in Cambridge, where at Harvard the young father is completing a course in business administration. It is for these babies that Mrs. Hoover is always knitting or embroidering something. Allen Hoover, the younger of the two sons of former Secretary and Mrs Hoover, is 21, also of Stanford University, of which his parents and his brother graduated. Peggy Ann has achieved the age of 3 years, while her baby brother, the king of the nursery, is 9 months old. They are pretty and wholesome. The courtship of the young Hoovers like that of his parents, started at Stanford, from which university they both graduated.

Courtship Clandestine In Portugal.

LISBON, Portugal—(AP)—The average girl of Portugal's middle classes seldom leaves the house without her parents or a chaperon. The young women and men never go about together alone. As a general rule, their meetings are limited to balls and parties attended by their families.

Hence the courtship in Portugal usually begins with amorous glances exchanged at the theater, on shopping expeditions, or even at church, and blossoms in a more or less clandestine manner.

The young man, seeing his first advances are well received follows the girl at a respectful distance and waits outside her house. If she approves of his looks she goes to the window of her flat and gazes at him.

Thus encouraged, the suitor in dumb play ascertains whether she will receive a letter from him. An hour is fixed, by means of sign language, and on the following day the girl awaits the missive, brought by a "moco," one of a group of men always found at street corners, who are employed to take messages and for porter purposes.

The "moco," well trained by long practice in his duties as a messenger of love, discreetly waits outside the girl's home until she signals him to approach. He is told to return later for the answer.

Meanwhile, the swain passes by the house and stands at a corner where he can be seen from a window. This continues for weeks or months, until the maiden ventures to speak to him from the window at night, while mother pretends to close her eyes to what is going on, and father is probably at the theater or his club.

The conversation carried on from the street to a fourth or fifth floor is difficult and affords great fun to the inmates of the lower flats.

The girl's admirer is never allowed to enter her house in open courtship until his parents first go there to ask for her hand in marriage. Even after that, the couple's first conversations take place in the presence of the family and the two are seldom alone together until after the marriage ceremony, when they start, still as comparative strangers, on their honeymoon.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3—The human element in the news rarely plays a vital part in the narration for newspaper readers of the what, when, where, who and why of chronicled happenings which is the news itself.

Occasionally some incident of gripping emotional quality creeps into the "story" a good reporter will write; but not often. The limits of newspaper "space", the hurry of preparing "copy" to catch an edition, the mass of prosaic detail to be sorted in the reporter's mind and either used or discarded as his judgment dictates, all work against elements of the "story" outside the simple narration of happenings, against dramatization of the news.

Scott's Sacrifice

The Bystander speaks with the experience of years of sober news reporting for The Associated Press in Washington. Most of it was interesting chiefly because every reporter of necessity becomes more or less a student of current events, struggling always in hurried fashion to glimpse the real significance of the swift happenings of each day, each hour. But, for the Bystander, queer fragments of big events still live vividly in memory.

Such glimpses, for instance, as that of Major General Hugh L. Scott, President Wilson's soldier friend, the first war time chief of staff, defending the policy that had kept not only Major General Leonard Wood, but Scott himself from their hearts desire of commanding combat divisions in France.

Pershing must be supported absolutely, Scott argued, but his honest, courageous blue eyes were wet as he added, wistfully:

"And I say so, who would give life itself to be 'over there,' in the ranks if need be—I, who picked Pershing for his job."

Bryan and the Lusitania

Or again, before that, on the day word of the submarining of the Lusitania came throbbing over the cables. The writer waited in the corridor, to give Secretary Bryan the first word he was to hear of this sea tragedy that was to wreck all the hopes that America could stand aloof from the war.

Bryan came up in the elevator just before his office door in the state department, a big, heavy, wide shouldered figure of a man, calm of face, upright in carriage with well squared shoulders and with his invariably kind greeting to news writers whose faces he knew. He paused to listen to the brief, blunt story the despatches had told. His eyes grew dark, his face stern and the corners of his wide, orator's mouth, drew heavily down.

"Is there any doubt, any chance of mistake?" he asked, low voiced.

"No, Mr. Secretary. Bodies have already been recovered and identified, bodies of Americans."

Bryan turned wordlessly to his office door. The heavy shoulders had slumped dejectedly, his head was bowed forward until his wide brimmed black slouch hat hid eyes that looked unseeingly down at the stone flagging of the corridor over which he passed, slowly. His office door closed softly behind him, shutting him in with his thoughts.

And all the "news" there was in that moment, tragic in the life of a man who had bulked large as a champion of peace and brotherly love among all nations, was this

"Secretary Bryan had no comment to make."

IN THE DAYS NEWS

Canton.

"American engineers will deepen the Pearl river so that ocean-going vessels may reach Canton, China, 90 miles upstream from Hong Kong," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Foreign flages will be a curiosity to the Cantonese of the present generation but the waters of the Pearl off Canton have reflected the colors of many western nations in the past. More than four centuries ago a Portuguese merchantmtn rounded the Cape of Good Hope and sailed up to Canton. The first American ship arriving there, the Empress of China, from New York in 1784, was greeted by traders from Holland, Portugal and England who already had an established trade with the Chinese.

"Even without large ships, Canton now ranks with the great inland ports of the east. Travelers approaching the city by boat are bewildered by the shipping in the harbor. Thousands of sampans, junks and other small river craft nearly obliterate the surface of the water while the wharves bristle with activity.

"The boats in the channel move here and there with small, short-haul cargoes, but along the sea wall bordering the Bund, other small craft are tied ten deep, floating at high tide and settling in the mud at low.

"It is estimated that about a quarter of a million Cantonese are housed in the boats on the Pearl and in the canals through the city. Some boats accommodate three to four families as well as their flocks of chickens, geese and pigs. Talkative parrots are popular pets among the river folk. Their squawking and the loud monotonous chatter of their owners creates bedlam on the river front from early morning until midnight.

"Travelers usually see Canton by way of one of the most occidental spots in the Orient—the foreign settlement on Shameen Island. In the middle of the last century foreigners were not safe in the Chinese quarter, so they made an island out of a mud flat in the Pearl. Today that flat is a little oval of luxury and comfort, with palatial residences, modern buildings and parks, bordering boulevards that in some places are wide enough for tennis courts as well as ordinary traffic.

"Two bridges span the canal that separates Shameen from Canton. The river front is disappointing to anyone expecting to see a typical Chinese city. Flimsy buildings facing the Bund have given way to modern, many-storied structures housing offices of foreign corporations, and here and there bamboo scaffolding indicates that another bit of the Orient is passing to add to Canton's occidental sky line. All these improvements have been made by men and women masons and coolie-carriers, without much modern equipment as steam shovels and cement mixers.

"In the street, Chinese with European coats and trousers, leather shoes, and straw and felt hats, rub elbows with their countrymen in loose-fitting oriental garments, cloth footwear, and skull caps. Now and then a farmer from the suburbs with his umbrellalike hat mingles with the throng.

"But from Shameen and the Bund, one can throw a stone into Canton, unchanged for many centuries. Here many of the ancient thoroughfares are so narrow that one can stand in the middle and touch the side walls with the tips of his fingers. Shopkeepers add to the congestion by signs which protrude beyond the doorways.

"Rickshaws cannot traverse these lanes and sedan chairs can only pass at intersections. Travelwise strangers usually take the chair for sightseeing tours. Pedestrians dodge the wood supports of passing chairs and are jostled about by chair carriers.

"Among orientals in the Chinese quarter, Americans may pass many natives who have spent some time in the large cities of the United States, for most of our Chinese immigrants are from Canton. Some of them return and live in luxury but many slip back into the shops and take up the same work they left. The Bund and the new Canton road on the old wall site apparently do not have the fascination of the dark workshops in the rear of the stores.

"The traveler wonders whether the idea of establishing 'Automobile Rows' and 'Real Estate Rows' in our cities did not originate in Canton. One Canton street is lined with shops selling articles in jade, shops on another street display silks, while embroidery work shops, furniture shops, and fan factories are grouped on other streets.

"In the 'shoe street' the latest leather styles are on display along with cloth shoes which were once the fashion for men, and the little satin slippers won by Chinese grandmothers who bound their feet."

HIS CARE

They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth forever. As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about His people from henceforth even forever. Psalm 125: 1-2.

This is a wonderful promise for all time and also for eternity. The Lord is round about His people forever. How much it means to have such a friend. He never faileth in the time when other help may fail. "They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion." The emphasis lies upon the object of their trust Jehovah, the Lord. What a privilege to repose in God!

To trust elsewhere is vanity, and the more implicit such misplaced trust becomes the more bitter will be the disappointment; but to trust in God is sanctified common sense, which needs no excuse, its results are its best indications. There is no reason why we should not trust in God. There is no conceivable reason why we should not trust in Jehovah, and there is every possible argument for so doing. But apart from all argument, the end will prove the wisdom of the confidence. The result of faith is not occasional and accidental; its blessing comes not to some who trust but to all who trust in the Lord. Trusters in Jehovah shall be as fixed, firm and stable as the mount where David dweit, and where the ark abode. To move Mount Zion was impossible; the mere supposition was absurd. "Which cannot be removed, but abideth forever." Zion was the image of eternal steadfastness—this hill which according to the Hebrew "sits to eternity," neither bowing down or moving to and fro. Thus doth the trusting worshipper of Jehovah enjoy a restfulness which is the mirror of tranquility; and this not without cause, for his hope is sure, and of his confidence he can never be ashamed. As the Lord sitteth King forever, so do his people sit enthroned in perfect peace when their trust in him is firm. This is, and is to be, our portion; we are, we have been, we shall be, as steadfast as the hill of God. Zion cannot be removed, and does not remove, so the people of God can neither be removed and does not remove; so the people of God can neither be moved passively nor actively, by force from without or fickleness from within. Faith in God is a settling and establishing virtue; he who by his strength setteth fast the mountains, by that same power stays the hearts of them that trust in him. This steadfastness will endure "forever," and we may be assured therefore that no believer shall perish either in life or in death, in time or in eternity. We trust in an eternal God and our safety shall be eternal.

"As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even forever." This is no matter of poetry, it is so in fact and shall be so forever.

Stories That Recall Others

Breakfast Song.

A husband appeared in the kitchen before the call for breakfast. "Did you think I called you to breakfast?" asked the surprised wife.

"I didn't need to be called. I heard you scraping the burns off the toast," replied the compatible husband.

Stop Lights.

Marian, age four, had just moved into her new home the rear of which overlooked a large apartment house. Going to bed one evening, she looked out of her window and asked: "Mother, is that where all the policemen live?"

"Why, no, dearie. What made you ask?" queried the mother.

"Well, look at all the afon lights!" exclaimed Marian.

Mother looked. Everyone in the apartment seemed to have a rose colored lamp shade.

Fruits and vegetables are bearers of health

Eat them, cooked and raw, each day

ONE of the country's leading food scientists was asked what rule he could give for healthy eating. "This would be my first rule," he said. "Eat at least one raw salad (vegetable) and at least one raw fruit each day. In addition to that, eat at least one cooked vegetable and one cooked fruit each day. Rotate the fruits and vegetables with season, price and taste."

He went on immediately to emphasize the value of sugar in making fruits and vegetables palatable and enjoyable. People no longer need feel that a meal has to be unenjoyable in order to be healthful. In fact, the opposite is true. It is of great importance to the health of the body to enjoy the right foods as well as to eat them. And sugar is nature's most perfect flavor, the adder of zest and pleasure to eating. Many of the most healthful fruits, for example, would be almost unEatable without sugar. Adding sugar makes the harsh fruit acids delightful to the taste. It does not injure or change in any way the beneficial health qualities of the fruits. And the good cook knows that nearly every vegetable has its flavor improved when sugar is used in cooking.

Successful cookery and health-giving diets revolve around sugar. Sugar in the kitchen and on the table can be so useful in promoting health and good digestion. What, for example, is so enjoyable and refreshing as fresh grapefruit, sweetened to taste? It is important to eat fruits and vegetables daily and to enjoy them. The Sugar Institute.

SEN. WAGNER DENIES ALLEGATION OF DRY AGENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—(AP)—Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York tonight denied as a "terrible outrage" the allegation of a prohibition agent in a prohibition case in New York city that he had "fixed" enforcement agents to obtain protection for a restaurant.

John J. Mitchell, a prohibition agent in testifying in a prohibition violation case against Luigi Cardi, the restaurant propretor, mentioned the senator's name as having been cited by a waiter in the establishment as a person who secured protection for serving of liquor.

"It was a complete falsehood." Senator Wagner declared. "It is a terrible outrage as I never heard of the restaurant people nor the restaurant.

"It is unthinkable that such a statement could be made and it is an absolute lie and manufactured out of whole cloth. Of course it is ridiculous in its nature to think that I should be implicated in such a charge."

GOLDSMITH ENGRAVINGS SHOWN ON ANNIVERSARY

Recognition of the 200th anniversary of the birthday of Oliver Goldsmith, which is to be observed at Yale today (Saturday) by a display of first editions of Goldsmith's works and a lecture by Professor Katherine Balderston of Wellesley, is to be given in this city by an exhibition of several very valuable engravings from the library of William H. Shields. These are shown in the window of the Butts Art and Gift Shop on Broadway.

The gem of the collection is the engraving by Bellin from a painting by Ward entitled "Doctor Johnson Rescuing Oliver Goldsmith From His Landlady." The description of the picture is given in the following extract from Boswell's Johnson, which is printed under the engraving: "I received one morning a message from poor Goldsmith that he was in great distress and begging that I would come to him as soon as possible. I sent him a guinea and promised to come as soon as possible. I accordingly went to him as soon as I was dressed and found that his landlady had arrested him for his rent at which he was in a violent passion. I perceived that he had already changed my guinea and had got a bottle of Madeira and a glass before him. I put the cork into the bottle, desired that he would be calm and began to talk to him of the means by which he might be extricated. He then told me that he had a novel ready for the press which he produced to me. I looked into it and saw its merit. Told the landlady I should return and having gone to a bookseller, sold it for sixty guineas."

The novel by which Goldsmith was rescued on this occasion was "The Vicar of Wakefield."

As an appropriate adjunct to the other two pictures, Mr. Shields has placed with the display an engraving of Edmund Burke, an exquisite piece of work by Watson from the painting by Reynolds which is in the national gallery in London.

DEVELOPING NORWICH INN PROJECT ON PLAN THAT IS NEW TO THIS CITY

The Norwich Inn project will be developed on a plan that is new to Norwich but which has been put into operation in other cities in New England in connection with the Treadway system of inns, with success and satisfaction to investors, according to those who are working for the accomplishment of the project.

Before the Consolidated Hotels Service corporation was called into conference with the committee having charge of the Norwich Inn movement, investigation of other hotel chain systems was made and their representatives invited to present their plans for consideration. In all cases these promoters made proposals, it is stated, that included their participation in the enterprise to the extent of ownership of a large block of the stock of the proposed corporation, which in some cases amounted to virtual control of the enterprise with the burden of raising all the necessary capital placed on the Norwich group.

According to their representations this was the customary method of conducting such enterprises and many hotel enterprises which are regarded as community-owned hotels have been built and are conducted on that basis. Negotiations had progressed with one of these companies to the point where the terms of the contract under which they proposed to operate was being given serious consideration when the operations and successful administration of the Treadway System of New England Inns came to the attention of the committee of the chamber of commerce having this movement in charge. A thorough investigation of Treadway methods was made, some of the inns visited, inquiries solicited from disinterested parties in the towns where inns are in operation with the result that representatives of the Treadway system were invited to present a proposition for consideration.

The plan offered proved so attractive that the committee decided to carry the matter further with the result that negotiations have practically been completed to have the Treadway organization come to Norwich and develop the proposition on the same general plan operative in other communities where Treadway Inns are in operation.

In direct contrast to the methods employed by other community hotel promoters, the Consolidated Hotels Service, Inc., more familiarly known as the Treadway System, do not own any substantial part of the stock of the hotels operating under Mr. Treadway's direction, except any amount they may be moved to subscribe to in the spirit of co-operation in the interest of the community enterprise. On the contrary, the stock of Treadway operated inns is held by the citizens of the community in which the inn is located, with the Treadway organization serving as operating managers, sole control being vested in the community stockholders.

To quote from the plan as outlined by Vice-President Joseph A. Peck, who has been in Norwich for frequent conferences with the committee, "We design, superintend the construction of, furnish and operate inns to be affiliated with this group. The projects are developed under the direction of President Everett B. Rich and Operating Director L. G. Treadway. Our own incentive to capitalize each project as low as possible for the sake of our expected share in the profits is a much more practical plan than for an owner to employ an architect, contractor and operator, each working for his own interests regardless of the other two.

"The financial structure is such that the preferred stockholders must get their return before we can share in the profits of the operation. After fixed charges including depreciation and amortization, if any, and the preferred stock dividend of 7 per cent. we get one-half of the surplus, the other half going to the common stockholders. The preferred stock in this case will be issued at par and the common at some nominal price.

"From all the conditions Norwich appears to our operating staff as a far superior location than any in which we are now operating. There is an opening for an inn which would appeal to our class of patronage—the discriminating tourist, those who make extended stays, play golf, and visit local industries, not to mention the rank and file of commercial men. Since 65 to 70 rooms is not found to be too many in communities like Amherst and Middlebury, we believe that a 70-room project in Norwich is very conservative. The building would be designed with adequate public space for a 100-room house when the business warranted extension."

NORWICH RESPONDING TO SALVATION ARMY APPEAL

Although the interest of the presidential election kept the attention of the people of Norwich at the beginning of the week and the Salvation army contribution showed a marked drop in the last few days, the late contribution returns coming into the Salvation army headquarters, at 10 Cliff street, by the last mail are of a greatly improved response. E. J. McCabe, campaign secretary, received word from Charles J. Twist, secretary of the Manufacturers' association, that several local plants are making a voluntary canvass among their employes for contributions for the Salvation army appeal. The donations from this source are bound to bring in a material amount towards the $5,000 maintenance fund which the Salvation Army is striving to raise for their year's work in the city.

The Salvation Army is greatly indebted to the city authorities for granting permission to put on a Salvation Army tag day in Norwich, on Saturday, November 10, and the officers in charge pray for clear skies so that the tag day may prove a success. A tag day had always been a great help to the Salvation Army appeal in former years, and the zeal with which the Salvation Army workers took care of tag day has been an inspiration to all who were connected with the appeal.

The following are the new contributors which the Salvation Army gratefully acknowledges:

Thursday afternoon before the Salvation Army headquarters closed for the day, John B. Stanton, superintendent and principal of Elizabeth street school, brought in a contribution of $15.98 in dimes, nickels, and pennies, which Mr. Stanton said was a voluntary contribution by the school children. The Salvation Army appeal committee is very thankful to the Norwich children for their generosity and is also greatly indebted to Principal Stanton and the school teachers for their added work in taking care of this very acceptable donation.

There were 17 from Hanover, 16 Pachaug, 6 Newent, 10 Jewett City, 32 Preston, 31 Plainfield and 23 visitors. A vote of thanks was extended the women for the very fine dinner and also in appreciation of the music. Mrs. William Krauss sang a solo God Be Merciful to Me. The afternoon program took the form of a round table, the question discussed by several laymen and pastors being "What Are You Doing for Your Young People? How Can We Reach all of them?" Other speakers were William Lee of Hanover, Nathan Hall of Preston, Jason Lathron of Plainfield, Rev. W. J. Reynolds of Lisbon, Rev. G. F. Goodenough of Jewett City, Rev. H. L. The Sunday school, Christian Endeavor society, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Friendly Indians, the grange, World Wide guild, Story Hours Missionary classes, study of the Bible were all discussed. It was emphasized that it was the duty of parents to go to church and Sunday school with their children, not to leave it to the children to decide what they want to do on Sunday. Answer their questions, keep up with them and not let them get away from you. Teach them that Jesus Christ is the great pattern, and live such lives that young people may know that we practice what we preach.

The services closed with the benediction.

RUTH SNYDER INSURANCE POLICIES NULL AND VOID

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP)—Supreme Court Justice Mahoney ruled today that though there was no evidence that Mrs. Ruth Snyder was thinking of killing her husband, when she took out $95,000 insurance on his life, still she got the policies by deceit and for that reason they were null and void.

And so little Lorraine Snyder, the daughter of Albert Snyder and the woman who was electrocuted for killing him, will receive only the amount of the premiums paid, $1,652.28, instead of the value of the policies of which she was beneficiary by assignment from her mother.

The policies were taken out more than a year before Snyder was killed by his wife and Henry Judd Gray, her lover. Mrs. Snyder arranged an interview between her husband and Leroy R. Ashfield, an agent for the Prudential life insurance company, but he agreed to take only a policy for $1,000, which has been paid without question.

It was brought out at the trial, however, that Ashfield got him to sign both the application for the $1,000 and another blank application, and that Asihfield then traced Snyder's signature on a third application. The blank applications were filled in, one for $5,000 and the other for $45,000, the latter having a clause doubling the amount in case of death by violence.

Justice Mahoney ruled that the two larger policies were void in that Snyder never knew of their existence and that therefore they never took effect in the eyes of the law. He held that the insurance company should not be made to pay them, since it was immaterial that Snyder had not entered into the contract himself.

ACADEMY FACES HARTFORD HIGH IN GRID CONTEST AT CAMPUS TODAY

Game starts at 2 o'clock.

The Academy grid outfit meets what looks like its stiffest test of the year this afternoon at the campus in Hartford High. The Penrance City eleven comes with a creditable record and strong hopes of beating the Red and White. Today's game marks the renewal of football relations between these two schools after a lapse of 11 years.

Hartford has lost but once in five starts, that to Central High of Bridgeport and is rated as the favorite. The Academy has lost twice in six games, those to Warren Harding of Bridgeport and Windham of Willimantic, both games by one point 7 to 6 and both on foreign gridirons.

Hartford Leader in State.

Hartford has strong hopes for the state title this year, which they claimed loftily with Warren Harding last fall. Johnny Newell and his boys have been heralded widely as the best in these parts for some time now and even their defeat by Central has failed to dampen the ardor of the Hartford fans. Interest in this high school team is running high about Hartford, in fact the Newelimen attracted more attention than Trinity college and its mid forces. That this game is one of the gems of the Eastern Connecticut scholastic season cannot be denied and it was a choice bet of schedule-making that brought it here.

Last week Hartford defeated Bulkeley down in New London by 14 to 0 when they were supposed to be just about twice that much better than the Whalers. Overconfidence was blamed for the rather close shave so that today Hartford will be fighting for everything right from the first of it. There has been talk of a second team working for Hartford but Academy followers rate that as mere idle talk and state that the visitors will be lucky to hold the Wildcats even with their first-stringers in action.

Strong Quartet Behind Line.

Hartford presents a speedy backfield, comprising Tommy Hayden, Jackie Kenny, Dobkin and Ward, the first two being the mainsprings. Hartford's line has been pulling together in fine shape this year and off-tackle dashes have been one of the chief methods of ground-gaining.

The Academy's plan of attack has not been let out but it may be that with a dry field in prospect, the locals will rely on Captain Buck LaCroix and Jack Marks for their chief running gains and that these two vets will get away more frequently than was the case in Windham last week in mud and rain. Marks and LaCroix are a capable pair on a dry gridiron and the equal of any two in the state. The forward passing attack of the Academy, which has been just so-and-so at times this season and brilliant at others, will also undoubtedly see much service this afternoon.

Hartford To Have Band.

This game has finally seemed to awaken school spirit from its dreamy slumbers at the Academy today, for the first time this season, the students are expected to cheer their team on. Hartford is coming down with a 20-piece band and if the local students would only show a bit of the same spirit it would not only be more encouraging to the team but would also tend to make the Academy contests what they should be—colorful battles—instead of the matter-of-fact games that have been the case without any help from the sidelines. The Hartford band has been practicing for the past two weeks and will play the songs of the school for the expected large delegation from the Queen City. A student bus is coming with the team while many others will make the trip in private cars.

Both teams have been reported in shape for the fray. The Academy has all its regulars ready while aside from a few minor injuries, the invaders are also in tip-top condition. The game starts at 2 o'clock and a banner gathering is expected.

OSTERGREN BELIEVES HUDDLE SYSTEM SLOWS UP GAME

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 9—(AP)—Declaring the huddle system to be "detrimental to the drive of a football team and a failure, except as used by New York university," Coach Fred Ostergren of St. Bonaventure has returned to the signal calling method of running his team. Bill Roper of Princeton started out this season without the huddle but re-established its use.

"I have used the huddle for a year and find it tends to slow up the attack of my team," Ostergren stated. "The rhythm necessary for a strong charging line is lost in the huddle method and as a result plays which would otherwise work turn out to be failures.

"It also tends to curb the initiative and experience of a good quarterback as the play is decided upon before the defense forms. Consequently, the opportunity to direct a play at an apparent weak spot in an opponent's defense is lost.

"I think a team directed by a snappy signal caller has much more coordination in its charge than a group which swings into action from a huddle. The latter method does not usually contain any cadence.

"Chick Meehan, coach of New York university, has developed a shift from the huddle which maintains the rhythm and drive of a team without giving the defense an opportunity to analyze the play. In my opinion, Meehan's system is the only way in which the huddle can be used successfully."

Ostergren has been coaching St. Bonaventure for the past three years, during which time he has turned out winning teams. Last year he surprised the football world by taking a team to Cornell which held Dobie's charges to a tie score. St. Bonaventure plays Cornell again this coming Saturday. Ostergren will not predict the outcome but promises a real battle.

AGGIE SQUAD LEAVES FOR GAME WITH "WILDCATS"

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., Nov. 9—Twenty-two players, coaches, and managers left here this noon for New Hampshire where the "Connecticut Yankees" and the New Hampshire "Wildcats" will meet on Saturday in Durham in one of the major engagements of the season for both elevens.

Since Coach Sumner A. Dole took up his duties at the state college the Aggies have won three games, tied one, and lost one to New Hampshire. In 1923 the teams played a scoreless tie, in 1924 Connecticut won 6-3, 1925 New Hampshire won 17-0, in 1926 the Aggies won 3-0, and the last fall the Connecticut eleven again defeated the "Wildcats" 9-6.

Coach Dole has been pointing his squad for this contest, the team being in the best mental and physical condition of the year.

The probable lineup: Wilson and Tombari, ends; Capt. Sayers and Hawkins, tackles; Colacurcio and Gilman, guards; Knaut, center; Ryan, quarterback, Fisher and McCombe, halfbacks; and Harger or Flydal, fullback.

YALE TO USE BEST LINEUP AGAINST MARYLAND

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 9—(AP)—A final secret practice was held today, following an hour of group work and fundamentals, and Yale stands ready to pit her best available lineup against the charges of the Maryland forces. All but Charlesworth, center, will be in Yale's lineup at the kickoff. Palmer will be pivot man but Charlesworth may play for part of the game.

Walker and McEwen, who held down the wing positions against Dartmouth will have the call over the other candidates. Their work has steadily improved under the direction of the end coaches in the last three games.

Six of the Maryland regulars who faced Yale last season will be in tomorrow's lineup. Out of eight games played Maryland has defeated Yale once, in 1916.

Fifteen thousand high school boys and girls will be guests at the game of Captain Eddy, Manager Goss, the football team and the Yale Athletic association.

TODAY'S FOOTBALL CONFLICTS RICH IN TRADITION AND RIVALRY

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP)—The tumult, the shouting and the battle for touchdowns is on again tomorrow. The alibis, the wreckage and the laurel wreaths will be sorted out next week.

All along the college gridiron warfront the hand-to-hand conflict will be renewed while millions of non-combatant look on, trying to keep warm as well as enthusiastic. The big November blast has set in and only the hardiest clans can hope to survive the rest of the campaign.

Tomorrow is the crucial spot where those brigades that have been marching along the unbeaten trail well may have some misgivings. The pace is difficult to maintain on a battlefield where any given array may climb up now, after having taken the long count, and administer a knockout blow.

West Point's men o' war, among the scattering few unbeaten battalions in the broad gridiron land and aiming at national championship honors, have been carefully drilled to side-step this mid-November jinx and avoid any fatal let-down against Notre Dame at the Yankee Stadium.

There will be other big battles and big crowds, with around 70,000 watching the Navy-Michigan game at Baltimore and perhaps 82,000 viewing the critical Ohio State-Iowa tussle at Columbus, but the colorful intersectional clash between the Cadet and Hoosier tops the list. Some 86,000 are expected to watch the spectacular renewal of the east-west rivalry, eager to see whether Notre Dame can upset the Army or stop the rampaging red head, Christian Keener Cagle, Army's all-American candidate and just about the most widely-discussed ball-carrier in the country.

Notre Dame couldn't stop Cagle or have with much success last year when the Cadets romped to an 18-0 victory. Red has about the same strong supporting cast this season while the Hoosiers have been somewhat below their usual high standard. On most any basis of figuring, the Army has a pronounced edge but they are prepared to meet as severe a test as they had all fall.

With the Army as a favorite to start with, what of the other prospects in a gridiron slate that involves strong sectional and intersectional rivalries, title hopes and a flock of exciting prospects elsewhere in the east, as well as the south and west.

Here's about how they shape up in the advancing dope:

Ohio State and Iowa, rivals for the western conference championship, well-matched but with the Buckeyes a slight favorite on comparative scores and because they play in their own back-yard.

Carnegie and Georgetown, two undefeated eastern elevens, meeting on neutral ground at Albany, N. Y.—another toss-up between two powerful, resourceful teams.

Harvard to beat Pennsylvania, in another close affair, because the Crimson is on a strong upswing.

Yale and Princeton to win decisively from Maryland and Washington & Lee, respectively.

Purdue and Northwestern, another toss-up, with Northwestern holding the edge, if comparative scores mean anything.

Navy to beat Michigan, chiefly because the Middies have gathered more headway in their come-back, but this is another event where nip and tuck ride with the opposing charges.

Nebraska to beat Oklahoma and remove any lingering doubt about the Cornhuskers' supremacy in the first season for the "Big Six."

Southern Methodist to gain revenge on the Texas Aggies and advance another step toward the southwestern conference title, even without Redman Hume in the line-up.

Georgia Tech, playing at home, to check Vanderbilt but not by any one-sided margin in this clash of undefeated teams.

Florida's steam-roller to flatten Georgia's sturdy opposition in another game that has an important bearing on the southern conference race.

California to beat Washington's subnormal outfit in the outstanding Pacific coast clash.

Colorado Aggies to beat the University of Colorado in a tussle for the runner-up position in the Rocky Mountain race, now led by Utah

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP)—Gridiron greatness seems to go with red hair. You hear the coonskin-coated brigade these days debate the relative merits of Red Grange, the ex-galloping ghost, and Red Cagle, the Army's Louisiana lightning.

Some 80,000 persons will turn out this Saturday in the Yankee stadium to see just why at this stage of the current campaign Red Cagle happens to be the most widely talked of backfield ace in the country and as certain an All-American as any candidate can be by the first fortnight of November.

Cagle isn't a 1928 flash in the pan. He was one of the greatest backs in the country last year. They admitted it and they may vote him a majority again this Saturday when the Hoosiers try Knute Rockne's latest tricks on the Cadets.

But is Cagle greater than Grange was? His hair is a trifle redder and he's a trifle faster but no more eel-like than Harold the Red was in negotiating a path through a broken field.

Cagle, they argue, is more valuable to the Army than Grange was to Illinois because the southern star is a triple threat on attack as well as a stalwart defensive back. Cagle can run, kick and pass superlatively and Yale will testify he knows how to back up a line.

Grange is conceded to be one of the greatest open-field runners of all time. His all-around greatness, however, never was fully tested because he stood out so conspicuously in his ability to dodge, shift and side-step toward an opposing goal line. Bob Zuppke, his coach, built his main offensive thrusts around Grange, giving him two superlative interfering aids in Britton and Mellwain. Red was saved for the big shots. He took a turn at the passing game but did not parade the football world by taking a team to Cornell which held Dobie's charges to a tie score. St. Bonaventure plays Cornell again this coming Saturday. Ostergren will not predict the outcome but promises a real battle.

Cagle appears to have enough stuff to withstand the jinx of being labelled a certain All-American midway in the campaign.

Quite a few of the others, however, who set out to the tune of the all-star ballyhoo, have hit the chutes. No fullback candidates got any more attention for a time than Bronko Nagurski, successor to a two-time All-American, Herb Joesting, at Minnesota, or Big Chief McLain, the Iowa Indian. But Bronko's last appearance was back at his old line post, tackle, while McLain skidded out of the picture in the Minnesota game.

Injuries have dimmed the star of Al Marsters, fast-stepping Dartmouth back, who as a sophomore last year was as brilliant as any ball-carrier in the east. Eddie Wittmer, Princeton's variation of Johnny Maulbetsch, didn't do much to opposing lines until he broke loose at Ohio State last Saturday.

BULKELEY LOSES TO SO. MANCHESTER ELEVEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

MANCHESTER, Nov. 9—South Manchester high defeated Bulkeley of New London here today, 18 to 6, in a hard-fought battle. Bulkeley made a strong showing at times but the home town was just a bit too good. Manchester has lost but one game this year and is the Central Connecticut league champion.

Bulkeley has but one more game, with Ansonia next Saturday, before its annual classic with Norwich, Nov. 24, at Norwich.

YALE NOT TO ADOPT INTERSECTIONAL POLICY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 9—(AP)—Yale will not open its doors to "intersectional" football, because the team next fall will go to Georgia to play at the opening of the stadium at University of Georgia, the Yale Alumni Weekly will say tomorrow.

"What we should object to and expect that the majority of Yale men would be with us against, would be the inauguration by Yale of 'intersectional' football as a regular thing," said the Weekly. "Yale's policy is to permit out of town appearances within reason, provided such engagements do not interfere with the college work of the participants. . . .

"The university is not at all interested in matching its football teams with leaders in other sections of the country for the purpose of seeing which type of game is the better. The sport is played for the good of the undergraduates and not of the public, however friendly that public may be."

SIX STATE COMMISSIONS THROW IN WITH PREHN

CHICAGO, Nov. 9—(AP)—Declaring allegiance to the National Boxing association, six states, supposedly leaders in the threatened secession movement, today advised Paul Prehn, president, they were heartily in accord with the work of the N. B. A. and had no intention of withdrawing.

Michigan, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Mississippi, Kentucky and North Carolina were the states that communicated with President Prehn.

Prehn, chairman of the Illinois State Athletic commission, said Massachusetts had entered into a working agreement with the Illinois commission, whereby suspensions and other rulings of the two commissions would be recognized.

HORNSBY WILL SIGN WITH CUBS WEDNESDAY

CHICAGO, Nov. 9—(AP)—Rogers Hornsby will officially become a member of the Cubs next Wednesday, when he will arrive to talk terms with President Veeck.

The signing, however, is only a formality, as the Cubs took over the contract Hornsby had with Boston, which called for an approximate salary of $40,000 a year. It has two years to run.

ARMY-NOTRE DAME GAME IS BIG BATTLE OF GRIDIRON TODAY

By F. G. VOSBURGH
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—Games bright with old rivalries or rich in the promise of conflict between unbeaten machines provide tomorrow's college football program in the east with enough color to make up for the greyness of chill November skies.

All along the battle line from Cambridge where Harvard takes on Penn, to Baltimore where Navy wages intersectional war upon the Wolverines of Michigan, the big things of the season are at hand.

The biggest single assemblage totalling some 86,000 will be found filling the Yankee stadium in New York where the annual extravaganza between Notre Dame and the Army holds an added attraction this year in the question as to whether Rockne's comparatively unimpressive team can check the all-conquering Army's winning streak.

On its merits as a football game alone the battle between the undefeated legions of Georgetown and Carnegie Tech at Albany ranks with the best. Through the efforts of alumni in and around the New York state capitol as well as the enterprise of the Eastern league ball club, which owns the new Chadwick Park stadium there, this headline game will be served up for the special benefit of fans of the Mohawk and Hudson valleys.

By some strange quirk of football fortune it turns out that the teams selected long ago to give Albany its first big college game are two of the five remaining undefeated and untied elevens in the east and the only ones that carry spotless records against each other tomorrow in the entire section.

The nearest thing to a favorite in these four outstanding games is the Army, which conquered Notre Dame last season, but over a period of years has found the Rockne eleven hard to beat. The great record made by Capt. Bud Sprague and his men, in sweeping aside such teams as South Methodist, Harvard and Yale, the last two on successive Saturdays, has given them the edge over a Notre Dame team which some consider below par because it was beaten by Wisconsin and Georgia Tech.

In the other three games there is no favorite. There is little to choose between the records of the Navy and Michigan, which have lost three and four games respectively, but the braces shown by the Middies in beating Penn and by the Wolverines in trimming Illinois give assurance that the football will come close to the standard of past years in quality.

Penn has lost only to the Navy and Harvard only to Army, while Georgetown and Carnegie have dealt out death to everything that has come their way.

Two more games that look like tossups are those between Dartmouth and Brown at Hanover and between Pittsburgh and Washington and Jefferson at Pittsburgh. Over a period of years few rivalries have been more closely fought.

For the last two years neither Pitt nor the Presidents have been able to gain the slightest advantage nor even to tally a point, as the games of 1926 and 1927 both ended in scoreless ties. Each team has won just 13 games since they began doing battle back in 1890.

The Dartmouth-Brown embroglio finds Dartmouth a little ahead with 11 victories to ten and one game a tie since they began playing football in 1894. This year, the Brown players believe it is their turn to win and even the count as Dartmouth smashed out a 19 to 7 victory last season over a luckless team of rusty iron men. This year's Brown outfit has done much better in its games to date.

Yale and Princeton meantime take it easy in preparation for their classic battle next week at Tigertown. To whet their claws tomorrow the Royal Bengals tackle Washington and Lee, while Yale sharpens its fighting edge in a game with Maryland.

Syracuse, too, is pointing for a big game billed for next Saturday, when it meets its ancient rival, Colgate, yet the Orange can ill afford to toy with the strong Ohio Wesleyan eleven that will invade the Archbold bowl. Sending two of its best backs to scout to Maroon, Syracuse may have its hands full against the unbeaten Buckeye brigade which last year held the Orange to a tie. The Colgate foe is Hobart.

Cornell and Columbia, meeting St. Bonaventure and Johns-Hopkins at home, can be counted upon to exert themselves more than in the usual practice game because of the memory of tie games played last season with these foes.

Villanova, which shares with the Army, Georgetown, Carnegie and Boston college, the honor of being unbeaten and untied, opposes Temple, while the Bostonians rest in preparation for a game with Fordham Monday.

Williams and Wesleyan engage in the annual strife among the "Little Three," while Amherst grapples Trinity. Other regional classics among the smaller schools find Rochester paired with Union, Clarkson meeting St. Lawrence, Bowdoin playing Maine and C. C. N. Y. opposing Norwich.

New York university, set back last week by Georgetown, hopes for an easy day with Alfred as do Penn State with George Washington, Lafayette with Rutgers, and Gettysburg with Muhlenberg.

HARVARD BEAT YALE IN CROSS COUNTRY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 9—(AP)—For the third successive time against Yale, J. L. Reid, captain of Harvard's cross-country team, crossed the finish line first, enabling his team victory by the score of 26 to 29. The race was held over the Roy Tompkins course and Reid was timed in 28 minutes, 10 seconds, the distance being approximately six miles. D. R. Jacob, Yale captain, scored third place.

The summary: Harvard 26, Yale 29.

1—J. L. Reid, Harvard, 28:10; 2—L. Flakman, Harvard, 28:19; 3—D. R. Jacob, Yale, 28:19; 4—N. D. Smith, Yale, 28:39 2-5; 5—R. C. Aldrich, Harvard, 29:07; 6—W. F. Smith, Yale, 29:17; 7—C. Bullock, Yale, 29:18; 8—A. G. Thacher, Harvard, 29:19; 9—F. E. Foote, Yale, 29:36; 10—G. Murchie, Harvard, 29:57.

Harvard Yearling Harriers Win

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 9—(AP)—Harvard's freshman cross-country runners cleaned up the first five places against the Yale freshmen today over a three and a half mile course. The clean sweep gave Harvard 15 and Yale 40 in the point scoring. G. N. Barrie, the winner, had an advantage at the finish of nearly 10 seconds over Estes, his teammate.

Dittrich, of Waterbury, today broke the cross country record over the four mile course by placing first in a handicap race for places on the Connecticut Agricultural college squad. His time was announced as 21 minutes, 48 seconds which was 45 seconds better than the time made by James Bottomley, of Milford, and James Gwin, of Tyrone, Pa., who both tied for second place.

Weiss of the New Haven club of the Eastern league. Taber will wear the uniform of the Wichita Falls club of the Texas league next season.

ALLENTOWN, PA., ADMITTED TO EASTERN LEAGUE

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 9.—(AP)—At a meeting of the Eastern league directors held in this city today, it was voted to admit the city of Allentown, Pa., to the circuit for next season. Allentown is to take the place of Waterbury, Conn. The Waterbury franchise was forfeited to the league last July and at today's session the franchise was awarded to Allentown by League President Herman J. Weisman and the directors.

Ernest C. Landgraf was here today to represent the Allentown baseball interests. Landgraf formerly owned the Syracuse and Newark clubs in the International league. Last summer he operated the Allentown Independents. At the meeting today Landgraf said that the Allentown Eastern league club would be run by a group of citizens of that city. Allentown has a ball park that seats 5,500 and the team will play Sunday and twilight baseball.

Landgraf said a sufficient amount to the Eastern league treasury today to wipe out all the money the circuit lost in Waterbury last season, according to a statement by President Weisman. Present plans call for Eastern league clubs to make three trips a season to Allentown an dto remain there each time for a three or four game series.

Worcester, Utica and Trenton were other cities to put in a bid for the Waterbury franchise, but the league directors considered Allentown to be the best proposition. The lack of a good baseball park at Worcester helped turn the vote against Worcester.

The Bridgeport franchise has been awarded to Fred J. Voos, who was president of the club last season. Voos plans to operate the Bridgeport team with three associates. All debts of the Bridgeport club, which filed a bankruptcy petition last month, were paid to the league today.

President Weisman announced that the next meeting of the Eastern league would be held at the Hotel Taft, in New Haven, on Monday, the 26th. Geo. Weis, president of the New Haven club, winners of the 1928 Eastern league pennant, will be the host at the pennant banquet that will follow the meeting.

HARVARD AND PENN ARE RATED ON EVEN BALANCE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 9—(AP)—Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania made final preparations today for their gridiron clash at the stadium here tomorrow. Harvard was considered a favorite until after the visitors had been watched in their practice session, when observers conceded the Red and Blue an even chance for victory.

Penn practiced in the stadium for an hour this morning. The first half hour was open to the public, but when the signal drill was held it was in secret. The Harvard team ran through signals this afternoon. The Crimson drill included practicing a defense against Penn's kick formation. The visitors came here with the reputation of having a series of hidden ball plays which were expected to baffle Harvard. Their offense is built around these plays and stress placed on deception.

The Harvard offense is based on power with the guards coming out of the line to aid in the interference. A series of lateral pass plays is also included in the Crimson attack. Harvard's defense against forward passes has been weak this year and it is felt that Penn will attempt to take advantage of this condition.

The first string lineups of both teams will start the game, with the exception of Crawford, who replaced Putnam as quarterback for Harvard.

BROWN AT FULL STRENGTH FOR DARTMOUTH GAME

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 9—(AP)—Coach Tuss McLaughry sent his Brown varsity charges through two hours of signal drill and dummy scrimmage today before the team boarded the special train that is to take them to Hanover, N. H., for the game with their traditional rivals, Dartmouth, tomorrow. The Brown team is in the best physical condition and every first string regular will be in the starting lineup.

McLaughry has devoted considerable time this week to perfecting his defense against the Big Green overhead attack. Ruling a slight favorite tonight, the Brunonians are determined to scalp the Indians and thus even the series between the two colleges which started in 1894. Dartmouth has won 11 victories and Brown ten, while one game resulted in a tie.

INJURIES STILL HAMPER THE DARTMOUTH TEAM

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 9—(AP)—Coach Jesse Hawley took his Dartmouth football team to Canaan to rest for its encounter with Brown, here tomorrow with the starting lineup still a source of worry. Following the practice today Coach Hawley said the lineup of the Big Green was still doubtful with the possibility that Marsters and Swarthout would be drafted for service against the Providence team.

It was definitely decided that Captain Black, Breithut and Mike Sherman would see the game from the sidelines as the result of injuries and Coach Hawley said that this gave Brown an even chance for victory. During the signal drill Marsters was in the backfield and Swarthout at end but just what service they will see was problematical.

Indications were that the twenty-third meeting of the teams would be in a frigid temperature and the threat of snow caused officials to order the gridiron covered with canvas.

PLAYER'S DEATH STOPS HILLHOUSE GRID GAME

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 9—(AP)—Out of respect to Robert Stock, who died today from a malady which puzzled physicians, other members of the Hillhouse High school football team agreed to cancel the scheduled game tomorrow with New Britain High school. He was brought to a hospital this week with an injury received in a game and his life was despaired of when boils broke out over his body.

Two blood transfusions were made from schoolboy chums which proved futile. Several members of the school team have suggested to call off the balance of the schedule out of respect to their comrade. Services will be held Sunday afternoon.

NO MORE BIDDING FOR SERVICE OF COACHES

Salaries are going to stop sky rocketing, and coaches are to be compensated by ranking as a profession, the representatives of 300 universities and colleges in 22 states decreed.

DIVER CUTS OFF CAISSON IN PAWCATUCK RIVER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 9—The caisson in the bed of the Pawcatuck river just below the Broad street bridge was completely cut off by noon Friday by the diver working with a submarine torch. The top of the steel shreathing which previously had defied all efforts to release it, was secured to the Pawcatuck bridge with three inch hemp cable, with block and fall. Before the driver had left the river bed after beginning work for the third day shortly before 9 a. m., another block and fall was stretched to the Connecticut side of the river and then pulled slowly across the river bed after the falls from the bridge had been cut to hasten the work of clearing the steel sleeve out of the river. The swift running river current was so strong that the diver was compelled to work at all times on the up-stream side.

FALSE FIRE ALARM CASES UP FOR HEARING FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 9—An aftermath of election day in Westerly and the ringing of two false fire alarms was the appearance of two young men in the third district court Friday morning before Judge Oliver H. Williams. Herbert Tregaskis, aged 20, on a charge of intentionally creating a false alarm of fire pleaded guilty. The case was continued one week at the request of the state for further investigation into the sounding of the fire alarm on the morning of Nov. 7 following election day.

George Larkin of Mechanic street was brought into court on a similar charge. Larkin, however, pleaded not guilty to the complaint. Larkin told the court that when the whistle blew he was on High street between the Westerly Furniture company building and the post office.

As the result of the first alarm being sounded all three pieces of the apparatus of the Westerly department responded, but Chief Gorge E. Enger, having a suspicion that the second alarm was also false, allowed but one truck to go out.

ROCHESTER IRONMEN DEFEAT JAZZERS OF FOOTBALL

The Dance Hall football team played the Rochester, N. Y., Ironmen at Dunn field Thursday afternoon. The Ironmen came by train, arrived at 10 o'clock in the village and were welcomed by a rain storm. They put up at the Corn Cob club rooms while in the village. Coach Billie Moore gave a short talk on football and pointed out the plays for the day. At 12 o'clock the Ironmen went to a local lunch room and had a North Dock fish chowder with cream pie; no coffee, but water, coffee being against the coach's orders. Changing into their purple suits with a sledge-hammer on the jerseys, they started for the field. There were plenty of young rivers and mud but both captains said they would have the battle out. The Ironmen kicked off to the Noankers and Flash Ebbetts caught the ball and started off for a run, but Quick Step Orring stopped him before he ran many feet. Trying the air attack, the city boys knew how to knock it down and the Jass Dancers lost the ball on downs. The numbers on the players' backs could not be seen. They were covered with mud. Only 25 fans braved the weather, as it was raining hard. Ironmen had the ball and their backfield was like steel. Lightning Sullivan threw a forward pass 37 yards to Hooks MacDunn and raced 63 yards through mud and water for a touchdown. The extra point was rushed over, making the score, Ironmen 7, Dance Hall 0. The first half was over and Coach Hurry Up Bentley gave his players a talking to. He said, "Get those Four Horsemen going or have them shod at the blacksmith's shop!" Noank players had on new jerseys for the first time with a Charleston dancer on the jerseys. Speed G. Mahan picked a forward pass out of the air and dodged through the Ironmen, but Midget Swan got him on the five-yard line. Both players were covered with mud. The game was stopped so they could wipe the mud off their faces. Speed Mahan, for Noank, made an 81-yard run, but in four rushes the Ironmen's line held like a stone wall and again the Dance Hall team lost the ball on downs. Standing in back of his own goal post, Long Jaw Burr made a pretty punt out of danger. Noankers were trying to break the line, but no use. Hamburg Fitzgerald made a 20-yard run, but it did not do any good, for the game was over. Rochester Ironmen swam to a victory over the Dance Hall team through mud and water, 7 to 0. It was a thrilling game.

Champion Smelt Catcher

The champion smelt catcher of the village, Rollin Rathbun, has beaten his own record of catching smelts in a day's fishing. Setting out in a row boat, Wednesday, on the North cove, and when the sun was setting behind a cloud, he had 1,442 smelts and some large yellow fish. He was some proud to beat his own record by two fish. Champion Rathbun said they were biting fast and at times he could not get his line overboard before he had smelts like flies on a cow's back in the summer time. "Never did I see so many smelts in my life as this year!" Champion Rathbun was telling The Bulletin reporter if anyone would like to go for a fishing trip any time before the season is over he is welcome and "I can show how those yellow fish are caught. If they don't believe I can catch them, there is one spot in the North cove where I can go and the fish go wild there, swarming around. I was asked what kind of bait I use—if it is fixed up or does it come from Massachusetts. Catching smelts is a trick, like a fellow learning a trade. He can bait his hook in 20 seconds and will have a fish in the boat in 47 seconds." The reporter asked him for his picture, holding up a large smelt, but he said that he never had one taken and it was too late to start in now. "The largest smelt I've caught since I've been in the fishing game, ten years, was 13 1-2 inches long and tipped the scales at 1 1-4 pounds."

MANSFIELD CENTER

There was a strong republican victory at the polls in Mansfield Tuesday, as is customary in this town. There was also an unusually large vote. With 1099 registered electors, 829 ballots were cast. Of these, 655 were straight republican, 190 democratic and 84 split tickets. The vote for Hoover was 696, for Smith 209. Llewellyn J. Storrs was re-elected judge of probate; the representatives elected were Andrew M. Grant for the South parish and Byron D. Houston for the North.

The Red Cross roll call begins Sunday. Mansfield Center branch, which belongs to the Hartford chapter, last year secured 119 members. It is hoped that the number this year may be increased. The branch contributed $200 recently to the relief work in Florida and the West Indies. A community emergency chest is maintained at the library. This is well equipped with sick room supplies and bed linen which may be borrowed at any time by anyone in the district. A pair of crutches and a wheel chair are included. Mrs. Edwin G. Clark is general chairman. The chest is in charge of Mrs. Clark, Mrs. W. R. Davoll and Miss Elsie Marsh.

Ray Holdridge has commenced work on his new bungalow. This was the old Church Hill school house, which has been recently purchased. A cellar and an addition to the present structure and a complete renovation will result in a very attractive bungalow, according to plans drawn by him.

Oyster stew, a variety of pies and coffee were served free to the voters at Ledyard Center, irrespective of party by the woman's work committee of Ledyard grange, Mrs. W. I. Allyn, chairman. The expense was borne by the candidates of the two major parties. The grange realized a tidy sum to be used in paying off its indebtedness.

One lone socialist vote was cast for the entire ticket in Ledyard Tuesday. F. W. Burdon received one vote for representative in congress. U. S. Senator Frederick C. Walcott received the highest number of votes of the republican candidates and Miss Carolyn C. # ANOTHER UNSOLICITED TRIBUTE FOR ALL-BRAN

Good news for sufferers from constipation

Mrs. Kiell sat down and wrote us a letter when she had proved ALL-BRAN a safe "sure-cure" for constipation. Read her voluntary tribute:

April 4, 1927

"I have been using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN for quite some time and I want to tell you how much I appreciate it. I have found it a sure-cure for constipation, and know it is a remarkable regulator for the stomach. After using it, my family and I certainly will not be without it. I have even sent so far as to send some of it to my mother in Poland, Europe."

Gratefully yours,
Mrs. Anna Kiell,
71 Wolcott Terrace, Newark, N. J.

Perhaps you know what a terrible affliction constipation is. Blighting wherever it thrives. Ruining health. Marring beauty. Causing headaches, back pains, foul breath, loss of sleep—indeed, leading to more than forty serious diseases.

But did you know it can be easily relieved by a pleasant cereal food? Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring relief. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal. Serve with milk or cream—fruits or honey added. Use in cooking. At grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

WHEN ZERO COMES

If you could reach in your crankcase

—you would feel how thin and watery a too-thin "winter oil" becomes after only a few miles of driving.

Many so-called "winter oils" do only half the winter lubricating job. Their extra-thinness gives you quick starting on zero mornings. But later when you speed up a little, the engine's heat thins them out still more. Before long many friction surfaces are scouring against each other and wearing out.

Gargoyle Mobiloil Arctic differs from most winter oils on one all-important point. Mobiloil Arctic is always fluid at zero, so you get a quick spurt of oil to the remotest bearing the moment you start. But Mobiloil Arctic also has a rich, viscous "oiliness" that coats the working parts like a cushion and prevents excessive wear when the engine is hot.

You can buy Mobiloil from most dealers who are not controlled by gasoline refiners. The Mobiloil sign is a mark of the independent dealer.

"Suppose, Mr. Speeder."

Suppose that your child should leave its own yard
For a romp, or in search of a ball,
If its mother were busy, or had not the time
To step out and give it a call;
Suppose that some speeder should race down the street,
As though he were taking a dare,
And crush the life out of your little child—
Mr. Speeder, do you think you would care?

Suppose that your mother were crossing the street—
Your mother, now feeble and old—
And some reckless driver should knock her aside,
Leaving her lifeless and cold.
Could you find an excuse for this careless act?
Would you really think it were fair?
Now, putting yourself in this fellow's place,
Mr. Speeder, do you think you would care?

Suppose that a loved one you held very dear
Were the victim of some speeder's game,
And he laid in his bed, just day after day,
All crippled and helpless and lame
Suppose that he never could walk any more,
No longer your pleasures could share,
Just lie there and suffer, day in and day out,
Mr. Speeder, do you think you would care?

Oh! how little you think of the other man's pain
In your lawless pleasure and greed
How little you care what it costs someone else
When you drive at your daredevil speed.
Should this trouble occur in your family some day,
For you and your loved ones to share,
You'll lessen your speed, and you'll take time to think—
And then, Mr. Speeder, you'll care.
—Author Unknown.

Discontent

Down in a field, one day in June,
The flowers all bloomed together,
Save one who tried to hide herself,
And drooped that pleasant weather.

A robin who had flown too high
And felt a little lazy,
Was resting near a buttercup,
Who wished she were a daisy.

For daisies grew so trig and tall!
She always had a passion
For wearing frills around her neck,
In just the daisies fashion.

And buttercups must always be
The same old tiresome color;
While daisies dress in gold and white,
Although their gold is duller.

"Dear robin," said the sad young flower
"Perhaps you'd not mind trying
To find a nice white frill for me,
Some day when you are flying."

"You silly thing," the robin said,
"I think you must be crazy,
I'd rather be my honest self,
Than any made-up daisy.

"You're nicer in your own bright gown,
The little children love you;
Be the best little buttercup you can,
And think no flower above you.

"Though swallows leave me out of sight
We'd better keep our places,
Perhaps the world would all go wrong
With one too many daisies.
"Look bravely up into the sky,
And be content with knowing
That God wished for a buttercup
Just here, where you are growing."

The Radio Bug

Since Brother bought a radio
Things are on the blink,
The dishes pile up mountain high
Out in the kitchen sink,
For Mother doesn't give a hoot
As long as she can hear
The talks and music coming in
From stations far and near.

And oh! the meals she serves us,
That used to be so good,
Now she does not care a bit
As long as it's just food.
For when she puts before us
Some sickly, half-baked pie,
She yells "Now hurry up, I want
To listen in to WGY."

It's two o'clock each morning,
When she staggers into bed.
Then takes aspirin for breakfast
'To ease her aching head.

She went to telephone a friend,
Just the other day.
And asked the startled operator
For number KDKA.

Yes, since Brother bought a radio
Things are on the blink;
It's good we have prohibition,
Or poor Pa would take to drink.

ATTENDS BROOKLYN CHURCH MEETING

Dear Social Corner Member: One and all, oh, didn't we have a good time at East Brooklyn and such a nice dinner. Bur got von all a bit nutty, but we will forgive her this time. I only wish I could attend all the meetings. I was able to go to this one through the kindness of Alta Tude.

Through the kindness of a friend I was able the next day Nov. 1st to attend a meeting at the Old Trinity Episcopal church at Brooklyn. Every year on All Saints day the old church doors are open and many people came from near and far to attend some coming 150 miles and think the time well spent.

The church is 150 years old or more. The prayer book and bible were given to the church in 1770 and 1771, and the communion service was given by Queen Anne before the Revolutionary war. They are in good condition and kept under lock and key. Every All Saints day they are brought forth and used. The choir from St. Albans at Danielson rendered finely the old hymns which were sung so long ago, probably by members who now lie in their last sleep back of the church. Their descendants gather every year to worship where their forefathers did so many years ago. The high straight-backed wooden seats high doors to the pews which fasten as you go in and hewed wooden posts supporting the gallery, then so called, are some different from the easy reclining seats now in our modern churches.

I think at that time the people were very sincere in their religion, maybe not any more than they are today, but things sure were carried on in a much more straight laced way then they are now. Two years ago I attended the meeting and one little old lady was there and stood upon the seat of her family pew before the service looking out of the window on the graves back of the church. A generous donation was taken for the support of the church. J. Brown who lives quite near, gives the church and yard nice care and has everything in readiness for these yearly meetings.

Once in a while the church has to open for a funeral for some of the descendants who are brought from afar to be laid in the old cemetery. Many who were slaves are also buried there. They used to have to sit in the gallery at service; really not much comfort could they have taken in those high-backed, narrow wooden seats. I think maybe they were glad when Sunday was over in those days, and maybe not. Well, I was sure glad to go and hope it will be my privilege to go again some time. I would say to all the Corner members that they would not be sorry if they would attend these meetings, which are held the first day of November each year.

Well, now back to modern times. I am still at my old job making squash pies. I made eight last Saturday and eight the Saturday before. They don't last at all, for some reason.

Such a jolly crowd as the Social Corner is. If I only had room, I would gladly have them at my house; but, never mind, maybe Bug and I will find a place and time to have them next spring or summer, and if we do I hope as many will be there as was at Brooklyn.

As ever, I am, and always will be,
MA OF GREENE GABLES.

TO RESILVER MIRROR.

Dear Corner Members: Some wished to know how to resilver a mirror. Here is a good method. First clean glass and allow it to dry thoroughly. Next cover the back with mercury or quick silver and apply a sheet of unwrinkled tinfoil, smoothing out all bubbles with a squeegee roller. When this is dry cover back with one or more coats of shellac, varnish or paint to protect the silver.

If you follow these directions you will have no trouble keeping your tables, sink, or your drain and cutting boards white. First scrub the regular way with hot water and soap. Then to one pint of boiling water add 1 cup of vinegar and scrub while the mixture is hot. This is Uncle Sam's recipe for keeping the army messtable white.

Returning tarnished gold: Put the lace or trimming on a clean piece of linen, take a soft brush, old tooth brush, dip it in good alcohol and apply to the lace. After brushing it gently take a soft piece of linen and rub it dry.

To remove red ink stains from white goods, pour melted suet over the stain, let stand 20 minutes, then wash in luke warm water with a good white soap, gradually increasing the temperature of the water until hot enough to remove the grease. This leaves the material a snowy white.

A little vinegar added to the water in which meat is boiling will make it more tender.

Hard canned peas, run them through the food chopper, mix with milk and a few bread crumbs, add seasoning. Bake 20 minutes.

If you have no regular piano polish in the house use a clean chamois and a little machine oil. This will remove all finger marks and produce a good gloss. It is also good for covering fresh scratches.

Fish may be easily scaled by dipping first in boiling water.

ETHELYN.

APPROPRIATE CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Dear Social Corner Members: The most useful gift I had last year was a book filled with gummed labels. It was tied at the back with a loop of pink ribbon and set in a pretty cretonne case. The labels, in strong, dark blue type, were ready to stick on anything you can imagine, whether it belonged to the pantry, the medicine chest, the sewing room, the store room, the desk or the tool closet. Not the least useful of all was the last page, devoted to labels which read, "Poison," "Shake Well" or "For External Use Only."

When looking for a small gift for a man or boy why give him a twine-box for his desk. It may be round or square, of wood or pasteboard or decorated in any way which you be able to compass. But if it is strong, and has a generous hole in the top through which at any time its owner can pull as much string as he wants, and if a serviceable pair of scissors is tied to the boy, he will surely "love the giver." I suppose everyone knows a twine ball will unwind smoothly to the last yard if one begins to unwind on the inside.

For an invalid friend a balsam-fir pillow will be as grateful as a breath from out of doors. Almost any material will serve as a case on which a design of pine cones and needles may be stenciled. Balsam fir is the kind to use and as this is the regular Christmas tree you can always get them even if you do not get a chance to go into the woods. After the pillow is put in the case bind the edges with green leather fastened with a cord of russet leather, drawn in and out like long stitches tied in knots at the corners.

IMOGENE GRAEF.

TOO BUSY TO WRITE.

Dear Social Corernites: I ought to be ashamed to belong to the Corner and not contribute even one line to its support, but I have been too busy even to look at a pen or a pad. I have a baby very sick in the hospital and another that keeps me busy at home. I have had little time to write but kept putting it off until now I think I really must do it.

I wonder if you have among your members a lady whose name is Nola Estelle Leffingwell. I am not asking out of curiosity. I have a little book of nursery rhymes that has her name in it and perhaps written in her own handwriting. Inside the cover it says: Nola Estelle Laffingwell, East Great Plain, Norwich, Conn., January 7th, 1913, Backus hospital.

The little book was given to me while I was in the hospital with a broken arm. I was about six years old at the time and I have kept the little book ever since. I should like very much to thank the lady for her thoughtfulness.

ANDY.

GREETINGS FROM ANN TENNA

Dear Cornerites and Editor: This is the Sunday before election. I see he old weather man is back on his job of having a dark, rainy Sunday, but the sun never failed us yet. I expect to be looking at the beautiful Quinebaug river in about a week or less, so I am a busy woman with 101 things looking me in the face all the time.

Aunt Jerusha: Think you are mistaken about your dates. My father and mother have been dead 23 years and C. P. G. passed away more than four years ago.

Aries: You are a Johnny on the Spot. You ought to be a reporter. I was glad to hear about the meeting at East Brooklyn.

Bella Dee: You ask for epitaphs for your collection. Here is one:
Here lie I and my two daughters
We died from drinking Chatham waters;
If we had stuck to Epsom salts
We wouldn't be a lyin' in these 'ere vaults.

Time is too precious this morning to be writing letters. Hoping that Hoover will win tomorrow, I will sign off for this time, with the best of wishes for all.

1926: Wasn't the weather man good to you? I thought of you many times, and wished I was one of the number.

ANN TENNA

USES FOR OLD SCISSORS

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: What beautiful weather we are having just now, considering how late in the season.

If you have an old discarded pair of scissors around the house don't ever throw them away. I have a pair and use them daily. Make them do lots of work for me where a knife can't be used. A person will be surprised how many times you want to use them. That is the time they come in handy. I use mine to cut rinds off my bacon, to cut fins from fish, to shred up lettuce for my salads and a thousand and one other things. They are much easier, for many times a knife is dull and won't cut. They are dandy to use in dicing pork for your chowder. I even cut my potatoes in small pieces with scissors, after slicing them.

I use them in cutting pimentos into various designs when I want something special for dinner. I can do it so much quicker and easier than when I use a knife. If you want to cut the pimentos into long shreds you will see how handy they are. I also find the kitchen scissors very handy to cut the undesirable cut side rind off beefsteak. If you will hang a pair on a nail or hook near the sink and always put them there after using you will see how quickly you can perform many an otherwise hard task. I use mine daily.

E. L. M.: Yes, I had quite a fright, for at first I could not tell which one was hurt. The patient is getting along as well as can be expected and still has the injured member in a sling although it was three weeks ago the accident happened.

MAWB'S LUNCHEON SET

Dear Editor and Friends of the Social Corner: Another of God's glorious mornings of sunshine and clear blue sky, with just enough cold wind to remind us of the colder days to come. It makes one glad to be alive, a beautiful morning such as this is.

Calla Lilly: My mother used to tell me when one talked to oneself they had money in the bank. Do you think it could be so?

Scottie: The crab salad hasn't had a bad effect at anytime, yet. You had gone before I had a chance to speak to you at our last meeting.

True Blue: We miss you. Hope to have you with us Tuesday.

Well, Christmas is just around the corner so I suppose most of us will be in a rush from now on to the happy holiday.

I am going to tell you of a luncheon set I made three years ago and it is still in use and the colors fairly bright. Mine is made on Indian Head cotton but could be made of any material.

First I drew my design and then traced it onto the material after straightening the goods. Then with wax crayons, such as children use for their color work, filled in the sections of the design. Mine happens to be a basket of conventional flowers in yellows, orange, blue, lavendar and green leaves. Press with a hot iron, with paper over the design, to set the color and smooth it up. Then with running stitches in the different colors outline the sections. The work really progresses very rapidly. It can be used on so many things for the home and for personal adornment. One of the large shawls in silk with a bold design is very beautiful, and a wall hanging now so popular, is very lovely.

I hope someone will enjoy working a crayon craft article either for Christmas or for herself.

With best wishes to all and sympathy for those who are ill or in sorrow.

CARING FOR IRON SINK

Dear Editor and Corner Folks: In my last letter I wished for a nice day and a nice crowd for our meeting at the home of 1926. We were favored with both and when added to these a nice roomy place, a smiling hostess, an abundant dinner and a pleasing program, it could not be called other than a successful party. Also there was the pleasure of meeting new friends and members from other clubs and it takes a keen eye to find a grouchy face at these meetings.

Rural Auntie: Sorry you got such a scare. You bet I am glad I am still in the land of the living and having a chance to shout for the Social Corner. Sorry you could not be at our last meeting, be with us next time if you can. What has become of Free Air? Never see her now!

In answer to E. L. M.'s request, How to care for a new iron sink will say my way is to keep it as clean and dry as possible. Every night wipe it dry and then put a thin coating of lard all over it until it stops rusting. Use coarse sand paper on all the rusty and rough places before putting on the lard. Kerosene, soap and hot water are best for keeping the sink free from grease but I find the lard the best protection from rust. The one I am using now has been in my care for 26 years and in use for 52 years and is as smooth as glass now. Do not let the rust get ahead of you and eat into the iron.

Whirlwind: Glad to read a letter from you. Zany and I are as usual. Were surprised this summer with a call from Elmer.

We sympathize with Cactus Blossom in the loss of her husband and with all other sisters and brothers who have lost dear ones. Best of wishes for all who are sick or in trouble from

TWO WEEKS IN "THE LAND OF SKY."

Editor and Social Corner Readers: After an undisturbed night's rest, we were up early, and prepared breakfast underneath the sheltering rock that had sheltered us during the night. After breakfast we betook ourselves to the summit of Mt. Guyot to feast on the unbroken view in either direction, as we stand upon the mighty and majestic top of the mountain.

Here no large trees strike root. No hearth is alight, humanity (aside from us) is an alien thing. Below we see dense forests of monstrous tulip poplars, monarchs of the forest. We look to the east and catch the first ray of the morning sun as it comes creeping over the top of Lufty Knob, 6,623 feet altitude; the highest peak in the Balsam range. On to the north stretches the chain of mountains streaked with mist and color and changing shadows with inconceivable measure of vastness. No one could look upon this scene and doubt the works of God. They lift the soul and lend wings to thought. We turn our eyes to the west, and see the Chilhowees rising up massive and splendid against the sky and farther away catch the outline of the distant Cumberlands. Turning again to the east we see a mist rising from the valley between the Balsams and Pisgah ridge, a vagueness fell upon the landscape, the farthest mountains receded into invisibility, the sunshine was languid and slumbering, a haze clothed the air in a garb of tinted folds. In a short time as the sun blazed forth from the far off mountains, the mist gradually disappeared. With the warming of the sun the moisture from the laurel and larger trees was soon dispelled that made traveling mo agreeale.

"I rekon hit air time tew start if we kakerlate tew dew any fishin' tew day. Hit air a right smart er way tew whar we airtew cast our hooks. Hit air a good day fur them speckle beauties tew be er bitin' so we'll fix our traps hayer er fore we start.

"Dew ye-uuns see that air puff of fog jist yender at the foot uv the Baisams? That air frum Lake Junaluska, whar the main branch uv the Big Pigeon cums frum an hit air most 3,000 feet up in the mountings. Yeou may think hit air down in a hole in the ground but hit air 2,000 feet up frum the valley uv the French Broad. If we dont' ketch some whoppers in that air lake or in the branch I air no prophet."

Mounting our horses we were soon winding our way around ledge and crag. We pursued for some time the tortuous course down deep gorges strewn with gigantic boulders washed by the wintry torrents into divers channels, overhung by cliffs hundreds of feet high, honey-combed with fantastic niches and rifts. We could but exclaim as we stopped to view the scene, O, the wonders and vastness of this mountain wilderness.

We soon left the bridle path and took a well traveled road that brought us to the branch, half a mile from the lake. It was a typical mountain stream with its falls, rapids and pools, an ideal spot for trout. Clouds soon rolled up over the top of Pisgah ridge hiding the sun, making an ideal day for trout fishing. Tethering our horses, we soon had our hooks in the water. The first to get a strike was our guide, and he was the first to land a trout, measuring 14 inches in length. Each one had his trout before reaching the lake; none measuring less than 10 inches.

At the lake we separated to fish by ourselves. It wasn't long before we had 16 lusty trout, the largest one was caught by Trew. Like this mountain country, showers come up quickly, and before we found shelter under an overhanging cliff, we were well drenched, putting a stop to fishing.

"As soon as ther shower air over," says Trew, "We'll make tracks fur old Bill Tilden's fur tew stay over nite."

Our provisions were getting short and the last of the corn blades were dealt out to the horses where we left them while fishing. The shower soon passed and we made a hasty start for the Tilden home, some 5 miles down the stream. The shower was but local and ere we had gone two miles the road was dry and dusty. It followed the winding of the stream through gorges of various widths.

All at once our horses pricked up their ears as if in a fright. A cloud of dust came up from over a rise in the road. Siding up to us, Trew says: "Hit air revenuers; they air on the way tew make sum pore honest man pay fur makin' an honest livin' agin the law."

Instead of the dust being made by the raiders, it was by a drove of 30 or 40 hogs of all sizes and colors.

"Them air haugs air ole Bill Tilden's an' I'll bet all the fish we hev got that he fergot tew tie knots in thar tails lass nite they they hev got eout on him!"

We arrived at the Tilden cabin just as the sun passed down behind the Great Smokies, 'mid a suffusion of gold and crimson colors;

"I'll bet most nothin' ole Bill don't know who I air. Ef he did he wouldn't stand thar with his fowlin' piece in his hand ready tew shute, as if we wer wor raiders." said Trew.

"Wal, wal, Bill, didn't know me did ye? Hain't seen me much lately; hev been over on the old "north state" side tew times afore this but off round Hendersonville and Chimbly Rocks, Old Sugar Loaf an tuck in Greybeard an' up as fur as Ridge Crest, whar the water divides, part goin' tew the salty Atlantic an' tother int the gulf so I air told."

"I hain't axed ye whar yew hev ben," said Tilden, "who air these fellers as ye hev with ye? Sumbedy tew pry inter our folks affairs here in the mountings?"

"No, no, Bill, they air folks frum the north tew view our mountings, an' they picked me up among others tew see they didn't git lorst," replied Trew.

"Wal, Bill, hev ye got some uv thet air ole corn likker left, seven year ole, more er less? Weuns air powerful dry and hungry tew boot. Heow air ye fixed fur pervisions fur weuns an' hosses fur the nite, an' a place tew rest our bones? We hev our supper long with us; look er these hayr speckle beauties; won't they make the pan smell uv fish? Gess other folks can share with us. Hit will be er change frum sow belly, I reckon."

"Yes, Jim, ye air an ole customer uv mine, an' a tuff one at that. We'll try an' put ye up as best we kin."

"Seen yur passel uv haugs down the road toward the Big Pigeon; reckon they wor lookin' fur sumpin ter eat. Didn't tie a knot in thar tails las nite, I reckon, so tew keep 'em in ther pound," added Trew.

Mr. Colt asked why he didn't raise the kind they have up north, with short noses and large plump bodies, that will 300 or 400 pounds.

"Wal, that er would be a loss uv money shud one uv 'em big ones git drownded or fall inter a gulch or over er cliff. Thar air a differ tew them 300 pounders tew one that weighs 125 pounds. Jist think uv the surplus bacon yen'd hue ef one er them big ones wor lost," explained Tilden.

While the guide was caring for the horses, we introduced ourselves to Mr. Tilden and answered many questions about the north, and if any of us knew General Burnside; as he said he "fit with him at Knoxville and helped him tew lick them air consarned rebels who tried tew conscript them mounting folks inter the Jeff Davis army."

After a wash at the spring house, we were ready for supper of trout, accompanied by some of Mother Tilden's corn pone and rye and Indian doughnuts with good coffee. After supper we seated outside of the cabin and listened to Mr. Tilden's experiences during the early part of the rebellion which I will tell the readers of in my next article, also of our sleeping accommodations, not forgetting to tell you of the "gander pull."

TAKES PLEASANT TRIP.

Dear Sisters and Members of the Social Corner: I was asked by a member who lives in Norwich, to write something about myself. I will tell about my trip to Vermont With two of my pals we left the small fishing village in a large touring car bound on a vacation of a week in Vermont and New York state. It was on a Friday morning in September with the sun sinking fast. The green touring car left the village with one of my pals behind the wheel with a cigar in his mouth and the other pal at his side with plenty of road maps in his hand, and a lonesome and happy fellow in the back seat.

The first night at the hour of 10 o'clock we made Webster, Mass., as show was getting out and the streets were crowded with movie fans. Putting away the car in a garage and making for the Main street hotel to rest we found a radio giving out the baseball scores and found that the Yankees had won another game.

We got a good night's rest and made an early start for the White mountains. After putting away a wagon load of Johnny cakes and coffee,

The next night, before dark, found us in Plymouth, N. H., hitting the hay again early, as the mayor takes away the sidewalks at 9 o'clock.

The next morning we put in some gas and oil and started for the Lost River. No one has found the river yet. Before reaching the Lost river we saw the Old Man of the Mountains and a large chain put around his head to hold h togethe. It was put on by a man from Boston who risked his life and put the chain around the Old Man. It was a pretty sight to see a face in the mountain. We got a drink of water in a large brook there. It was so clear that you could take a shave.

Starting off again for the Lost River we had to go up a long hill. The driver had the old throttle down to the floor and the car was only moving. Half way up the hill the engine stopped. The driver said, "Give it a turn." My pal got out to give it a crank and found the engine was still going, making no noise. It is the change of air that did it. No one would believe it until he climbs that long hill of 4 1-2 miles. Reaching the top at last we went to find the Lost River but it was no use. After running up and down ladders for two hours we met a fellow from Providence who joined the party and took pictures. Had a great time.

Jumping into the green car again to see more of the country we saw the cows eating on the hillsides. We came to a large camp outside of New Hampshire. The name was Red Top. There were little huts to stay in for the night, two beds in each one. Singing was songs and playing a banjo half the night, we did not get much sleep. It was after 3 o'clock when we closed our eyes.

The next morning, Monday, as the fog was hanging over the hills we started out for Vermont. Before the sun went down and darkness was coming fast we stopped at a small town in Vermont. It takes the mail four days to come there from Boston. There is a movie picture show house there and plenty of horses on the streets. We were lucky to find a large house where a sign on a tree read "Tourists." Putting down our names on a large book, we said good night to the lady. The alarm clock went off at 7 o'clock in the morning.

My friend asked the lady where we could get our breakfast in town. "I think I can give it to you fellows all right." While sitting down at the table waiting for the Vermont food, in came an old lady around the age of 90 years, who was quick on her feet. She said, "Gentlemen, how do you want your eggs, the sunny side up?" "All right," we said, "bring them in." They came. After putting them away the smart lady that was on her way toward the 100 mark, came in with a large plate of Vermont Johnny cakes. We sure did eat plenty and asking for the bill, only $1.50 for three. Some cheap.

It was raining hard and only three drops would wet a fellow. We started out and went over the Bear Mountain bridge, down around West Point through Glen Falls, N. Y., making Bridgeport that night at 12 o'clock from 8 in the morning. That was on Saturday and we had all day to get home on Sunday. Taking our time we reached home on Sunday afternoon.

On the trip of six days we traveled 1300 miles and no blowouts, or engine trouble. Not so bad for a Ford auto. We were so happy to take our first trip by auto through three large states. Will close by saying good bye. Until you members hear from me again.

SHOOT AGAIN.

AN INTERESTING DRIVE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I wonder if any of you have been over the Ten Rod road near Noose Neck inn. It is a nice ride. Instead of going into Moosup we went straight ahead past Chop Mist hill inn and at a wayside store at the next four corners we bought delicious individual chicken and pork pies and squash and custard pie. We then went through Chepachet, West Gloucester into Putnam, then down to Danielson to Norwich and home.

Lauretta: We wondered where you picnicked?

Nella M: No, I did not recognise you. Wish I had.

Now every one remember the next meeting of Club No. 6 will be at the Grange hall at North Stonington on Tuesday, the 20th, with Lauzette as hostess. So come all who can. Bring your dishes and something good to eat.

JOINS THE CORNER

Dear Editor: I have been reading the letters of the Social Corner for a long time. Last Wednesday I was a guest at the meeting. I enjoyed the day so much I want to be a member. My pen name will be

THE IDEAL HOME.

Dear Social Corner Editor: This is what Rachel Dunaway Cox writes in a New York paper and I find it a very useful recipe to follow:

"Autumn days are apple days, and whether a housekeeper markets along the clattering streets or push cars under the "L" or takes a capacious basket in the same car which supplied her great-grandfather's cider barrel, apple days waken old memories and set new inspirations to work. Apple Cobbler, such as Aunt Hepsebah used to make; a strange unfamiliar pudding with a meringue like the sunrise sky, these and all the other everyday homey dishes answer the call of gnarled old apple orchards dropping their fruit over stones covered with poison ivy.

"During apple days culinary ghosts walk. There was, we remember, the lively shades of a delicate long forgotten apple trifle landed by one of the ladies. It first saw the light of day, she said, in an old cook book printed in the days when S's were made to look like first cousins to F's. No doubt its genealogy then was even quite cobwebbed with antiquity.

"There are different kinds of apples. For a sauce which the apple breaks up in cooking use a Twenty Ounce, a Rhode Island Greening, a King or a Wealthy. For a pie, use a King, a Spitzenberg, a Jonathan or a Wealthy. For baking, when the apple is to be cooked whole, use Rome Beauty, Spitzenberg or a Jonathan. For preserving or for serving in a syrup, when it is important that the apple retain its shape, use a Rhode Island Greening, a King or a Spitzenberg. For an apple salad when soft fleshed fruit is desired use a MacIntosh.

Speaking of old fashioned homes with orchards, etc., I never thought of the difference between owning a home and owning a house, as if both phrases meant the same thing. Bruce Barton says "people use the words loosely." As a matter of fact, a man who pays rent all the while owns his own home, and many a family has saved successfully for a home to find at last they has nothing but a house.

"I knew one such case. To 'own their own home' became a perfect obsession with the family—a false god to which everything else must be sacrificed.

"To swell the sacred fund the father wore shabby clothes, yes, so shabby that his business progress retarded. The children were undernourished and two of them died. Life lost every vestige of sweetness in the driving struggle to scrimp and to pay.

"At length ambition was realized, they stepped through the door of the house on which the last cent had been paid. They had bought their house, but in the process they had destroyed their home."

What is the ideal home?

I should say, at least this is what Bruce Barton says, "A cozy place not too large.

"The Vatican has 15,000 rooms.

"The Pope could, if he would, sleep every night for 40 years in a different room. The winter palace at Petrograd is so vast that once when repairs were to be made on the roof, peasants were found living there in wooden shacks, their existence unsuspected by the glittering tenants underneath.

"But these places are not homes. The turtle does not construct a shell tentimes larger than he needs; the bird does not spread her nest across a whole tree top merely because there happens to be material at hand. Only man commits the error of building a house too large to be a home.

"The ideal home is a place of rest. One can rest in a room simply furnished, but not in a department store or a museum. You would not fill your home with warring visitors. Do not crowd it with pictures, bric-a-brac and "souvenirs" that jar and clash.

"And the home is a place of peace, a place where the soul is restored. Where a few pictures suggest the fragrance and healing of out of doors; where good books lift the tired mind out of itself into the companionship of the wise and great of all ages. Where love and sympathy conquer care.

"The cave man who first piled stones together into a rude hut did it to provide a shelter for his most sacred possession, the sacred fire. There is a sacred fire in every real home; an altar to restfulness and forbearance and love. The man who can claim that altar, whether the shelter built about it be a mansion or only a single room—he, it is who owns his own home."

I never read a better description in my life of owning a home than this one by Bruce Barton and I felt that I must pass it along.

FLANK STEAK DINNER.

Dear Members: The following is a reasonable dinner, costing only $1.25 to make.

Flank steak is sometimes called skirt steak. Butchers in the eastern part of the country make a distinction between the two. The quality of the meat is about the same. Flank steak must be either broiled or stuffed and baked. Some people like it fried with onions. It is not a fancy cut but the meat is juicy and if cooked right or properly cooked is very tender. To stuff a flank steak have the butcher make a pocket in it. Make a dressing as follows: One cup of bread crumbs, one small onion, minced fine, salt, pepper, a piece of butter or melted bacon fat or salt pork fat, celery seed or sage for flavoring. Many people prefer the celery seed. One egg should be added to this quantity. Stuff and skewer together. Put two very thin slices of lemon over the top of the flank steak. Place around it several slices of your canned tomatoes and butter on top. Put in a quick oven and bake 30 minutes.

When a flank steak is baked this means that it is both economical and convenient to bake the rest of your dinner. This means the heat of the oven is doing all your cooking.

Scalloped Potatoes: These should go in the oven at least ten minutes before your steak. Wash, peel and slice five medium sized potatoes. Butter a baking dish, put a layer of sliced potatoes, brush over with a little melted butter, and add a little parsley, with minced onion if your family do not object to the taste of onion in the potatoes. On every second layer add bread crumbs, salt and pepper to taste. When the pan is 3-4 full cover with milk and put in the oven to bake.

Tomato Salad: Sliced tomatoes served with a small quantity of dressing.

Boiled Blackberry Pudding: One pint of blackberries drained from can, 1 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cold butter, one-half cup sweet milk, one-half teaspon of mace, one heaping teaspoon of baking powder, 2 eggs, well beaten separately, and 1 cup of flour. When the batter is mixed, add the blackberries, folding in carefully. Bake in a buttered pan 30 minutes and serve with fruit sauce.

Baked Egg Plant: Cut egg plant in two, lengthwise, with a very sharp knife, scoop out as much meat as possible. Boil until tender, salt and pepper to taste and mash. Add 1-2 cup of bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons of milk, and a lump of butter the size of a nut. Put this in the shell of the egg plant. Sprinkle cheese over the top and put into oven ten minutes before your steak is done.

GUESS WHO.

FILLED COOKIE RECIPE

Dear Social Corner Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I sincerely hope that you won out on your vote. Anyway, "Three Cheers for Hoover," our newly elected president. I hpe it spells continued prosperity for the U.S.A.

Election day has been uppermost in all our minds for these past weeks, so now that it is over, perhaps we can think of something else.

For instance: how would you like to try this recipe for filled cookies? 1 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1-2 cup butter, 1-2 cup of milk, 3 1-2 cups of flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 2 teaspoons of cream of tartar, 1 teaspoon of vanilla—for the filling—1 cup of chopped raisins, 3-4 cup of cold water, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 large spoon of flour. Boil until it thickens, then cool, cut cookies thin, put filling on center of one, make slit in another cookie, and place on the top of the filling and bake in a quick oven.

Sweet potato Pie: Boil enough sweet potatoes to make a large cup of pulp when mashed. While steaming hot stir in one egg yolk, beaten, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon of butter, pinch of salt, one quarter teaspoon each of cinnamon and ginger and 1 cup of milk. Add also a little grated lemon rind or extract of lemon. Mix thoroughly. Bake in one crust. Make a meringue of the white of the egg, same as for a lemon pie.

Hope that all the sick and shut-ins are better. Best wishes to all members and hope all have a joyful, happy Thanksgiving.

ECLIPSE

RECIPE FOR RED PEPPER TEA

Dear Social Corner Folks: Did you ever make red pepper tea? It is the best ever for stomach ills. I take a scant teaspoon of the dried seeds, put them in warm coffee cup with sugar or saccharin tablet and pour hot boiling water slowly over the mixture. Sip by the teaspoon full.

Try finely shredded red or green pepper in your next macaroni. Use about 1-4 lb. of cheese just the same. The variety is the spice of life. I am frying red pepper on toast now for my supper.

I got a newspaper from Maine with Home corner on one page with good game recipes and others. Oh, Home Sweet Home.

SEVERAL EPITAPHIC RHYMES

Dear Editor: Some one asked for Epitaphic rhymes. I submit these.

To my cow—
"The cow stood on the railroad track;
A train came round the bend,
She never had been hit before,
But she got it in the end."

To Rover—
"This is the tale of my dog, Rover.
When he lived he lived in clover.
When he died he was dyed as sable
And he looks it as well as he able."

Epitaph—
"He was a thorough anti-hick.
Who always with care was dressed.
But he put on spats and carried a stick
In a little town out west.

Here in his little trail-side tomb
He lies in his dreamless rest.
He was heard to use the phrase "than whom"
In a little town out west.

No blast his reputation mars
And even he did his best.
But he broadened his "A's" and dropped his "R's"
In a little town out west.

"There lies the body of Eliza Pratt
She ate so much she grew too fat.
There a lesson we should heed.
Temperance in eating is what we need.

"This is the tomb of Susan McGuire.
The art of balance she could not acquire.
Tight-rope walking she did aspire.
Now her soul has gone up higher."

Potato salad: Line a dish with lettuce leaves, then diced cold boiled potatoes, then string beans and pour over the following dressing: One tablespoon made mustard, 2 tablespoons sugar, small piece of butter, one-half cup vinegar, 2 eggs. Boil vinegar and butter together; beat eggs, sugar and mustard together and add to boiling vinegar. When cool add 1-2 cup milk or cream.

Please report if you like it.

Burgess Bedtime Story

A Joyous Fright

When we are most beset by fear
It happens joy is often near.
—Old Mother Nature.

Rusty the Fox Squirrel, hiding in the deserted home of Johnny Chuck, was becoming more and more convinced that Reddy Fox really had gone away. Not since he had heard the faint barking of Reddy, as if he were a long way off, had Rusty heard a sound to indicate that Reddy was anywhere around.

"He must have gone away," said Rusty to himself. "I don't believe that he would have patience enough to keep hidden all this time. No, sir, I don't believe he would have patience enough."

Which shows how little Rusty really knew Reddy Fox. Reddy was hiding right within two jumps of the back entrance or the front entrance to that Chuck house in which Rusty was hiding. Not only was he there, but he intended to stay there for the rest of the day if necessary. Reddy has no lack of patience when there is a good dinner to be obtained. How Reddy would have chuckled could he have known what Rusty's thoughts were. Things were working just exactly as he had hoped they would.

Reddy was so intent on watching those two entrances that for once he failed to keep watch elsewhere. So he didn't see Bowser the Hound trotting across the Green Meadows. He didn't see Bower until suddenly Bowser stepped out of the bushes along the old fence almost in front of the front entrance to that Chuck house. Bowser saw at once that some fresh digging had been going on there. He didn't see Reddy, lying flat in the grass and bushes. He walked straight up to that hole and gave a mighty sniff.

Now, just at the very instant that Bowser sniffed Rusty the Fox Squirrel had started to come out. He had made up his mind that the way was clear. So he was just making ready to poke his head out when Bowser thrust his nose in and sniffed. If there had been room Rusty certainly would have fallen over backward. Never had he had a worse fright. It sent the cold shivers all over him. At first he couldn't think what it meant. He couldn't believe that Reddy Fox could sniff like that. But it was only for a moment that he was in doubt. Then he heard the great deep voice of Bowser the Hound as Bowser picked up the trail of Reddy Fox.

Such a load of anxiety as Rusty the Fox Squirrel dropped right then and there. Faintly he could hear that great voice, and all the time it was growing fainter. That meant that Reddy Fox was running and Bowser was running after him, baying as only Bowser can. Rusty was as joyous now as he had been frightened just a moment before. He rushed up the front hall and, without hesitating an instant, he poked his head outside. Then he raced over to the fence, climbed the fence-post and sat on top of it. There he could see. Far over toward the Old Pasture was a red spot and it was moving very fast. He knew it was Reddy Fox. A little farther back was Bowser the Hound, running with his nose to the ground and sending his great voice ringing across the Green Meadows and up over the Old Pasture.

Rusty did a little dance of joy on the fence-post. Then he took a hasty but careful look in every direction. The way was clear. Nowhere could he see a member of the Hawk family. Bowser the Hound made it certain that there was nothing to fear from Reddy Fox or Mrs. Reddy, or Old Mag Coyote. Rusty jumped down from his post and started across the Green Meadows to the south. He had resumed the long journey he had started that morning.

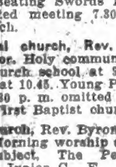
CHEVROLET

CONSTANT EXPANSION

—to serve Chevrolet owners better



SINCE January 1st more than a million new Chevrolets have been delivered to owners—making the Chevrolet Motor Company, for the second consecutive year, the world's largest builder of automobiles!

This outstanding achievement has been attained not only because of the quality and value of Chevrolet cars—but also because there has been a constant expansion of Chevrolet service facilities.

In order to bring these mammoth facilities of the Chevrolet factories to Chevrolet dealers and owners everywhere, there have been erected 26 huge parts warehouses in the principal centers of distribution. This expansion program is continually going on—for four great additional warehouses will be in operation by January first and seven more by the summer of 1929.

Into the service departments of all Chevrolet dealers, Chevrolet has brought special tools and shop equipment—designed under the supervision of Chevrolet engineers. This equipment definitely assures maximum speed and precision and the lowest possible cost in the performance of every Chevrolet service and repair operation—which are charged for on a flat rate basis.

Furthermore, all of these tremendous facilities have been made available to 15,000 authorized service stations manned by skilled mechanics, over 25,000 of whom have been factory trained to efficiently handle every repair operation on a Chevrolet car. In addition, there are over 4,000 other points where genuine Chevrolet parts may be obtained.

Uniformly efficient, uniformly reliable and within easy reach of everybody everywhere—this great service organization is maintaining at peak efficiency the fine performance for which Chevrolet cars have always been renowned.

We cordially invite you to come in and see how our service facilities reflect the influence of this great national service program.

RAILROAD SHARES SWEPT UPWARD IN MARKET FOR FIRST TIME IN MONTHS

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP)—The stock market raced ahead without stopping for block signals today as the "bulls" swept the railroad shares upward for the first time in months, piling up a total of sales the third largest in the history of the exchange.

Total sales were 4,936,100, almost duplicating yesterday's aggregate of 5,002,600. The overburdened ticker again reeled off tape for more than an hour after the close of the market. Disregarding a tightening of the call money rate and a new high record of brokers' loans, prices were generally whirled upward, Radio selling up 37 points at one time and a wide assortment of stocks closing 5 to 10 points higher. More than two dozen record prices for the year or longer were recorded.

The market easily absorbed the week end profit taking, and there were but a few small losses at the close. The call money rate again returned to 7 per cent as banks called $15,000,000 to meet week end requirements. A number of commission houses continued to advocate conservative buying in anticipation of further corrective reactions, although there seemed to be no widespread fear of a sharp break.

More gold was engaged in London bringing the total of the present movement above $30,000,000. Bankers were of the opinion, however, that money rates would not decline much below recent levels. The federal reserve statement was carefully scanned in brokerage circles for indication of a further movement to curb the flow of credit into speculative channels. A drop in the purchases of bills in the open market, and the releasing of government securities by the banks was interpreted in some quarters as indicating a disposition to check the flow of credit into stock speculation.

The days industrial news was generally favorable. Steel ingot production broke all records for October, the weekly trade reviews reported continued improvement, and a number of corporations published excellent earnings statements.

A number of brokers have shown a leaning toward the rails for some weeks, as a group less exploited than others in the protracted "bull" market and which has shown considerable improvement in earnings power with the wide gain in revenue freight this fall. Central of New Jersey soared more than 17 points, while Canadian Pacific and Union Pacific forged ahead 4 and 5 points to the highest prices in about 15 years. Nearly a score of rails pushed up 2 and 3 points.

The sharp upswing in Radio followed publication of a statement showing earnings more than double those of a year ago. It touched 270, a high record, in contrast to the year's low at 85 1-4, but lost more than half the gain in realizing, closing at 250, up 17 points. Coty was another spectacular performer, spurting up 12 points to a new high at 303, on reports of large current earnings. A 4-for-1 stock split was recently declared, and the new stock will be traded in next week.

The old General Motors stock went ahead about 3 points early in the session, then fell back nearly 6 points but closed only a fraction lower. The new stock, created by the 2 1-2 for 1 split, sold over the counter today at 91, and will be admitted to trading tomorrow.

General Electric, A. M. Byers, By-Products Coke, Liquid Carbonic, American Express, Archer Daniels Midland, McCrory Stores B, Jewel Tea, and Gold Dust climbed about 5 to 8 points to new peak prices, while Montgomery Ward was tossed up more than 20 points to a new record price and retained most of its gain.

Steel shares were in brisk demand, Vanadium mounting more than 6 points to a new top, while U. S. Steel climbed nearly 5 points to within a point of its high record.

Oils again encountered some profit taking, although Barnsdall issues stepped up 2 and 3 points to new highs.

In the commodity markets, cotton was again in demand as result of the government crop report, but encountered some realizing late in the session. Wheat eased but rallied somewhat on commission house buying. Corn improved as bad weather continued to hamper husking.

Foreign exchanges were quiet and generally firm.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Nov. 9—(AP)—Anticipating the substance of the government crop report, grain traders today hoisted corn and oats bids to above topmost prices heretofore reached this season. The report shows 16,000,000 bu less corn production than the average of latest unofficial estimates, with farm reserve stocks of corn about 6,000,000 bu., below trade expectation.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 3-8c to 1 1-8c net higher, with wheat 5-8c to 7-8c up, oats at 1-2 and 1-2c to 2-3c advance, and provisions, varying from 12c decline to a rise of 10c.

From the outset today, commission houses were active in purchasing corn future deliveries, being influenced by snow and rain over the corn belt and by correct belief that the government crop report due after the close would show reduced figures on corn yield. Besides, receipts of corn in Chicago today, 135 cars, were barely half as much as a week ago, country offerings were again scanty, and eastern shipping demand was good.

A forecast of further unsettled weather likely to interfere with husking and with the movement of new corn did much to stimulate corn buying today, and some cash handlers were showing a good deal of concern over contracts calling for early shipment. Industries and feed-dealers were also displaying more interest than usual. On the advance, however, selling on the part of holders who wished to realize profits led to something of a setback from the day's top level of prices.

To a large extent, wheat and oats followed the leadership of corn, but wheat was also influenced by improved export demand as well as by word of unwelcome showers in the sections of Argentina where the first of the southern hemisphere 1929 wheat crop is about ready to cut. Meanwhile, it was estimated that Europe today bought 1,300,000 bu. of wheat from North America. First sales of July delivery of wheat in Chicago were made today, and brought 1-2c over May.

Provisions averaged higher, helped by upturns both in hog values and in grain.

Surely if this is kept in your minds, you will all make an extra effort to be present Monday, to show your appreciation of what our boys have done for us."

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S COUNCIL

Among resolutions adopted at the recent annual convention of the National Council of Catholic Women held in Cleveland was one regarding the council's unalterable opposition to an immoderate athletic program for girls and boys, in track meets, exhausting match games, public exhibitions, as lowering to the dignity of womanhood, and inimical to the best physical, moral and mental development of motherhood.

The council received the conclusion that the necessary supervision for an appropriate costume for the girl and young woman in athletics may be met by: The holding of meets, games, contests for children, entered only with parents or others' consent, and without prizes, spectators, elaborate or costly clothing, according to season; long stockings and "bloomers."

The council condemned "trunks" and other such objectionable extremes of costume which are as inappropriate and unbecoming for women as are the particular forms of athletics with which they are especially associated. The National Council Catholic Women also disapproves attendance of girls at the prize fights and "Battle of the Sexes" contests as vulgar and dangerous to the morals of Christian women.

Palace Theatre.

The present cycle of motion picture production will have sea backgrounds, according to a survey recently made among several film producers. Paramount, always keen to give the public what it wants, and when it is wanted, has just completed filming "The First Kiss" co-starring Fay Wray and Gary Cooper. The picture opens here Sunday evening at the Palace theatre.

"The First Kiss" is adapted from the story, "Four Brothers" from the pen of Tristram Tupper. It has a sea background, the locale being the oyster fishing grounds in Chesapeake bay. Incidentally the entire picture was taken at the exact locale called for in the original story, it being St. Michaels, Maryland and adjacent territory.

Now sea stories or stories with a sea background are in extreme favor with the public. This fact was brought to light by Paramount's own system of determining what the motion picture fans want to see. Hence "The First Kiss" was planned and there are at least five motion pictures in which the sea is the base of the stories in preparation or actually now in production.

The two popular screen lovers, Fay Wray and Gary Cooper, have an excellent supporting cast in their first co-starring picture. Heading this list are Lane Chandler, Leslie Fenton, and Paul Fix. It was directed by Rowland V. Lee, who is noted for his directing of Pola Negri successes.

Many young actors were tickled pink when they received a call to appear in London to be used for a scene in "Bau Broadway," opening Sunday evening at the Palace theatre.

Proud and dressed to perfection the young men presented themselves bright and early at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Mal St. Clair, the scene director, looked the immaculate young men over and nodded approval.

"Now all on the back and not all naked," he ordered. "You are supposed to have been drunk all night, get your clothes dirty—rip off your collars.

And they almost did "come out" at that!

In "Bau Broadway" Dew Cody and Aileen Pringle are supported by a notable cast including Sue Carol, Hugh Trevor, James T. Jeffries, Heinie Conklin, Kit Guard and Jack Herrick.

house of Jacquelin Da Coppet, for $470,000.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Next Week At United Congregational Church.

All members of the Sodalitas are urged to attend the regular meeting to be held in the junior department rooms of the church school at half past seven o'clock on Monday evening. Work for the Christmas box for Ellis Island will be started and all attending will need scissors and thimble.

The Charitable circle of King's Daughters will meet Tuesday evening in the junior department rooms of the church school.

All officers, teachers and substitute teachers of the church school are asked to report at the Community house at half past six o'clock on Thursday evening for the monthly supper and conference.

The November meeting of the Woman's guild will be held at the Community house at three o'clock on Friday afternoon. Mrs. Jeanette W Emrich secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of America, chairman of the committee on World Friendship Among Children, etc. is to be the guest speaker, her topic, "The Changing World." All women of the community have been invited to this gathering and tea and a social hour will follow the program.

On Friday evening at half past seven in the Community house, all girls of the parish are to be hostesses to the girls of the city at a meeting when Mrs. Emrich, recently returned from most interesting experiences in Mexico where she was the guest of the government when the Mexican schoolmarms from American children were officially received, is to speak on "A Girl's World."

Breed Theatre

One of the greatest events of the picture season here will be the premier showing of Cecil B. DeMille's "King of Kings," at the Breed theatre tomorrow night. This picture has enjoyed a sensational success in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and Los Angeles, and has been more widely discussed by press, clergy and laity than any other motion picture since "The Birth of a Nation."

The causes of the popularity of "The King of Kings" are not far to seek. Among them are the world's greatest story, the reverent dramatization of the life of Christ; superb acting of eighteen stars; 500 well-known players and 5,000 extra people; the restoring of a historical period in buildings, scenes, properties and costumes exceeding in elaborateness even "Ben-Hur"; and above all a vision that truly realizes the infinite tenderness, humanity and uplift of the New Testament story.

Local theatregoers are looking forward with great interest to H. B. Warner's embodiment of the title role. Among the other characters portrayed are St. Peter played by Ernest Torrence, the Magdalene, Jacqueline Logan; Mary Mother, Dorothy Cumming; the Roman Centurion, Montagu Love; Simon of Cyrene, William Boyd; Mary and Martha of Bethany, Josephine Norman and Julia Faye. Other fine characterizations are those of the two Schildkrauts as Caiaphas and Judas, Victor Varconi as Pilate, Sam De Grasse as the Pharisee, and Theodore Kosloff as the servant of the High Priest.

"King of Kings," will be shown twice Sunday evening, the doors will open at 6:00 and the first performance will begin at 6:30 and the last show will start at 8:45.

The Swedish wild moose is threatening the country's match industry by feeding too generously on the aspen trees from which matches are made. Thus the Vaestervik Match company, in the central province of Smaaland, is asking the government for permission to kill the moose, regardless of existing game laws. For some years the factory has tried to raise these trees, but the attempts have been frustrated by the "monarch of the Swedish forests."

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

The state and town election in Norwich 50 years ago this week proved a republican victory, and according to The Bulletin, after election day, only one democrat and part of a greenbacker was seen in the streets for three days afterward. The same week a barn on Oak Ridge street (now Oakridge) was burned with its contents, about a ton of hay. Columbian Commandery, No 4, K. T., held a grand reception and ball that week in Breed hall. Extracts from The Bulletin of November, 1878, are as follows:

Monday, Nov. 4, 1878—The funeral of the Hon. Charles W. Scott will be at the house of John Popkins on Franklin and Otis streets, this afternoon. The remains are to be taken to Portland, Me., for interment.

A little son of Edson S. Bishop formerly of this city, now a resident of North Madison, was accidentally shot in the knee while his father was showing a gun to a visitor, a few days ago.

Congressman Watts and others will speak at Breed hall tonight.

The democrats of Preston nominated Capt Edwin Benjamin and Benjamin Lucas for representatives at a meeting Saturday.

The Hon. A. P. Tanner orated to a brass band and small audience of currency men in the Town hall, Saturday evening. After Mr. Tanner had proved conclusively, to his own satisfaction, that both the republican and democratic parties were on their bended knees, supplicating the greenback god for aid, some one near the door woke up and applauded. The lights were then turned off and the people went home. It was very funereal.

Tuesday, Nov. 5, 1878—The funeral services of the late Charles W. Scott were conducted by the Rev. L. T. Chamberlain at the residence of Mr. Popkins, corner of Franklin and Otis streets, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. There were a large number of former friends present, among them ex-Governor William Sprague of Rhode Island, and Henry Dyer, Esq., of Sprague. The body will be taken to Portland, Me., on the 4:20 steamboat train under escort of Sir Knights N. Douglas Sevin and James Walker. At Portland the remains will be taken in charge by a delegation from Portland Commandery.

The temperance men who met in the vestry of the Central Methodist church, last evening, resolved to support Jabez S. Lathrop, one of the republican nominees, and Edward Ray as their candidates for representatives.

Dr. Charles R. Lanma, formerly of this city, a graduate of the Free Academy and of Yale college, now assistant professor of Sanscrit in Johns Hopkins university in Baltimore, is to deliver a series of lectures soon in that city on the History of the Ancient Literature of India.

Don't give Colt a chance at the probate office! Run Mr. Blackstone's majority up above par! He deserves it.

Wednesday, Nov. 6, 1878—Mr. Henry Ruggles of Norwich Conn., who has been appointed United States consul at Malta, has just passed through London, on the way to his destination.—London Cor., Boston Advertiser.

The election yesterday passed off quietly and uneventfully. The polls were opened at 9 o'clock and closed at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. There was a sweeping republican victory in the town. Supply T. Holbrook was elected judge of probate over William L. Brewer, dem., and Increase W. Carpenter and James S. Lathrop were elected representatives from the town. Holbrook's plurality was 173 in the Norwich probate district. The vote for governor in Norwich was 1,579 for Charles B. Andrews, rep., and 861 for Richard D. Hubbard, dem.

Patrick Hinchey's barn was burned up on Oak Ridge street, Greeneville, about 2 o'clock this morning. As no water was available nothing could be done towards extinguishing the flames. The barn was small and contained about a ton and a half of hay. Loss small; no insurance.

Thursday, Nov. 7, 1878—Miss Maude Graner, supported by the New York Standard Theatre Co., played Cammille of the Fate of the Coquette, to a fair audience at Breed hall last night. It was one of the best dramatic entertainments ever given in the city, and the piece was admirably rendered in all its parts.

Tomorrow night the grand reception and ball of Columbian Commandery occurs in Breed hall and beyond question it will be the most brilliant and successful one ever given by this organization. The entertainment will be marked by so many and varied and attractive features that it is impossible to speak in faint praise of anyone in particular.

The first snow of the season began to fall at daylight yesterday morning, and continued falling in a dreary and dejected way through the day. It melted nearly as rapidly as it descended and last evening there was little on the ground.

Friday, Nov. 8, 1878—The Aurora Printing office, with machinery, presses, type, etc., was sold by auction yesterday afternoon. The bidding was between the Hon. W. L. Brewer, D. P. Conn, Charles Wilberforce Denison and the sale was at length made to the first named gentleman for $3,777.

The Rev. L. W Bacon narrated in the Park church last evening, some important facts in relation to the new religious movement in France, and of which the world in general knows very little at present.

The city has been decidedly quiet and passive since election. Only one democrat and part of a greenbacker has been seen since Tuesday—midnight.

Saturday, Nov. 9, 1878—Her Excellency Dr. Mary Walker—in her customary suit of trousers, ulster, slouch hat, umbrella and war paint—arrived in town last evening, and inaugurated a little procession of her own. An impertinent hackman asked her if she was an invited guest to the Knights Templars' ball and she instantly withered him with a look.

At a meeting of the Norwich, New London and Watch Hill Steamboat Co., Mr. James Walker was elected president and general manager in place of Mr. Palmer Smith.

Tramps increase daily at the police station. The only known antidote to the nuisance is a free soup house and plenty of work.

The reform club open their reading room in Hurlbut building this evening, with appropriate exercises.

HEAVY FINES FOLLOW THREE LIQUOR RAIDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9—The seven persons arrested yesterday in the series of raids conducted by the police on alleged distributing places of liquor were in the police court this morning on two counts. In the case of Nora Potter O'Connor, 13 Methodist street, James Sexton, 40-42 Golden street and Carlo Recanata, 18 Smith street, each of the accused pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs on each count, the two men and woman paying into the court treasury about $415 each. In the cases of Joseph Poretta, 47 Summer street; Harry (Herman) Schuman, 24 Golden street; Oresti Piccentti, 802 Bank street and Joseph Chamberlin, 59 Moore avenue, continuances were ordered to Wednesday next.

This afternoon three more bootleggers were arrested. A raiding force, consisting of Detective Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh and Patrolmen George McCaskey and Dennis Murphy, went first to the residence of Peter Dymerskty, 307 North Bank street, where Dymersky was arrested on two charges. At the premises 15 Atlantic street, John Fenn, alias Gae Esposito, was arrested on a double charge. The final raid was on the home of Frank LaFemina, 154 Shaw street. He also was charged on two counts and a large quantity of liquor, principally beer, was seized as additional evidence against the accused. The liquor was in such quantities that the service of a motor truck was necessary to bring the contraband to police headquarters. LaFemina, who has been arrested before, was until recently doing business at Fort Neck. When he moved to the Shaw street house, his reputation made it known that he had simply transferred his business from one section of the city to another and the uniformed stool pigeons, who, it is said, were former patrons of LaFemina, followed him to the new location where they obtained the evidence desired. Dymersky, Fenn and LaFemina furnished sureties on their respective bonds of $1,000 and will be presented in the police court tomorrow.

OAKDALE DRIVER'S CASE GOES OVER TO FRIDAY NEXT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9—George R. Holmes, Oakdale, who was arrested yesterday on Broad street extension by Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, reckless driving and failing to stop when given a signal, and whose arrest only resulted when several shots were fired at the tires of the fleeing car, was in court today, but the case was continued to Friday next. The police auto, which was wrecked by being forced off the highway when Holmes realized possible capture, is now undergoing repairs at a service station.

Another Oakdale man, Leo Pevtrowski, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolmen Lawrence Fardy and George McCaskey, and also charged with driving under the influence. He was locked up and will be presented in court tomorrow.

YOUNG FISHERMAN DIES WHILE RETURNING TO PORT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9—Death came suddenly to Thomas Bonanno, 27, a fisherman, residing at 51 Smith street, last night, the young man succumbing to an attack of the heart, while he and his brother were returning to New London from the fishing ground, off Block Island. He is survived other than by his brother, by his wife, three children and his parents. Bonnano and his brother went to the vicinity of Block Island yesterday to haul nets and fish that their catch could be brought to port for sale today. While the boat was making her way through Fishers Island sound, Bonnano complained of feeling ill and went to the cabin to lie down. Before the boat reached port, Bonnano died. ### SPEAKER FROM INDIA ADDRESSES MISSIONS MEETING

The annual thank offering meeting fo the mission department of Park Congregational church was held Friday afternoon at the Hugh Henry Osgood memorial. In the absence of Miss Edith Bliss, Miss Alice Cogswell presided, and conducted the devotional service, using the 103rd psalm.

The speaker was Dr. Robert Hume of international fame, born in Bombay of parents who went to India in a sailing vessel in 1839. He called himself an Indian brother. He told of changes in India. Years ago the only ice in Bombay came in sailing vessels from America, 60 per cent. being lost en route. Now by going to the factory in Bombay one can buy ice at the same price prevailing in Boston. Fifty years ago Dr. Hume was asked to marry Indian girls of 10 and 12 years of age. Now seldom ever are they married under 20 years of age. Indian people are a very religious people. A person is respected more for his religion than for his education or money. Why do they need missionaries?

Dr. Hume then told of his personal work with his Indian brethen. He said my business is to help people get acquainted with God. Dr. Hume has had the privilege of influencing about 1,000 Indian people to accept Jesus Christ as their ideal. Another work of Dr. Hume as a missionary was to receive $25,000 from America as the initial sum to use in famine relief among 590,000 Indian people. Later this sum mounted into the millions. Another work was to build a large church in Ahmednagar, seating 1,500 people. At first a Congregational church, now a United church of northern India.

In closing Dr. Hume said the main thing is what is your personal relation to Jesus Christ. Do you wish to please him? Do you wish to do as he wishes you to do? Very well, show it whether with your domestics at home or in the community or in foreign land.

Following the address there was a short business meeting of the federation, the president, Miss Hannah Crowell, in the chair. It was voted to have Mrs. Henry D. Johnson and W. H. Douglass send a letter to Mrs. E. A. Harris in appreciation of her splendid service as a member of Park church choir. It was voted to assume one half the expense of a new stove for Miss Ruth Beebe of Trinity college, Athens, Ala., to use in her demonstration. Miss Beebe is one of the pledged projects of Park church.

The November meeting of the federation will be held at 8 o'clock next Friday evening and is for all the families of the church and congregation. Mrs. James E. Bidwell gave notice of a pancake supper to be put over by her group in the very near future. Mrs. W. Tyler Browne gave notice of the annual state meeting of the council of Religious Education to be held in Norwich beginning Nov. 21st.

PROFESSOR BACON'S LECTURE AT BIBLE SCHOOL CONVENTION

Of special interest to many Norwich people will be the series of six lectures to be given by Prof. Benjamin W. Bacon on "Jesus' Parables of the Kingdom," as a part of the program of the state Sunday school convention which is coming to this city Nov. 21-23. Dr. Bacon is Buckingham professor of New Testament interpretation in Yale Divinity school and is a recognized authority in his particular field. He has many friends and acquaintances in Norwich and vicinity who will take advantage of the opportunity to obtain first hand the professor's interpretation of his great theme. Dr. Bacon will give two lectures each of the three days of the convention, one in the morning and the other at the afternoon session.

A dozen other speakers of national reputation are listed on the program whose names appeared in a former issue of this paper. Wallace I. Woodin, secretary of the state Council of Religious Education, under whose auspices the program for the convention was prepared, is of the opinion that the enrollment of delegates to this year's convention will exceed that of a year ago when the sessions were held in New Haven. Two hundred and fifty churches are privileged to send delegates, and four voting delegates are allowed to each church school. Others interested in the educational department of the church will also be present from various sections of the state.

The program is designed to provide both inspiration and practical help for workers in the church school. To this end the state committee believes it has arranged the strongest program yet offered at a state convention. Many of the speakers and conference leaders are national authorities in the field of Biblical interpretation or religious education. The convention theme will be: "Achieving some fundamental appreciations in religious education."

COAST GUARD DESERTERS ROB N. Y. APARTMENT

John Robertson, 23, of 113 Amsterdam avenue, New York, and Clyde Edmonds of Chicago, who New York detectives say are deserters from the coast guard station at New London, are under arrest in New York on a burglary charge. With John Horgan they were caught as they were loading up a truck with goods stolen from the apartments of Robert Horatio Byrne and his bride, the former Marian Ethel Gould, who were married just a month ago and are on their honeymoon to Havana. Robertson and Horgan had formerly been employed in the apartment house at 7 East 56th street, the former as elevator man and the latter as doorman. Theft of $1,500 worth of clothing and jewelry a week ago from the apartment of Percy Douglas on the eighth floor of the building is also laid to the trio.

On Robertson's wrist the officers found a platinum watch on which was engraved "Percy Douglas." They also said that Robertson took them to his home and there they found other jewelry which tenants had missed. They also found a pass key which he said he had picked up in an elevator one day. Taken to the police station, the men waived examination, and in default of bail they were sent to the Tombs. Horgan and Robertson to await action by grand jury and Edmonds to be turned over to officers of the coast guard.

Later the superintendent of the apartment house entered an empty apartment to clean it out. There he found three fur coats, several dresses, a man's riding outfit and linens, all of which had been taken at one time or another from tenants in the house. These things he turned over to the police.

VETERANS' RELIEF MAKES TASK FOR RED CROSS

Although ten years have passed since the end of the World war, the American Red Cross still faces a huge task in veterans' relief, according to the annual report of the organization for the fiscal year just closed, says a statement issued by the Norwich chapter. The statement continues:

There are still 25,500 disabled or ill veterans in government hospitals, the report shows, for which the Red Cross is carrying on extensive relief activities. Services are maintained in the fifty Veterans Bureau hospitals, at Army and Navy camps and training stations, and there are twenty-seven Red Cross liaison representatives in Veterans Bureau regional offices.

The report shows a diversity of services including Red Cross direction of recreation work in all hospitals and assistance to the men in settling their bonus, insurance, and acompensation claims. Special assistance is given to the mentally ill in guardianship matters, and contacts with the families of veterans, where relief work is often necessary.

Hospital authorities state that the entertainment and recreation work of the Red Cross is of vital importance to the welfare of the patients Not only does it make less dreary and monotonous the long days in the hospitals, where many veterans will remain the rest of their lives, but it is said also to contribute materially to the successful treatments of cases and enhances the chances of many of them for recovery.

For the men in the service, the organization maintains a "field service" at the camps and training stations. These field workers provide recreation for the men in hospitals, and assist them with their family and other problems. They also give officials close cooperation in procuring accurate and dependable information about home conditions of men needing special attention.

Autumn Winds

The autumn winds ride hard and fast,
And strip the verdure from the trees,
Who bow, before the heavy blast,
And twist their limbs, in agonies;
And dry leaves scatter, thick, and cast
To rest in crannied nooks, at last;

High is their flight, and wild their song,
And weird, they sweep across the strings
Of Nature's harp, in cadence strong,
That mournful dirge of summer sings.
As Autumn flings her way along,
The paths which to the winds belong.

And yet I love their revelry,
These autumn winds, so bluff, so bold,
That leap in whirls of ecstacy;
Once more, before the year is old:
So pass you, in your pageantry,
You cannot blow too wild for me!

—Ethel Knapp Bekeman.

Arachne

I watch her in the corner there
As, restless, bold and unafraid,
She slips and floats along the air
Till all her subtile house is made.

Her home, her bed, her daily food,
All from that hidden store she draws;
She fashions it and knows it good
By instinct's strong and sacred laws.

No tenuous threads to weave her nest,
She seeks and gathers there or here;
But spins it from her faithful breast,
Renewing still, till leaves are sere.

Then, worn with toil, and tired of life,
In vain her shining traps are set
Her frost hath hushed the latest strife
And gilded flies her charm forget.

But swinging in the snares she spun,
She sways to every wintry wind,
Her joy, her toil, her errand done,
Her corse the sport of storms unkind

Poor sister of the spinster clan!
I too from out my store within
My daily life and living plan,
My home, my rest, my pleasure spin.

I know thy heart when heartless hands
Sweep all that hard-earned web away;
Destroy its pearled and glittering bands,
And leave thee homeless by the way.

I know thy peace when all is done,
Each anchored thread, each tiny knot,
Soft shining in the autumn sun;
A sheltered, silent, tranquil lot.

I know what thou hast never known—
Sad presage to a soul allowed—
That not for life I spin, alone,
But day by day I spin my shroud.

—Rose Terry Cooke

"Lots," was the answer. "If a horse is only slightly ill, he gives it tonic; but if it's seriously ill, he sells it."—Answers, London.

ARMISTICE ANNIVERSARY WAS WIDELY CELEBRATED

King George of England Joined With Thousands Upon Thousands in Ceremonies Around the Cenotaph—Wireless Carried Tribute to the Furthest Corner of the Empire—In the Compiegne Forest, in France, the American Army and American Statesmen Participated in the Armistice Day Celebration—The Day Was Celebrated Throughout Belgium.

LONDON, Nov. 11—(AP)—Under lowering skies and surrounded by a thin curtain of fog, King George today joined with thousands upon thousands of his subjects in the Armistice day ceremonies around the cenotaph in Whitehall.

For the first time since it was inaugurated, wireless linked the farthest corners of the empire for the tribute to the glorious dead of the World war. Thus men and women in distant dominions, colonies and protectorates, were enabled to stand close to those in the heart of England during the touching moments of remembrance made unusually solemn by commemoration on the Sabbath.

As Big Ben struck the eventful hour of eleven and a louder boom echoed from cannon the tense two minutes silence of other such anniversaries fell once more upon the world. There was neither sound nor movement in one solidly packed mass of persons from Trafalgar square to Parliament buildings. The king stood very still, a conspicuous and isolated figure with bent head before the cenotaph around which formed a hollow square of former service men and women. During the tense minutes, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin twice passed his hand uneasily across his eyes. Behind them and at the sides, soldiers stood rigidly and picturesque Indian princes stood with hands at salute.

For two minutes Britain hearts stood still in a profound expression of remembrance. A crash of cannon ended the spell and a rustling sigh of relief passed over the multitude. The religious service which followed was short and simple. Great crowds joined in singing hymns and then the royal party withdraw.

King George joined Queen Mary, who had watched the ceremonies from a window in the home office and their majesties drove back to Buckingham Palace.

STATE OFFICIALS ATTENDED UNVEILING OF WAR MEMORIALS

WEST HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 11—(AP)—Gov. John H. Trumbull and other state officials today attended the unveiling of a war memorial in connection with Armistice day exercises featured by a parade. Included in the line of march were the 103rd Regiment, the Foot Guards, American Legion posts and members of St. Francis orphan asylum.

CIG ARMISTICE DAY PARADE IN PARIS

PARIS, Nov. 11—(AP)—Thousands of persons today stood bareheaded and silent in the rain for a full minute after the stroke of 11 a. m. in Paris, as in all cities of France, in remembrance of those who fell in the war which ended ten years ago.

At the Arc de Triomphe the eternal flame, burning beside the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, was rekindled while President Dumergue and Premier Poincare reviewed the marching soldiers and sailors. Marshal Foch and Marshal Petain with Generals Debeoney, Weygand, Duball, Niessel and Nollet were among the war leaders present.

In the American churches in Paris the anniversary was commemorated by special sermons and other services. Representatives of the United States army, navy, the American Legion and the Legion auxiliary, as well as Americans who served with the French forces during the war, attended services in the American cathedral and later marched down the Champs Elysee receiving the salute of the French crowds.

Similar ceremonies were held in all French cities, including Strasbourg, Marseilles, Brest, Toulouse and Bordeaux.

IMPRESSIVE CELEBRATION IN MUNICH, GERMANY

MUNICH, Germany, Nov. 11—(AP)—The tenth anniversary of the Armistice was impressively celebrated today in this stronghold of Bavarian nationalism. Here as elsewhere in Bavaria the memory of the war dead was honored by the display of the national and Bavarian colors draped in black.

The religious service at the Warrior monument facing the army museum, which commemorates the 13,000 men of Munich killed in the World war, was attended by crowds which included members of military and veteran organizations, government and municipal officials and former leaders of the old Bavarian army. Prince Alfonse and Prince Louis Ferdinand represented the former royal house of Bavaria.

Over the American consulate general floated the Stars and Stripes at half mast.

HOW ARMISTICE DAY WAS CELEBRATED IN FRANCE

RETHONDES, France, Nov. 11—(AP)—The Stars and Stripes, the American army and American statesmen were conspicuous features in the tenth anniversary of the Armistice celebrated here in the clearing in Compiegne Forest where was signed the agreement that ended hostilities. It was more of a tribute to the men who had fought and died or were maimed than a celebration of victory.

Under a dripping sky that recalled the melancholy weather of November 11, 1918, a delegation from the Paris post of the American Legion, carrying their colors, were told by the mayor of Compiegne that humanity had incured an everlasting debt through the aid of the American forces in saving the world from autocratic domination.

A like debt, he said, was owed to Herbert Hoover for saving the people of northern France from starvation and to Frank B. Kellogg for assisting Aristide Briand to "outlaw" wars such as the great one which ended on this spot.

The celebrated dining car in which the armistice was signed, standing nearby under the shelter given by Arthur Henry Fleming of Pasadena, Calif., drew only a small part of the crowd which gathered for the ceremonies. Most of the spectators seemed more attracted by the picturesque detachments of Spahis, which form part of the new volunteer army of France. The whole ceremony seemed to indicate that war memories are kept alive more by respect for the dead and sympathy for the mutilated than by interest in an historical event.

DAY WAS CELEBRATED THROUGHOUT BELGIUM

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 11—(AP)—The tenth anniversary of the Armistice was celebrated throughout Belgium today with great solemnity and unusual splendor. Delegations of former allied combatants were entertained by the communal authorities of Brussels, Lieg and Mons when they arrived on Saturday.

Today they stood with colors flying at the ceremony in front of the tomb of the Unknown Warrior where King Albert, government and diplomatic representatives, and Belgian and foreign veterans deposited wreaths.

The two minutes of reverent silence were observed immediately after the royal family arrived at the tomb. The king deposited the first wreath on the consecrated spot where Belgian and allied officers had taken up their watch in the early morning. Americans, French, British and others followed him in placing floral tributes.

DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE OF THE McPHERSON CASE

LOS ANGESLES Nov. 11.—(AP)—A hidden chest, not filled with treasures, but containing documentary evidence which grand jury investigators believe will help to prove that thousands of dollars were involved in the dismissal of the Aimee Semple McPherson case by District Attorney Asa Keyes two years ago was being sought here today.

Evidence concerning transations of at least $100,000, said to be in the hands of the investigators, was reported to include both telegrams and letters exchanged between persons vitally interested in the evangelist's case.

Several checks for large amounts in addition to various bank records are asserted to have been turned over to the grand jury by William Parker and Arthur L. Marek newspapermen, who said they were given the documents by Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Mrs. McPherson, nearly three months ago.

Accused with her daughter of conspiracy to obstruct justice as a result of the kidnaping episode in which Mrs. McPherson disappeared at Ocean Park, and reappeared a month later in Douglas, Ariz., Mrs. Kennedy is said to have declared that while she never made a check out directly to the district attorney's office, she spent more than $100,000 in an effort to vindicate the evangelist.

Hundreds and sometimes thousands of dollars in cash were paid out, Mrs. Kennedy is said to have revealed for most of which she said she received no receipts. This information was given to the grand jury by witnesses.

The mystery chest now being sought by grand jury detectives is asserted to belong to the evangelist and there in is reported to be contained the evidence believed to be of prime importance when the case against District Attorney Keyes comes up Tuesday.

Keyes is scheduled to appear on charges of "wilful and corrupt" conduct in office along with several others who are charged with bribery in connection with dismissals in the Julian Petroleum corporate over issue cease.

The McPherson angle developed Friday when two newspapermen presented to the grand jure documentary evidence asserted to have a direct bearing upon the evangelist's case.

SIX SOVIET OFFICIALS WERE ASSASSINATED LAST WEEK

MOSCOW, Nov. 11—(AP)—Six soviet officials, including a woman, were assassinated during last week which saw a score of outbreaks against the soviet regime. The newspaper Pravda says that anti-soviet violence is growing daily, particularly in the rural districts where the grain collection and heavy taxation have been the rich peasants desperate.

The newspaper Izvestia today prints dispatches from various localities reporting the murder of officials, teachers and correspondents, the breaking up of meetings and the burning of soviet libraries. At Sciaroda a woman communist who was reading in the library was shot at through a window and was killed. Near Bylansk a driverless horse returned to the home of a soviet official. The official's wife found in the wagon the body of her husband, who had evidently been shot from ambush.

Poincare Forms New French Cabinet

M. Poincare Retains Premiership, But Abandons Post of Minister of Finance in New Cabinet.

PARIS, Nov. 11 —(AP)—Premier Raymond Poincare, back at the helm of government with an "armistice day" cabinet, indicated tonight that he planned to take an even broader part in post-war finance than the direction which has earned him the appelation of "Saviour of the Franc."

He informed President Doumergue tonight that he had formed a cabinet which could conduct the government and as he left the palace he said that he had relinquished the finance portfolio so that he could devote all his time to solution of financial questions and the coming reparation resolutions.

He admitted that he was likely to leave Paris soon, which was taken by newspapermen to mean that he intends to represent France on the committee of experts which is soon to take up final revision of the Dawes plan for reparation payments.

In forming his cabinet Poincare did what he said he would not do, take the responsibility without the co-operation of the radical party and other elements which had shared in his "national union" cabinet for two years. The radical party continued to refuse to permit its members to take part, and the premier solved the six day crisis without them.

The composition of the new cabinet was officially announced tonight as follows:

Premier (without portfolio)—Raymond Poincare.
Finance—Henri Cheron.
Interior—Andre Tardieu.
Foreign—Aristide Briand.
War—Paul Painleve.

MAN AND WOMAN HELD FOR MAIL ROBBERY

FORT WORTH Texas, Nov. 11.—(AP)—The little slips often made by criminals that lead to their undoing were discussed today by Fort Worth police in explaining arrests of a man and woman charged with the mail robbery of a Texas and Pacific train here Friday and the recovery of loot valued at $50,000.

Travis H. Wilson 25, and Miss Ottis Bridges, alias Ottis Griffin, 28, are charged with mail theft. Wilson was arraigned Saturday and his bond fixed at $10,000 which had not been made today. Miss Bridges is scheduled to be arraigned Monday.

The additional arrest of an accomplice is to be made, police said. The bandit left the train with a handbag, taken from a mail clerk, and was free to walk off with the big loot in a densely populated section of Fort Worth interested by the railroad tracks. Instead he stayed too safe and hid the money far up beneath a concrete viaduct carrying a paved street and street car line over the railroad. Police say it was a mistake.

A policeman found the grip of money, including all but $2,700 of the amount taken, and all in 5, 10 and 20 dollar bills.

The arrests came after police put a picked guard about the viaduct. Late the night of the robbery Miss Bridges appeared and climbed up the dirt embankment to the edge of the concrete structure.

Police learned that she lived about two blocks away, and detectives surrounded the house while others searched inside. While this was going on a service car drove in front of the house and stopped as though there to pick up some one. The car drove away but detectives ran to their cars and followed, catching the taxi down town, after the passengers had left it. The driver, escorted by plainsclothesmen, scouted downtown to find a man.

Within a few minutes the driver pointed out Wilson who was standing at a busy street intersection. He was arrested. According to police his shoes had recently been cleaned but bits of mud were still in evidence between the laces.

A friend of Wilson taken into custody in a roundup told police Wilson borrowed his car the afternoon of the robbery, explaining he wanted to have his hat cleaned. When arrested Wilson wore the hat.

Expel[illegible] From The [illegible]ational D. A. R.

Mrs. Mary P. Macfarland, Who Opposed the So-Called Blacklisting of Prominent Liberals.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary P. MacFarland of Hanover, N. J., who opposed the so-called blacklisting of prominent liberals by the Daughters of the American Revolution, today announced that she had received notice of her expulsion from membership in the national society of that organization.

Mrs. MacFarland is New Jersey state president of the American association of university women and an officer in the League of Women Voters. She was charged by the daughters with "conducting herself in a way calculated to disturb the harmony and injury of the good name of the national society, Daughters of the American Revolution" and was informed that the national board of management, at its meeting on October 31, had voted to expel her.

The society contended, according to the announcement made in Mrs. McFarland's behalf that she wrote and circulated letters, pamphlets and other material to various chapters and to a number of individuals in which she charged the president general and other officers with violating the constitution of the United States by endeavoring to suppress free speech, by blacklisting prominent citizens and by otherwise spreading propaganda "deprecatory to the institution."

Mrs. McFarland declined a summons to appear before the board, but submitted sworn evidence in support of her charges.

In a statement issued today Mrs. McFarland said she declined to make any appeal from the board's decision to expel her, since she was "quite content."

"I have protested against a policy of the National D. A. R. officers which is to the highest degree unAmerican, unintelligent and unworthy of the descendants of the men and women of 1776. They have been the credulous agents of hysterical professional propagandists and of certain army officers who would keep the people under military espionage and control, and who induced these women in defiance of public opinion, actually to advicate the continued use of poison gas.

"They clearly intimated to me long ago that they would be rid of me and sought to intimidate me. They have now sat solemnly in judgment on the indictment against them and have without any sense of humor voted to absolve themselves. The result is that I am simply added to the blacklist in the company of many of the finest men and women of the nation.

"The action of the society of the D. A. R. has no effect on me and I remain, as I was born, a Daughter of the American Revolution. My future service will be given to the blacklisted women's organization devoted to constructive patriotic work.

"I have had the support, not only of the press and of public opinion but also of multitudes of D. A. R. members who find themselves in a difficult position in a highly organized and militaristic machine in which they are liable to ruthless expulsion because allegiance to the society means unquestioning obedience to orders from the top down."

TWO AUTO ACCIDENTS NEAR STAMFORD, ONE FATAL

STAMFORD, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Two automobile accidents took one life and sent three others to a hospital here today. Police are tracing a New York registered machine which struck and killed John E. Bassett 56, while he was crossing a road. He was picked up under the wheels of an automobile driven by Jerry Merrill, Newark, N. J., who told authorities he was unable to stop after the man was run down by a New York roadster. Medical Examiner Crane said death was due to a fractured left leg and fractured ribs combined with alcoholism.

A passenger machine with three Negroes collided head-on with a trolley on the Post road, throwing the occupants to the ground. They are suffering from lacerations at the Stamford hospital, but are expected to recover. The crash threw one of the occupants from the rear seat through the front windshield. The machine was badly damaged and the front of the trolley wrecked. They were no passengers riding in the trolley.

RADIO FANS WERE CONFUSED BY THE NEW BROADCASTING ASSIGNMENTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(AP)—The dyed-in-the-wood radio fan, whose chief nightly pastime is to search the ether for a tinkle of music from some station he never before recorded was in his querriest mood tonight, for before him, as on the day he got his first radio set, lay the whole vast expanse of uncharted space represented by a half revolution of his radio dials.

Thousands of these indoor fishing excursions were under way in the metropolitan district, thanks to the federal radio commission which restocked the fishing pool through a reallocation of the wave lengths among the broadcasting stations of the country.

Nothing resembling what both the "fishermen" were having could be learned from representatives of the National Broadcasting company tonight, who said they had no information on the reaction of the radio public to the new allocations.

Early reports were that stations in the congested metropolitan district were separated more easily and some local stations were said to have been received much louder than heretofore.

Squeals and squawks of the reregenerative "blooper" marred reception in some instances, but these were expected to become fewer as the "bloopers" fan gradually builds up a new log to replace the one which became worthless last night.

COOLIDGE CITES THE NEED OF NAVAL PREPAREDNESS

In Addressing American Legion on the Tenth Anniversary of the End of the World War President Coolidge Stated That "World Standards of Defense Require Us to Have More Cruisers"—Declared That "To Be Ready For Defense is Not to Be Guilty of Aggression"—Rebuked Critics of American Isolation From the Old World.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—(AP)—President Coolidge tonight declared that the construction of more cruisers was needed for the adequate protection of the United States and its possessions.

Addressing a meeting at the Washington auditorium gathered under the auspices of the American Legion to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the end of the World war, the president emphasized that the United States in view of its geographical characteristics, treaty engagements and economic importance and in view of its lack of fueling stations and merchant ships capable of mounting six inch guns was entitled "to a larger number of warships than a nation having these advantages."

Comparing British and American naval construction programs the chief executive said that "when their present legislation is carried out they would have 68 cruisers. When ours is carried out, we would have 40. It is obvious that, eliminating all competition, world standards of defense require us to have more cruisers."

President Coolidge also took the opportunity for scoring strongly European criticisms of United States isolation and of alleged neglect of American duties towards the Old World.

"Europe itself has expressed very definite ideas on this subject," Mr. Coolidge said. "We do have such duties. They are not all on one side, however. They are mutual.

"We have sometimes been reproached for lecturing Europe, but probably ours are not the only people who sometimes engage in gratuitous criticism and advice. We have also been charged with pursuing a policy of isolation. We are not the only people, either, who desire to give their attention to their own affairs. It is quite evident that both of these claims can not be true. I think no informed person at home or abroad would blame us for not intervening in affairs which are peculiarly the concern of others to adjust, or when we are asked for help for stating clearly the terms on which we are willing to respond. x x x x x

"It is always plain that Europe and the United States are lacking in understanding. We are prone to think that they can do as we can do. We are not interested in their age old animosities. we have not suffered from centuries of violent hostilities. We do not see how difficult it is for them to displace distrust in each other with faith in each other."

Rebuking charges of American indifference to European troubles, the chief executive pointed to American relief expenditures to Europe immediately following the war, American participation in the Dawes commission, and to the $110,000,000 subscribed from the United States to put the plan into effect.

President Coolidge concluded his address with a strong plea for peace and a disclaimer that American policies were dictated by either aggressive or imperialistic motives. "We are against aggression and imperialism," he said, "not only because we believe in local self-government, but because we do not want more territory inhabited by foreign people. Our exclusion of immigration should make that plain. Our outlying possessions, with the exception of the Panama Canal Zone, are not a help to us, but a hindrance. We hold them, not as a profit, but as a duty. We want limitation of armaments for the welfare of humanity. We are not merely seeking our own advantage in this, as we do not need it, or attempting to avoid expense, as we can bear it better than anyone else.

"If we could secure a more complete reciprocity in good will, the final liquidation of the balance of our foreign debts, and such further limitation of armaments as would be commensurate with the treaty renouncing war, our confidence in the effectiveness of any additional efforts on our part to assist in the further progress of Europe would be greatly increased."

PILGRIMAGE TO TOMB OF UNKNOWN SOLDIER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—(AP)—The American who is destined to rest nameless at Arlington National cemetery in the memory of his fallen comrades on the battlefield was honored anew today, with President Coolidge leading hundreds in pilgrimage to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier as an observance of the signing of the Armistice ten years ago.

The momentary hush of the nation and the world at eleven o'clock found the President and Mrs. Coolidge, accompanied by the secretaries of war and the navy, paying homage to the Unknown Soldier with the placing of a rose and carnation wreath on the plain white tomb. After the chief executive had deposited the floral tribute, the group stood in reverent silence for a moment. Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge then went to attend church services dedicated to the memory of the war dead.

Among those who also honored the Unknown Soldier today were some army chaplains who had been present at the first ceremony in 1921, John F. Axton, former chief of the army chaplains, laid a wreath in the name of the World War chaplains, and Rabbi Morris Lazaron, of Baltimore, pronounced the invocation.

Later Paul V. McNutt, national commander of the American Legion, saluted the unknown warrior and placed a wreath of remembrance.

INCOME TAX STATISTICS BY REVENUE BUREAU

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—(AP)—An aggregate net income of $22,673,317,907 for 1927 was shown to have been reported by income taxpayers in returns filed to August 31, 1928, in a preliminary report on statistics of income published today by the internal revenue bureau.

Of the 4,122,242 returns made, 2,464,168 were found liable for taxes totaling $826,245,497. The 1927 returns represented an increase of 46,700 over those for 1926 filed to August 31, 1927, with the total net income likewise having been increased by $1,008,141,581 and the tax by $93,766,071. The average net income was computed from the 1927 returns to be $5,475 and the average tax liability $200.43.

In conjunction with the preliminary 1927 report, the bureau also published an exhaustive survey of statistics of income from 1926 returns. The report contained an historical presentation of the income and tax liability reported by individuals and corporations since the inception of the present period of income taxation.

The number of corporations filing returns to last August 31, for 1927 was 452,853, of which 249,847 reported net income of $8,068,200,905, liable to tax of $1,007,981,774. Compared with 1926 returns filed over a similar period this represented a decrease in net income of $1,144,062,745 and in tax of $173,023,592.

PRISONER KILLED TURNKEY IN ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE

BOSTON, Nov. 11—(AP)—A turnkey at the state prison in Charlestown, was shot to death and a guard was injured during a desperate fight with a prisoner who attempted to escape in the prison chapel today.

The slain turnkey was Fred Pfiliger, 41 years old, of Arlington, who had been employed at the prison for nearly 20 years. George R. Connelly, a guard, was cut about the head.

Pfiliger was shot through the heart by Charles Trippe, a prisoner, who, after he had emptied his pistol in an exchange of shots with the turnkey and the guard, attacked Connelly with the empty weapon. Trippe was finally overpowered when other guards came to the aid of the two men and was returned to his cell.

Trippe, who is 21 years old and who was sentenced from Worcester last year to serve a term of from 15 to 18 years for robbery, had attended an early religious service in the prison chapel. Later, he asked and was given permission to attend a general service in the same place. After the general service and when the prisoners were returning to their cells, a count of the line revealed that Trippe was missing.

Pfiliger, and Connolly encountered Trippe crouched behind a row of seats in the balcony, and were ordered to hold up their hands. When Pfiliger disregarded the order, Trippe fired and Pfiliger fell with a bullet through his heart. Connolly drew his weapon and a rapid exchange of shots followed, culminating in a hand-to-hand encounter during which Trippe battered Connolly's head with the butt of his pistol. Trippe was overpowered by Deputy Warden James Hogneft and another guard.

ATTEMPT MADE TO BLOW UP STATUE OF KING WILLIAM

DUBLIN, Nov. 11—(AP)—In the early hours of Armistice day attempts were made to blow up the Equestrian statue of King William The Third in College Green and also that of King George 1st in Saint Stephens Green.

Bombs were placed at both statues but little damage resulted when they exploded. The left hoof of King William's horse was blown away and a portion of the pedestal shattered as were many windows in the vicinity. Civic guards gave chase to two men seen leaving College Green but both escaped.

Dublin celebrated the day in a pouring rain. A parade of former British service men was held in Phoenix park. The only disorders noted were several scuffles which occurred when republican sympathizers attempted to seize union jacks carried by color bearers at the head of each unit.

SEVERAL IMPROVEMENTS FOR THE CITY ARE UNDER WAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 11—Among notable civic improvements that are now underway or about to be undertaken through the standing committees of the common council at this time are the renovation and remodeling of the cell rooms at police headquarters, the completion of the construction of new road on Main street and the remodeling of the former Connecticut Trolley company car barn on West Main street, for use by the city street department. With the exception of the latter, the work is being, or to be done, under special appropriations.

Alderman William E. Jackson, chairman of the police committee which recently received an appropriation of $1,000 to remodel the cell rooms stated today that the contracts had been let for the work which would be started very soon. The main objective of the appropriation was to improve the quarters for women in the lock-up. These are now in deplorable condition but the plans for renovations indicate that the general appearance of these quarters will be most inviting, as cell rooms go, when the work is completed. The double glass doors which now separate the women's quarters from the row of cells for men are to be replaced by a brick wall and a smaller sound-proof door. The entire cell will be painted white and equipped with a dome light. An attractive lavatory and toilet will be installed and partitioned from the main cell by a brick wall. Care will be taken so that none of this equipment will be removable by persons contemplating suicide or escape. The barred half of the room will not be altered but the filthy bed which is now its only furnishing will be replaced by two neat cots. The dark stained glass in the windows will be replaced by wired white glass, allowing sunlight to enter the room. The main cell room is also to be retouched. The ceiling and upper half of the walls will be painted white while the cells will be repainted in gray. A new sink and plumbing fixtures will be installed and the room lighted by a series of over half a dozen flood lights that may be turned on individually or in full as the occasion demands.

The new tarvia-lithic section of Main street from the New Haven railroad crossing to a point east of the American Thread company office was fully opened to traffic Saturday night, the stretch from the crossing to Thread Mill square having already been open for about a week. The short link of Jackson street between Union and Main streets is now being resurfaced. The completion of the Main street stretch now gives Willimantic a principal thoroughfare and east and west approaches on main trunk lines unsurpassed by any city of its population in the state. The west end of the street was surfaced two years ago and the run of first class road is now over two miles long from east to west. The surfacing of the eastern section was done under supervision of the city street department and thus afforded employment to half a hundred local men.

In line with the ultimate removal of the city yard from its present quarters on Watson street to the extensive property purchased some months ago by the city from the Connecticut company after that concern had discontinued its trolley line from the city to South Coventry, the car barn is now being made ready for occupancy and lumber owned by the city is being used as floor planking and in erecting a ceiling that will serve the dual purpose of conserving heat and affording extensive loft space for storage. The barn, which is in excellent condition measures 120 by 35 feet. A section 60 feet deep is being partitioned off and for the coming winter will be used for the storage of the city motor trucks. A pipeless furnace is about to be installed and a new chimney will be built. Much difficulty and expense has been incurred in past winters in "warming" up the trucks for the day's work and sometimes for emergency calls during the night after heavy snowfalls. Conservative figures showed that it cost the city as much as $10 and $12 a day to get the truck motors properly heated for operation in zero weather, these figures including waste of time, wear on the motors, excess gasoline, etc. The old yard on Watson street does not provide heated stalls for the trucks. In the past one truck was kept in the old Montgomery Hose company building on Jackson street and it was used in towing the other trucks around in the morning until the motor functioned properly.

SILK COMPANY HAS 30 LOOMS READY FOR OPERATION

Orders have been placed for 70 additional looms to be delivered before January 1. As additional space is prepared more looms will be ordered and the officials hope to have 300 looms in operation within a year. Operations at the plant will be on the day and night schedule and sufficient hands have already been employed for the start of activities.

CHAS. N. BRUSH AGAIN ELECTED REPRESENTATIVE

The democrats of the town of Bozrah patiently awaited the result of the counties Tuesday evening to learn by how much a majority they had won, in the local election. At no time, during the day was there any doubt of a perfect Smith-Robinson victory and this is one of the few towns of the state that came through one hundred per cent. democratic.

The chief contest of the election was that of representative. The democratic candidate, Charles N. Brush, who two years ago was elected to serve his first term in the legislature and who also had the distinction of being the youngest member in the house of representatives was reelected this year. He had as opponent Nathan Gilman, president of the Bozrah Electric Light company and also of the Gilman Bros. Mfg. Co., of Bozrahville. Mr. Gilman was a candidate for the nomination two years ago but was defeated by Herbert E. Beard of Leffingwell who was defeated by Mr. Brush.

The total number of votes cast was 363, of which 165 were straight democrats and 138 straight republicans.

The local vote was as follows: Representative, Charles N. Brush, d. 193; Nathan Gilman, r, 164; judge of probate, Wareham W. Bentley, d. 186, r. 169; justice of the peace, John J. Sweeney, d. 193; John S. Sullivan, d. 189; Michael Yankewitz, d. 187; Forrest Leffingwell, r, 166; George K. Brush, r, 163; O. C. Gardner, r, 163.

NOANK

FIREMEN UP AGAINST IT— WHO WILL FINANCE SIREN?

At the fire company's last meeting held recently in their rooms on Cedar street with Foreman Walter Palmer in the chair and when 20 smoke eaters answered to their names, different committee made reports. It was voted to have dancing each week through the season. The committee is: Jack Ellis, chairman, Peter Shandor and Fred Fitzpatrick. Chief H. H. Park had a few words to say about erecting the new siren on the fire house. He said it would cost $180 dollars a year, without using it. He went to Providence, visited fire company and found it did not cost so much a month there as in Connecticut. The firemen don't know where the money is coming from for they got all they have from the people and it is not fair to ask them again for money to help pay for the siren when it is put in place. Can anybody tell how the smoke eaters are to pay that much a year? Fairs have taken a back seat and the country is loaded with dances each week. The siren committee is to hold a special meeting to talk over more about it. Chief Park said that he had not ordered the new siren yet. He is going to find out more about sirens and how to raise the money. It would be too bad to work for 18 months raising a fund for the new alarm and not to know if the company can afford to install it. The smoke eaters will wait and see the outcome of the special meeting.

After the meeting Assistant Steward Sam Carson gave the fire fighters an O. W. Beebe chowder and it is years since the smoke eaters had one and sponge cake with good coffee. The Firemen's Trio, with firemen lanterns and red caps sang "Fireman Save My Child." The piano was played by R. Brocky.

The Whirlwind basketball team has secured the town hall for the winter months. Walter Buddington will be floor captain and Broad Jump E. Butson will be the manager and Keith Ebbetts coach, a fellow who knows the indoor game from A to Z and has coached some of the best teams around this section. With a squad of 10 players Coach Ebbetts gave them a long work-out, also a long run for eight miles, to give the young bait-tossers plenty of wind for their first game with the fast Taftville Whirlwinds this month. The manager of that team sent word down to the cod-chasers team to look out for his blue and white suit team are to beat Noank this season. Coach Ebbetts also had his players out in rowboats for a row of three miles. With a short talk for 18 minutes, he told them to show up for practice next week. New suits that are coming from Boston will be ready for the first battle. A prize of a $10 gold piece will be given the player who has the most points at the end of the season. No coffee for the players, only water or milk. A sign has been put up in the club room, as follows: "Every one to be in bed at 10 o'clock."

Grey Fox a Robber

During the night Mrs. Julia Scott was awakened from her beauty sleep and heard a noise in her yard. It came from the coop where there were 50 hens. She saw a large gray fox. The hens were making plenty of noise and the thief had one hen going away with it. Mrs. Scott woke her husband from a sound sleep and getting out the shot gun from the wall he started out to get Mr. Fox. But it was too late for the midnight prowler was out of danger and back in the woods. This is the second person reporting a fox robbing coops in the village. Mrs. Scott claims that six chickens were missing. The neighbors will keep a good watch on the chickens. On Middlefield avenue the couple lost two and a half hours sleep and still the fox is not captured.

GOODYEAR WOMAN BREAKS LEG IN AUTO ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 11—Miss Rosalie Hebert of Goodyear, a young woman in her early 20's, was a patient at the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam today, victim of an unfortunate accident at Attawaugan crossing, five miles north of here, just before 9 o'clock Saturday night.

Miss Hebert was one of eight people riding in a car driven by Arthur Morin of Mechanic street, Danielson, when it stalled on the track as a heavy southbound freight came bowling down the line. Efforts to start the car being fruitless, its occupants began to pile out onto the track and in the hurry Miss Hebert somehow broke her leg. It is understood that the engineer made every effort to bring the train to a stop, but though he managed to slow the speed very materially the locomotive plowed into the stalled car and wrecked it. None of the occupants of the car aside from Miss Hebert were injured. Railroad police checked up the accident. Morin is said to have explained that cars on a siding at the crossing obscured his view of the main line, or that otherwise he would have seen the freight train before getting onto the track. What caused the car to stall is uncertain.

Armistice Day Program

Tonight at the Baptist church representatives of congregations making up the Danielson Federation of Churches witnessed an impressive Armistice night program, the feature being a presentation of the pageant The Blade and the Hilt, written by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord, pastor of the Westfield Congregational church and staged under the direction of Mrs. W. A. Mills of Hawkins street. The program announced that some of the lines of the prologue were taken from the fifty-second chapter of Isiah and from the fourth chapter of Micah. Some of the lines of the epilogue were taken from The Dawn of Peace, a poem by Alfred Noyes. The little poem in which the story of The Blade and the Hilt begins, bears the simple title, An Old Song. Rev. Mr. Gaylord chanced upon the poem in the columns of a newspaper, and it is mentioned that from this humble but beautiful and suggestive bit of stray verse grew tonight's production.

Following the prelude at the opening of the program tonight the congregation sang the Hymn of Peace. The invocation was given by Rev. Albert Abbott of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The costumed cast of the pageant was made up of Arthur F. Hughes, representing War. E Marion Dowd was Peace; Thomas U. Day, Warrior; Harold Holehouse, Smith; Bertram L. Hammond, First Friend to Warrior; T. Francis Hammett, Second Friend to Warrior; H. Leta Keech, Third Friend to Warrior; Miss Florence Pluze, Mother; Antonio Del Pesco, Son; Josephine Gaylord, Child; Burdette C. Hopkins, First Excavator; Arthur F. Hughes, Second Excavator. Rev. Harding W. Gaylord was the reader.

The music was by Robert H. Bethel, organist; soprano solos, Mrs. Harold B. Atwood; piano, Miss Grace M. Stanton; drum, Claude R. Moran; chorus, A. P. Burns, director, Rev. Albert Abbott, Harold Bigelow, George B. Guild, William Hallowell, L. Edwin Hill, David King, John Linberg, George Macomber, Henry A. McEwen, Alfred L. Reed, Charles M. Smith, L. J. Sylvester, Robert M. Tyrell, Earle F. Winslow.

The pageant committee was made up of Rev. Mr. Gaylord, Rev. Mr. Abbott, Rev. C. J. Armstrong, Miss Marjorie L. Gaffney, Mrs. H. W. Gaylord, B. C. Hopkins, Mrs. Eric V. Johnson and Miss Grace M. Stanton.

Agricultural Society Annual

The many who gathered at Unitarian hall in Brooklyn Saturday morning at 11 o'clock for the annual meeting of the Windham County Agricultural society heard encouraging reports covering the past year and learned that despite heavy rain on the "big" day of last September's fair and the necessary postponement the society, including its grant from the state, made $100 to add to its treasury this year. All premiums were paid in full and all debts discharged. Reports relative to the society's activities were made by Secretary M. J. Frink of Brooklyn and Treasurer J. Dyer Potter of Putnam. At the noon hour a bountiful dinner was served those attending the meeting by the members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Westfield Congregational church.

At the business meeting the following officers and executive committee was elected for a year: President, Earl Andrews of Woodstock; first vice-president, Lester B. Williams, Brooklyn, second vice-president, Dr. F. W. Page, Danielson; third vice-president, John Weatherby, Elliott; treasurer, J. Dyer Potter, Putnam; secretary, Marshall J. Frink, Brooklyn; auditors, Judge Oscar F. Atwood, R. B. Witter, F. E. Miller, all of Brooklyn; executive committee, Arthur House, Brooklyn; Harry Chesbro, Scotland; Ray Fuller, Hampton; F. W. Cunningham, Pomfret; Christian Keer, Canterbury; W. B. Gallup, Chaplin; O. B. Carpenter, Eastford; George A. Cook, Windham; Everill James, Plainfield; Rev. Charles A. Down, Killingly; Luther M. Keith, Putnam; George H. Gallup, Sterling; W. C. Child, Woodstock; Charles Whiting, Thompson; Fred Wright, Eastford.

In the ladies' department the following were elected: President, Mrs. H. D. Covell, Pomfret, first vice-president, Mrs. J. Dyer Potter, Putnam; second vice-president, Miss Helen Witter, Brooklyn; third vice-president, Miss Helen Palmer, Brooklyn; secretary, Mrs. Susie G. Williams, Brooklyn; executive committee, Mrs. George Kent, Brooklyn; Mrs. Hiram Hawes, Canterbury; Mrs. Ernest Buell, Plainfield; Mrs. Winslow Gallup, Chaplin, Mrs. F. W. #### FUNERALS

Mrs. S. E. Williams

This afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Congregational church in Brooklyn funeral services for Mrs Susie E. Williams were conducted by the pastor, Rev. John R. Pratt, assisted by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church. The bearers were Lester B. Williams, Judge Oscar F. Atwood, E. M. M. Marlor, S. Irving Frink, M. J. Frink and Daniel Gallup. Burial was in the South cemetery. A F. Wood was the funeral director.

Dwight A. Davis

Saturday afternoon at the funeral home of A. F. Wood services were conducted for Dwight A. Davis, who died in Smithfield, R. I., the past week, by Rev. Albert Abbott, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. During the service Gilbert Main of the Dudley Bible institute sang I Am Praying For You, and Sometime We'll Understand. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Aden A. Tillinghast, William A. Burrows, George Miner and Harry Ware.

Mrs. Ida Dumas

From the home in Ballouville Saturday morning the funeral of Mrs. Ida Dumas was held with services at St. Joseph's church in Dayville at 9 o'clock. Rev. Ignatius Kost, Rev. Anthelme Mollard, M. S., and Rev. Joseph Bergin, M. S., were the officers of the solemn high mass of requiem. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery at Putnam. The bearers were Edward Bourgeois, Doma Bourgeois, John LaBelle, Arsene Rainville, Louis Dumas and Peter Arpin. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Thomas Gates, 57, of Dayville, was being held in custody here today in default of bonds of $2,000, to answer in the town court Tuesday to a charge of contributing toward delinquency of minor children. The case is similar to another one that developed here in Danielson recently. Still another arrest of a second man to face a charge like that on which Gates will be presented was expected this afternoon.

Bishop E. Campion Acheson administered confirmation to a class at St. Alban's church this morning and also preached the sermon of the day, the service beginning at 11 o'clock. Previously Bishop Acheson had conducted a service at Trinity church in Brooklyn, and was scheduled upon leaving here to have still another service at St. Philip's church in Putnam this afternoon. During that portion of his address dealing with Armistice day Bishop Acheson, quoting the attitude of the church as expressed at the recent Episcopalian convention in Washington set forth that the church desire peace, but it desires justice and righteousness first. There were many at the services both here and in Brooklyn.

Watch out for chicken thieves! They have been plundering right and left in Windham county the past week, and up to Saturday morning had gotten away with about 500 chickens. They have been raiding henneries in Woodstock, South Woodstock, Abington, Chaplin and Hampton. It is known that they are operating with automobiles, possibly out of Rhode Island, and are making large hauls at every opportunity. On Wednesday and Thursday nights of last week they made fruitful raids in the county areas mentioned. State officers are making a special effort to arrest them, and will welcome hurry telephone calls if they are heard prowling about chicken yards.

To correct an error in this column Saturday morning mention again is made that Brooklyn grange is to meet and elect officers at Grange hall in Brooklyn Monday evening of this week. Usually the meetings of this grange are held on Tuesday evenings. A supper is to precede the business session.

In observance of the actual anniversary of Armistice day, flags were flying at numbers of homes in Danielson today, and will again be displayed on Monday.

Though stores will be closed in Danielson Monday, with the usual exceptions and for necessary reasons, the manufacturing plants of the town will continue in operation and the schools will be in session.

Radio fans spent some of their time before their sets today hunting stations assigned different locations on the dial from those they have held for a long time past.

Church Family night at the Westfield Congregational church is scheduled for next Tuesday, opening with a supper in the vestry at 6:30, and followed by an evening filled with things of interest to the church people.

In his reference to Armistice day during the course of his announcements at the masses at St. James' church today, Rev. Joseph A. Demers, M. S., admonished his congregations that this day should be one of memory and prayer for those who gave their lives for the honor and glory of their country.

The annual roll call of Danielson chapter of the American Red Cross got away to a good start Saturday, preceding a successful week in which Danielson, Elmville, East Killingly, South Killingly and Brooklyn will be canvassed for memberships.

Mrs. Francis Ducharme and Mr. and Mrs. Aldei Lamothe motored to Southbridge today for a visit with relatives and friends.

Dr. Warren A. Tanner remains a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, but the progress of his recovery is such that he is expected to be able to return to his home here before Thanksgiving.

Miss Alice Monohan was a visitor with relatives in Providence over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Van Woodworth were in New York on Saturday to attend the Army-Notre Dame game.

Local friends were in Brooklyn this afternoon to attend the funeral services for Mrs. Susie E. Williams at the Congregational church in that place.

There will be various matters of special interest up for consideration when the chamber of commerce holds its monthly meeting at the Attawaugan hotel Tuesday evening.

POLICE ARREST 36 IN RAID ON GAMBLING DEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 11—Captain William Jarvis and Sergt. George Liard of the Putnam police assisted by Sergt. Gardner and Officer Royal V Scranton of the state police of Danielson barracks continued their war on vice dens when they swooped down upon the Putnam Bowling alleys Saturday evening and broke up a dice game, placing the proprietor Wilfred Benoit, under arrest in addition to summoning 35 frequenters to court for a hearing to take place Tuesday morning.

When the police entered a few patrons were engaged in "the rolling of a string or two," while a few bystanders looked on and complimented the rolling artists as they levelled nine pins with the floor or possibly scored a "strike." Proceeding to a rear room they found the guests deeply devoted to a pool table. An inspection of the cloth of green revealed a large sized pot, and a pair of dice which were about to be cast for another try, as the police interferred. Benoit was placed under arrest and taken to the local police station, but was later allowed to go upon receipt of $50 bonds. His associates were booked by the police and were ordered into police court, 35 in number, for the post Armistice day session.

Among those present were many of Putnam's well known gamblers who have previous police records against them, when they were trapped in other raids conducted by the local police. Complaints, it is believed were made to the police by the wives and families of the men who were regularly patronizing the place and were losing the money that was needed in the support of their children. Capt. Jarvis did not reveal the source of information today.

Benoit, the operator, is physically handicapped by the loss of a leg and has been for the past five years unable to perform any manual labor. He recently acquired the Putnam Bowling Alleys and supposedly had been conducting a respectable business.

Rienzie Brown

Rienzie Brown, for many years a resident of this city died at the Day Kimball hospital Friday evening after a brief period of illness. Mr. Brown was a native of Kansas City. He came to Putnam on a visit with relatives. He was induced to remain in the east and he entered the local schools, receiving his education here. When the legislature granted the People's Tramway Electric company of Worcester a franchise to build a trolley road through Putnam Mr. Brown entered their employ. In 1897 the road was partially completed, rails being laid from Wildwood park to the old trolley switch near the Putnam fair grounds. In the early fall the company opened the road and Mr. Brown was awarded the honor of piloting the first electrically driven public service vehicle through Putnam, it being one of the old fashioned open trolleys. When the road was completed Mr. Brown remained as conductor on the line until the strike of 1920 when all employes demanded a wage increase. Settlement of the strike found many new employes in service and Mr. Brown was one who had been supplanted.

Shortly after the strike trouble had blown over Mr Brown with George E Monroe of Putnam, a former motorman, entered into a partnership and established a motor repair shop on School street. In 1925 Mr. Brown severed his business connections and retired from active business.

Mr. Brown was stricken Tuesday morning and was taken to the Day Kimball hospital on Thursday. He failed to rally during the night and died shortly after six o'clock Friday evening. He is survived by an aunt Mrs. Ella E. Brown of Champman street and by one brother who resides in Kansas.

Children enrolled in the primary grads of St. Mary's parochial school will be excused from sessions during the coming week, according to an announcement made today by Rev. Ulric O. Bellerose, pastor of St. Mary's church. Father Bellerose stated this morning that a slight epidemic of colds has sprung up among the younger children in the school and to insure protection to the older students he has ordered that the young children be dismissed from classes. Father Bellerose urged that the parents of the children cooperate with him in his effort to stamp out the minor ills, by keeping their children under quarantine during the week.

The Thanksgiving holidays which are but a few weeks ahead are the inspiration to a number of chicken thieves who have conducted several raids on chicken farms in Pomfret and vicinity and have succeeded in escaping with a number of the fowl. During the past week, reports have come to the police that the poultry thieves have adopted the most modern methods of capturing the poultry without reflecting any suspicion upon them, that of asphyxiating the animals by the use of gas fumes contained in bombs. The incident has been reported to state police and investigations are being conducted by the officers in an effort to run down the thieves and bring them to justice. Each year at Thanksgiving time, the farmers are forced to take extra precautions to protect their poultry from the thieves.

Except for the reviving of memories and launching of the Red Cross drive by the Putnam chapter of the order, Armistice day was passed very quietly in Putnam. Memories went back a decade today to the hour when the end of the world's greatest conflict, involving nearly every civilized nation has come to a close. The city was alive with parades, turnouts, and other demonstrations of joy that came with the news of the signing of the document that placed the world at peace. The ex-soldiers gathered at different fraternal rooms today and discussed the incidents that happened "somewhere in France" ten years ago when the fighting ceased. The day will be observed in the city this (Monday) morning with a large parade beginning at 11 o'clock. The organizations will form at the Soldier's monument and will cover the entire city in the line of march. Disbandment will take place at Putnam high school where the speaking exercises will be held followed by a football game between Putnam high school and East Douglas high school of East Douglas, Mass. In the afternoon a dinner will be served by the general committee in the Elks banquet room on Main street at which veterans of all wars will be guests. A dance has been arranged to take place at the armory in the evening.

Miss Rosalie Hebert of Goodyear is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in this city, suffering with a broken leg, sustained when she leaped to safety from an automobile that became stranded on the Attawaugan crossing in the path of a fast southbound freight train Saturday evening shortly after 9 o'clock.

Miss Hebert with seven other companions were crowded into a five passenger Nash sedan and were about to cross the tracks when the engine stalled. The speeding train was only a short distance away and the passengers barely had time to escape before the engine plowed into the vehicle. Miss Hebert leaped from the rear seat and struck the group with such force that she fractured a bone in her leg.

ARMISTICE DAY

Ten years ago this country was wild in its demonstration over the signing of the armistice that ended the war in Europe. It was most welcome news following the most disastrous war the world ever experienced, and how ready the countries involved in the war were for peace can be measured to a considerable extent by the conditions which have prevailed since that time and by the steps which have been taken to insure peace.

It cannot be said that there has been no war in the last decade for plenty of blood has been shed in China, but they have been for the most part civil wars. On the other hand determined efforts have been made in behalf of international peace and the full benefits thereof cannot as yet be measured.

Nothing so opened the eyes of the world to the importance of peace like the World war. That terrible struggle pictured to the different nations the folly of rushing into such disasters without exhausting every means of peaceful adjustment. Instead of resorting to the methods that were employed by the barbarians of old there has been impressed upon the world the importance of prevention, the desire for peace rather than war.

Progress in this direction has not been in keeping with all that has been attempted. Nevertheless understandings have been reached, treaties have been enacted and others are in progress which furnish ground for the belief that it will be much harder for such a war to get started in the future.

Ten years of peace do not necessarily assure its continuance indefinitely in that period, however, there has been displayed a commendable tendency, a willingness not only to settle international disputes without going to war but an eagerness to reduce naval armament. All is reaction from the lessons of the war There has been paved the way, it is believed, for greater things in this direction. It is no more than ought to be expected from civilized nations and yet it has taken a long time, untold suffering and great losses to get it started. Armistice day this year finds the world giving greater thought than ever to [illegible] t doesn't and cannot mean a [illegible] s to do away with all defense but a desire for amicable [illegible] t of international disputes, a resort to law instead of to wholesale slaughter.

HOOVER'S GOOD WILL TRIP

During the term of President Coolidge special efforts have been made to express the good will of the United States toward the United States and Central American republics. Good impressions have been left among those countries by the contributions of Charles E. Hughes, the visits of General Pershing, Secretary Kellogg, Secretary Weeks and Colonel Lindbergh and to a considerable extent by the ambassadorship of D. W. Morrow in Mexico.

Mr. Hoover's plan is without a precedent but full of great promise. He goes to get in closer touch with the countries of the western hemisphere with which there should be the best of relations. Inasmuch as such a visit is out of the question once he assumes his new office he takes time by the forelock in making it at once, and inasmuch as South America is the continent which he has not visited in his wide engineering experiences the significance of such a trip cannot be lost upon the republics to the south when they appreciate his desire to become acquainted with them as well as other nations.

Through the department of commerce Mr. Hoover has long been interested in developing the commerce between the continents. It was a logical effort. The countries of the western hemisphere have never been as close as they should be. It is not, however, trade alone that Mr. Hoover has in mind but closer friendship and the allaying of ill founded suspicions. Who should be more influential in accomplishing the objects of such a visit than the man who is to be the head of the nation for the four years from next March?

The next few months are found to be busy ones for the next president. Nevertheless he sets about getting ready for his task in a businesslike manner, characteristic of the man.

That the South American countries should be enthusiastic over the announced plan and eager to receive Mr. Hoover is gratifying, although it is only what should be expected. They appreciate the recognition that is being given to them and as the Brazilian ambassador states it is "the most auspicious omen to the highest standard of international policy, in our hemisphere."

OUR FATALITY RECORD

Connecticut's record of fatal automobile accidents thus far this year is disturbing to those who are disposed to give consideration to the increase over last year. Already there is an increase of more than 30 per cent.

Whenever such increases are referred to there is a disposition to point to the gain in the number of automobiles. With more cars in the highways it is inevitable that the danger to all but with this year by year increase but with this year by year increases in this hazard there is served upon all highway users a warning which they cannot completely ignore.

Where there is increased traffic there must be more care. That is shown in the regulations for the handling of traffic in cities. Where such conditions exist they impose upon the users of the highways increased obligations. It means that they should assume that increased responsibility which goes with greater traffic. It is impossible to ignore traffic conditions They are very real. The pedestrian must look to his own protection and not leave it entirely to the other fellow. The driver of vehicles must observe more strictly the rules of the road and the rights of others. He must have his eyes open for the pedestrian as well as the other vehicle. In other words, as the number of highway users increases there should be an increase in the care they exercise. If that is done there will be eliminated many of the accidents and fatalities

The reckless users of the highway, pedestrians as well as drivers, make up only a small proportion of the total number. They are frequently the cause of accidents without being participants in them, but with the increasing loss of life on the highways of this state it becomes evident that it is more rather than less care which needs to be used by all drivers in general.

There is seldom an auto accident but what carries a lesson for many drivers. It isn't always that it is heeded by those who learn of it. Either through participation by self, friend or acquaintance there are but few but what have recognized that auto accidents should not have occurred, and yet because of a failure to observe very similar acts of carelessness others are happening day after day Carelessness and safety do not go hand in hand.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL

When we stop to reflect upon the quick response that is made in time of distress and the magnificent work that is accomplished in dealing with disaster, no matter from what cause, there must be an eagerness on the part of the people of this country and city to enlist in the American Red Cross.

This great relief organization has long since demonstrated its worth. All we need to do is to think of the satisfaction that was felt over the fact that it was ready to administer to the wants of the devastated regions visited by the West Indian hurricane, all the way from Porto Rico to and through Florida, and there cannot fail to be just as eager a response on the part of the people to provide the funds for any emergency call that may come in the future.

That was only one of the many instances where that organization proved its worth. It is always ready to go and ready to carry on until distress and disease have been overcome. It is prepared for emergencies and it is able to meet them with the highest degree of efficiency.

That this country should be proud of the American Red Cross is natural That it should be anxious for it to be as effective in the future as in the past is to be expected. That can be assured through each locality in the country reaching the goal of membership.

In Norwich that goal is 2500 members. We have reason to believe that there will be prompt enrollment. There is no better way of insuring the performance of such good work as the Red Cross does than through your contribution to the organization. Let it be prompt and general. Keep up the work that has been so well started.

LYNN'S EXPLOSION

Investigations have not been completed concerning that explosion in Lynn which caused the death of 18 persons, yet enough has been determined to encourage the belief that different conditions surround the housing and use of explosives will be insisted upon in the future in that city.

It is not so different than it has been in many other places where it has been necessary for a large loss of life to center attention upon deplorable and unsafe conditions. Too often it is the case that what should be rated and dealt with as serious hazards fail to get much attention until something distressing happens.

The Lynn factory appears to have been engaged in manufacturing goods which called for the use of highly explosive compounds, so much so that one investigator declares the plant should not have been within 500 feet of the nearest dwelling instead of being 12 feet away, and it is beyond his comprehension how such a plant should have gotten the necessary permit for the use of the highly dangerous chemicals in such a location. It would seem as if this was another case of inefficient inspection, or lax issuance of permits. Whether it will amount to any more than a flurry immediately following the investigation remains to be seen

Perhaps there are other communities which are harboring just such dangers. If that is so the time is ripe for the application of the necessary measures for preventing a repetition of what happened at Lynn. That city may act for its own protection but there is no need why other cities should have to go through a similar experience before insisting on safeguards.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Sidewalks of New York aren't what they used to be.

The man on the corner says: Armistice day, show your colors.

Now and then we get an echo of the fact that it isn't possible to fool all the people all of the time.

From the help which he is getting it will not be necessary for Mr. Hoover to do any personal work on his cabinet.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Chopped nuts mixed with a little honey make a tasty sandwich filler.

Stale cake will taste fresh if dipped in cold milk and rebaked in a hot oven.

When making peanut brittle add a pinch of salt and vanilla.

Fresh vegetables will retain the color if cooked uncovered in very little water.

Never wrap bread in cloth, as it absorbs the moisture.

French dressing should be applied to lettuce at the table, so it may be served crisp and cold.

Scoop out the centers of apples, stuff with cranberries and bake them.

Two quartes of filling is required for a 10-pound turkey.

Grilled parsnips make a delicious garnish for broiled steaks.

Left-over stewed or canned fruit may be added to cornstarch pudding.

Spiced grapes go well with roast fowl.

Never wash a tea-strainer or teapot in soapy water. Wash and rinse in clear warm water always.

To remove coffee stains from a delicate material, brush the marks with glycerine, rinse in lukewarm water and press on the wrong side.

Keep rubber bands in a tightly closed tin box. They keep very much longer than if exposed to the air.

When making chocolate frosting, melt the chocolate over hot but not boiling water. Boiling water robs it of its gloss.

The most uncomfortable sofa or chair may be made comfortable by the judicious use of cushions.

A clean cloth wet with ammonia will keep your spectacles bright.

If alcohol is spilled on a painted surface, cover it quickly with oil and wipe with a soft cloth until the stain disappears.

OIL STAINS ON CARPET.

These are always such discouraging stains, but they can be removed if carefully attended to. With a clean rag dipped in gasoline begin rubbing around the edge of the oil stain. Work toward the center, changing to a clean portion of the rag as soon as one part is soiled.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

When the children are studying the piano, a 10-cent rubber stair tread is a good investment. It can be placed under the pedals of the piano and save wear and tear on the rug and marks on the hardwood floor.

MORE SPACE

A great many pictures in a small room will make it look smaller than ever. A few pictures and one or two mirrors, carefully arranged, will add just that much to the dimensions.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A little powdered borax shaken into the stockings will relieve burning feet and also act as a deodorant.

Turn a tumbler over the watch that is ticking in the room of the sick person. Then it can be seen but not heard.

If the toothbrush you have purchased is too hard for your gums and causes them to bleed, soak it in hot vinegar for a half hour. Then wash in clear, cold water and a great deal of the stiffness will have disappeared.

Should you be unfortunate and lose a filling from your tooth, causing you great pain, saturate a bit of cotton with oil of cloves and insert in the cavity with a toothpick. It will deaden the pain until you can get to a dentist.

MILKY BOTTLES

When washing bottles that have contained sour milk, use some baking soda in the bottle. Pour over the soda hot water and shake well. Then rinse in cold water and see how the bottle shines.

TURN POTTED PLANTS OFTEN

Do not keep your potted plants always in the same place, but move them occasionally, so that all may get their due share of sunlight. And never allow a plant to be too much drawn in one direction. Turn it around.

JUST A SUSPICION

A bottle of onion salt is a splendid article to have on hand when just a "suspicion" of onion is desired. A few sturdy shakes and you have the required seasoning, both of onion and of salt.

MILK AND SUGAR WILL GLAZE

Use a tablespoon of milk in which a little brown sugar has been dissolved to glaze cakes or pastry.

SHOE-LACE ENDS

When the tips come off the ends of shoe laces, dip the ends of the lace into glue and shape between the fingers. It will make them as good as new and be a great saving on the disposition.

RINSE RICE WELL

Always wash rice before cooking. Put the rice in a strainer and wash it in cold water, placing the strainer over a bowl of water. Change the water and repeat three times or until the water is clear.

EASY CLEANING.

One housewife gives her porch a scrubbing on washday by throwing over it the cleaner suds after the clothes have been hung on the line. Then the rinse water is thrown over it and swept off with a broom. She says it is as effective as when done by a scrubbing brush.

FLOWERS

Flowers will keep much better if all the leaves that would be under water in a vase are stripped from the stems before arranging.

LOOSE CASTORS

Aren't they irritating? A narrow strip of adhesive tape wound tightly around the stem of the loose castor until it fits the casing will keep it from continually slipping out.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

The uneven hemline still is smart. A new fur-trimmed coat has elbow sleeves.

The surplice closing is high-lighted this season.

Informal frocks adhere to straight lines this season.

To be smart the stockings should match the complexion of the wearer.

Cascading jabots down the front add a softening feminine note to fall frocks.

There is no indication of the waning of the popularity of the uneven hemline.

Very little black is worn in the evening, as this is decidedly a season of colors.

Children's coats remain straight and are trimmed with krimmer, nutria, beaver, squirrel and raccoon.

Gauntlet cuffs on long close sleeves are new.

Cinnamon brown is a popular shade for sports clothes.

Suede cloth is a fabric used for smart sports clothes and street dresses.

In sport clothes, the two-piece mode, slim and becoming, continues a favorite.

The best dressed child wears simple clothes.

Belts are featured on frocks for girls of 10 and older.

For school wear, a navy blue flannel or jersey frock trimmed with red and white, is smart.

The stout woman will find that dresses of dull finish crepe are generally becoming.

Two scarfs falling from the shoulder and caught together in the back give a fluttering effect to a new dinner gown.

Inverted box pleats at either side of the front and also at the back give ample fullness to frock for the average woman.

HEMS OUT OF FAVOR.

There are no hems to let out on the newest sports clothes. Hems are out of favor and in their stead Paris uses row on row of machine stitching to finish wool sports clothes. The same method is used for cuffs and collars at some of the leading houses of sports apparel. Tweeds are the cause of the change. They do not hang well, dressmakers say, when finished with hems which have to be put in on the bias, since most of the current season's sports skirts are more or less circular.

BROWN FELT AGAIN.

The little brown felt hat has a place in most feminine wardrobes this season, and when it is trimmed with gold beads in a design that forms a strap through the center and down the sides it is assured of an important place.

FEATHER FANS.

The long, graceful feather fans that the season presents bear a resemblance in their lithe beauty to the season's fashionable long, slender silhouette.

SEWING POINTERS

When stitching fine materials on a sewing machine place a piece of paper under the seam and it will not pucker.

If the buttonholes on the children's play dresses become pulled or frayed, make a bound buttonhole right over the unsightly one, using plain white cambric if no contrasting color is available.

Make a spring resolution to get handles on all mattresses to facilitate turning. Make handles by stitching strips of ticking together for strength. Attach two to a side.

CLEANING WINDOW SHADES

Do you hide your shining windows behind soiled and spotted shades? Perhaps you know of no alternative except to discard them entirely. Nowadays there is no reason why an attractive room should be marred by unsightly shades when you can procure an article which is guaranteed to withstand vigorous and frequent cleansing treatment.

As soon as they show signs of soil, washable shades should be placed on a flat surface and scrubbed on both sides with a stiff brush and hot soapsuds. Rinse with clear hot water, then wipe off as much of the moisture as possible with a clean cloth. Rehang the shades on the window brackets and pull down full length until dry.

Even if your shades are of the old-fashioned variety, they should be taken down at least once a year, dusted and gone over lightly with a damp cloth and mild soapsuds. Rinse off the soap with a cloth squeezed out of clear water and dry thoroughly.

If discolored or worn at the edge take the shade from the roller, cut off the frayed end, and turn it upside down. Sew up the fresh end on the machine with a hem wide enough to hold the stick and tack the other end to the roller.

FUNNY FACE SANDWICH

Sixteen rounds of Boston brown bread, two inches in diameter, one-quarter cup butter, one-quarter cup pimento cheese, one-eighth teaspoon salt.

Cream the butter and cheese. Add the salt and carefully spread on eight of the rounds of bread. On the other eight cut out facial features. Place the cut-out rounds on top the buttered ones and arrange flat on a serving tray or platter.

A thimble may be used to make the eyes and a sharp knife for the nose and mouth. Various comical features may be made with little effort.

LONG SERVICE.

One housewife, says the Los Angeles Times, has had the same broom for the last three years. She takes care of it by each week dipping it into boiling water and then into cold. This process toughens the splints and makes them last longer.

LEMON SQUEEZER.

Rinse the lemon squeezer immediately after using and avoid trouble.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Mrs. Annie Clubb, near London, England, has been working as a blacksmith for the past 25 years.

The bulk of the work on all the farms in Poland is done by women, who seldom have a complete day of rest.

Since 1908 the average height of girls in London has increased from 5 feet 3 inches to 5 feet 5 inches.

Miss Edith Jorgensen, proclaimed the most beautiful woman in Denmark, has taken up a stage career in this country.

In one of the outfitting stores in Essen, Germany, not one of the 150 girls employed there wear their hair bobbed or shingled.

Miss Louise Byd, of San Rafael, Cal., has killed nine polar bears and caught one cub alive in the Artic, where she is on a hunting expedition.

Mrs. T. Tidswell, president of the Women's Teachers association of England, has traveled around the world several times in the quest of ideas for the teaching system of England.

CREAMED MIXTURES

Chill chicken before cutting it for creamed mixtures. If cut while warm it will be "stringy." Cut with scissors.

TO REMOVE LINT

To remove lint from broadcloth use a clean sponge wrung out of water.

RECIPES

Baked Fig Custard: Heat half a cup of sugar in a frying pan, stirring constantly until a golden brown syrup has formed. Pour into a mold, tipping it as thoroughly as possible. Chop three-fourths cup of dried figs, add three cups of milk, and heat in a double boiler. Beat three eggs, add a pinch of salt, one-fourth cup of sugar and one teaspoon of vanilla. Add the hot milk and fig mixture and pour into a mold. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a hot oven until firm. Cool and serve with finely chopped roasted almonds sprinkled over each serving.

Salad in Pastry Shell: A mixed vegetable salad served in a large shell made of flaky pastry is a very tasty and attractive dish. For it you may use cold cooked peas, string beans and carrots with freshly shredded celery and a cucumber cut in dice, also enough grated raw onion to add flavor. One cup of each of the vegetables named will afford a large salad, or you may use smaller quantities of some of the vegetables and add a tomato freed from skin and seeds and cut in dice, or perhaps a green pepper and a canned pimento may be preferred. Cut the larger vegetables into small pieces, mix all of them lightly and add a teaspoon of finely minced parsley with the grated onion. Then moisten slightly with a thick boiled salad dressing or a mayonnaise, season to taste, then pile into the shell. Garnish to suit the taste.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"Lest We Forget"

Mr. Editor: Having read with interest the letter in The Bulletin of last Friday under the heading, "Armistice Day," will you allow me space in your paper to comment on some of the statements as made by the past commander of the American Legion post of your city?

While he lays great stress upon the fact that the citizens fail to pay a proper respect in observing this day, yet he himself seems to forget that no observance whatsoever is made of the anniversary days that mark the ending of other wars that our country has fought, when men with the same high ideals, the same patriotism, and love of country and the old flag, have sprung forward, endured the same hardships, suffered the same privations—and died for the cause.

He again says, "But for that day what might not have happened." Very true, but why not go farther back and speculate upon what might have happened if the men of the Revolutionary or Civil war, or, in fact, any other war, had not endured to the finish.

He also makes the statement, "How can they start anything they receive no support from those that should give it to them; in fact, their efforts are more often blocked than supported?" This hardly seems so when we learn for one thing alone that the citizens of New London have contributed over $3,000 to help make the celebration there a success and I do not believe that the citizens of Norwich were any less generous two years ago.

Never in the history of the world was there more done for the comfort and welfare of the men in uniform than by this country in the last war. This was due largely to the generous and sacrificing spirit of the thousands of citizens, regardless of nationality, creed, or color, who responded nobly to every demand made upon them. Why not speak a word of appreciation to the farmers, who, handicapped by a hundred obstacles, worked heroically in answer to the call to "raise more food"? Why not give a little credit of winning the war to the patriotic women of the land who gave so unselfishly of their time to the Red Cross and, to the many drives, who made use of substitutes for food in their homes that the troops might have the best, who burned the midnight oil knitting sweaters, socks, and other comforts for the soldiers and sailors? Why not also pay tribute to such organizations as the Salvation Army, the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A., the Jewish Welfare league and many other agencies who did so much to keep up the spirit and morale of the army and navy?

While the writer means in no way to disparage or make light of the sacrifices made by the service men of the World war, yet he does believe that the noble work done by the citizens of the U. S. should not be forgotten, nor the heroic deeds of soldiers of other wars passed over. It matters not "when" or "how" a person served in time of their country's peril, if honestly and faithfully, they are entitled to a share of the honor whether they wore a uniform or not. The lack of observance of Armistice day that Mr. Bellefleur complains about is no more to be deplored than the lack of observance of the days marking the close of the Revolutionary, War of 1812, Mexican, Civil, or Spanish wars.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11— Prospects of a farm relief emergency extra session of congress next year are definite enough to cause grave doubt on the possibility of the making over of the senate chamber in the grand manner between March and December.

It would take all of that time to do the half million dollar and upward job tentatively agreed upon under pressure of the senatorial health conservation campaigned by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, senior senator from New York. Naturally, the physical modernization of the senate could not begin if the chamber was needed for a special session on farm relief.

Senate's Ventilation

The tentative plans drawn by the New York firm of Carrere & Hastings in association with David Lynn, architect of the capitol, call for conversion of the present rectangular senate hall into a semi-circular forum of debate to be backed up against the north wall which would be pierced by three mighty, two-story windows to give outside light and ventilation for the first time. Senator Copeland was gravely concerned over the fact that "senators meekly submit to exposure of their persons to bad atmospheric conditions."

"I think even the republican senators ought to live longer than they are likely to survive under conditions which prevail here," he told his colleagues.

The work is to be under supervision of the rules committee, which expected to meet this November, with election out of the way, to go over detailed plans of the architects. A row about location of the press gallery is in progress at that time, the correspondents having little liking for the tentative scheme of shunting them off to a corner of the semi-circular gallery where it will be difficult to hear proceedings.

Hot Air in House

The senate chamber revision project is just one of a number of schemes for revamping and doiling up the capitol. A plan for veneering with marble the painted Virginia sandstone of the parent central structure and the mighty cast iron dome is included. But it was the question of ventilation and health which got most attention last session. Representative Summers of Washington producing statistics to show that 200 members of the house alone had died in service during the last 35 years.

Incidentally, while the senate didn't bother about scientific research into its present ventilation status, the house atmosphere was analyzed by public health experts during session hours. The report showed no abnormal percentage of bacteria, dust particles, carbon monoxide and the like, and also indicated that the fresh air supply of 51,000 cubic feet a minute was adequate for all house needs. It did reveal, however, that the air of the house hall "is subject to overheating" during sessions, a statement with which any house press gallery veteran who has been compelled to keep at least one ear trained on endless hours of debate would agree out of hand.

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell was Right

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

PASS RESOLUTIONS THAT ENDORSE PEACE PACT

At the conclusion of an inspiring address Sunday afternoon at the Broadway theatre by Professor Jerome Davis of Yale, speaker at the community meeting in observance of Armistice day anniversary, resolutions endorsing the Kellogg-Briand peace pact were unanimously passed by the audience of about 500. The meeting other nations, to be propagandists for organizations in the city, as well as the churches. Rev. A. N. Foster of the Universalist church was chairman, and Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown of Trinity Episcopal church offered the opening prayer and pronounced the benediction.

William G. Park led in the singing of "America" and "America the Beautiful" and George A. Turner sang the song dedicated to the Gold Star mothers, preceding the introduction of the speaker by Rev. Mr. Foster.

In opening his address, Professor Davis referred to the 37 million dead who were the toll of the World war on all battle fronts and asked for a moment of silent prayer for world wide peace, which was the purpose for which they gave their lives. His topic was "The Heroisms of War and Peace," and he went on to speak of our moral responsibility to see that these millions did not die in vain. It is our task, he declared, to build a world of peace and to change the mind of America from war towards peace. We are told that the next war will be far more frightful than the last and will see the ruthless use of every agency for the destruction of life and material. Either civilization will conquer war or war will end forever our civilization.

Professor Davis called upon each one of his hearers to be educators for friendship, to find out the best about other nations, to be prapagandists for international sympathy instead of international hate. The reason we hate certain people is because we know so little about them, he said, and he urged that we show our friendship every day with the foreigners with whom we come in contact. Show them the best side, the real heart of America.

He referred to different steps on the road to peace in the pronouncements of Washington, Jefferson and Franklin and then coming down to the present day in the league of nations in the Wilson administration, the limitation of armaments in the Harding administration and the Kellogg-Briand treaty in the Coolidge administration. In spite of various reservations made by the nations, the last named is a long step on the road to peace and brotherhood of nations. We should each do our share individually, declared Professor Davis with deep earnestness, to shift the national mind from war to peace and to outlaw the scourge of war forever so that all nations may live in brotherhood.

Rev. Dr. David A. Pitt of the Central Baptist church made the announcement about the offering which was taken by Boy Scouts who served as ushers.

George Gulle rendered two violin solos for the offertory selections with Miss Ruth Dreschler accompanist at the piano, and the singing of The Star Spangled Banner preceded the benediction by Rev. Mr. Brown which closed the meeting.

Mayor Lee Roy Robbins and First Selectman William S. Murray with members of the city and town governments occupied seats on the platform, where an American flag on a standard stood near the speakers' table.

SALVATION ARMY APPEAL HERE REACHES CLOSE TO $3,000 MARK

The Salvation Army appeal to the people of Norwich to contribute to a fund of $5,000 for the maintenance of the organization during the year and for carrying on its charitable and religious activity in the city, has continued for two weeks and the resulting donation has amounted to nearly $3,000 up to the present time. The appeal was sponsored by a number of Norwich public-spirited men and was a purely mail campaign. All contributions which made up the $3,000 were received by the Salvation Army in response to a letter setting forth the needs and aims of the organization, and no subscription was asked by personal solicitation. The time of the appeal was set for two weeks, and although the two weeks have gone by and there is still $2,000 short of the total which the appeal committee were in the hope of raising, Campaign Secretary E. J. McCabe is in the hope that sufficient voluntary donations will eventually be received from friends and supporters of the Salvation Army service to make up the entire quota in the next few weeks.

Mr. McCabe left Norwich late Saturday night to begin a Salvation Army campaign for $5,000 in North Adams, Mass., which is beginning this morning. Before leaving the city, Secretary McCabe said: "Although we have not raised the entire $5,000 for which we made an appeal to the people of Norwich and vicinity, and which consisted of the minimum amount which the organization needs to continue its service during the year, I have implicit confidence that a large part of the $2,000 short to the completion of the quota will be contributed in the next few weeks by citizens who have been yearly contributors and supporters of the Salvation Army service. There are about 400 regular yearly contributors who have not as yet responded to the letter of appeal which we sent out, and I can safely count upon receiving donations to our yearly maintenance fund from all those kind friends. Although my immediate duties take me to North Adams, John R. Tarrant, cashier of the Bankers Trust company, the treasurer of our appeal committee, will be glad to receive contributions, no matter how small—and every little bit is of great help to our cause. Donations may also be sent to Salvation Army building, 10 Cliff street, and to P. O. Box 159.

"In leaving Norwich I take with me a feeling of great respect and admiration of the nobility and charitableness of its people—a feeling that I am leaving very kind friends. The men representing the appeal committee are of a type of character that no other community can equal, and their kindness and generosity has made a very deep and lasting impression which will ever rest in my recollection and which is recorded at our national headquarters.

"A suggestion has been made by several members of the appeal committee that it would be advisable to officially continue the appeal in Norwich for two more weeks in order to raise the $2,000 which would fill the quota. However, upon careful consideration we feel that, inasmuch as the chamber of commerce is entering upon a civic project of subscribing a fund for building the colonial inn which is of great interest to the city and its citizens of Norwich, we ought not in the least detract from the enthusiasm of this project and leave the field free to the inn campaign. The members of the chamber of commerce, beginning with our chairman, Arthur M. Brown, our treasurer, John M. Tarrant, the personnel of the appeal committee, mostly members of the chamber, and the entire rank and file of the chamber organization have been very kind and generous in the support of the Salvation Army effort in Norwich, not only in this appeal but throughout the year and in former years. The indebtedness of our organization for such magnanimous support can hardly be expressed in words, and all the workers of the Salvation Army are endeavoring to repay for this confidence and charity with earnest and zealous service to the community.

"I personally feel the deepest kind of gratitude for the kindness, courtesy and whole-hearted co-operation which I have received in this campaign as well as in the two previous years of my service in Norwich. There are so many kind friends to whom I owe my deepest appreciation and thanks that I hardly know how to properly express my indebtedness to all. In my ten years of service in the Salvation Army, both abroad and in the United States, I often came in contact with the press, but in no place have I received such whole-hearted co-operation and a willingness to serve the cause of human charity as I have received from the press of Norwich. This service is most thankfully inscribed in the New England states and national records of the Salvation Army and written in language which is indelible and replete with gratitude.

"The contribution which the children of Norwich voluntarily brought to schools in pennies, nickels and dimes to help the appeal, and the kindness of the principals and teachers by giving their time and effort to take care of this welcome contribution, is the most inspiring part of the campaign. With such charitable foundation and character of responsibility, at such an early age, for the sufferers of the community, by the citizens of tomorrow, the hope for a better day for humanity is assured in Norwich. I also feel grateful to the owners of Norwich manufacturing plants for the generous manner in which they enlisted in behalf of the appeal by asking their employes to contribute to the Salvation Army. The response made by the factory employes is very highly appreciated and in the name of the Salvation Army I thank them most heartily for their kind support.

"I believe that a final word ought to be said to the credit of the Norwich community, that the reason for not realizing the entire quota in the two weeks of the appeal was not due to a lack of interest or indifference to the needs of the Salvation Army work in Norwich. Were it not that this being the busy season in which all merchants are occupied with preparation for the holiday trade, also the intervention of the presidential election which rightly had claim and occupied the attention and interest of all citizens, the entire $5,000 of our appeal would surely have been subscribed in the last two weeks. However, my connection with the organization which builds its hopes and aspirations upon faith, gives me hope and faith that, although I am leaving Norwich now, the remainder of the quota will yet be filled by voluntary contribution which the people of Norwich will donate to the Salvation Army from now on until the Christmas holidays, bringing cheer to many unfortunates who, by the ordinances of fate, are dependent upon this kind of charity, assuring a Merry Christmas to all."

The following are the recent contributors to the Salvation Army appeal, and all further contributions will be acknowledged in this paper:

NEW PLANE PLEASING TO CHINESE AVIATORS

CANTON, Nov. 11—(AP)—Public interest in aviation has increased since the arrival here of the new Ryan-Mahoney six passenger land plane purchased by the South China government, and another plane has been bought.

So pleased are Chinese aviators of the plane which is similar to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's second "Spirit of St. Louis," that a good-will flight to Hankow, Peking and Shanghai has been staron by W. J. Chang and two Cantonese pilots. Before leaving Canton, Chang said that the aviation school had been literally swamped with requests for rides from government officials and private individuals who heretofore were afraid to fly. He predicted the early establishment of air mail service throughout Kwantung from Canton and eventually to Hankow.

The parade, result of three months intensive protest against the cigar-making machine, was participated in by cigar makers unions from virtually all the island, the various contingents flying banners on which were inscribed: "Machines mean idleness, no work and starvation." "We want governmental legislation against machines," and other significant slogans. It was indicated by President Machado that the wishes of the cigar makers would be considered and a possible law passed for their protection.

FOOTBALL GAMES SATURDAY PROVIDE BIGGEST UPSETS OF PRESENT SEASON

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(AP)—Through the gloom and smoke of Pittsburgh's steel mills, a football giant in Tartan played in the raging "Skibo of Carnegie Tech"—pushed its head and shoulders today above the bruised and battered pigskin minions who set out with such high hopes of ultimates eastern football supremacy, a scant five weeks ago.

Under the feet of the giant, trampled in the run of one of football's cataclysmic Saturday's, lay the battered form of Georgetown, smothered and bruised from the sectional race by a 13 to 0 defeat. Only Army's formidable host, listening tonight to "taps" on the West Point plains that sounded a knell to national championship hopes and Boston college's undefeated and untied warriors, lifted head to bar the Tartan way.

On the Army record, however, was the smirch of unexpected defeat, rubbed in there Saturday by the "ramblers" of Notre Dame in a 12 to 6 upheaval of the very best brand of pigskin "dope." Boston college as yet untried by such opposition as faced Army and Carnegie Tech, had no return to offer for Saturday and looked to tomorrow and battle with Fordham's dangerous squad, with plenty of apprehension and Georgetown, the latter the only team able so far to take the measure of New York university's violent Violets, the high scoring outfit of the nation. Ahead lay Notre Dame, conqueror of Army as well as those same Violets to make the remainder of the season and the march to the title anything but a placid way.

In the echo of taps at West Point there still must have sounded tonight in the ears of Army's tired warriors the pounding Johnny O'Brien's feet left on the Yankee stadium turf. For three periods of a thriller, breath-taking battle, Johnny huddled in the sidelines, his mates, rising from the debacle of defeat at the hands of Wisconsin and Georgia Tech, dazzled the Army stalwarts with speed, skill and power. Then in the fourth quarter, when victory hung in the balance, Johnny shed his blanket, tore out to the ramblers flank and snared an arching pass from Johnny Niemic that covered almost half of the field. Victory hung on that flying pigskin and as O'Brien, the substitute tucked it away over the goal, there came to Notre Dame the most satisfying win in the long and bitter series with West Point's finest. Army ripped and tore, "Red" Cagle flashed his flashiest, but game and hopes of national supremacy were lost to Army for another season.

While Carnegie outplayed Georgetown in every department to inaugurate "big league" football in Albany, N. Y., and won as upheavals in other parts of the east made bigger and better casualties out of major elevents that once hold the spotlight.

The smooth power in Pennsylvania's great eleven held a crude Harvard giant helpless and pushed further beyond the memory of the Navy defeat in a satisfying 7 to 0 victory. Harvard never was dangerous while Penn, rising to new heights for her great captain, Paul Scull, kept the ball continually in Crimson territory.

Yale threw the eleven that will face Harvard and Princeton into the breach but could not stop Maryland's inspired crew. A single touchdown, 6 to 0, measured the southerners' margin of victory but it was enough despite the presence of Yale's aces, already beaten by Army. Another sad tale, equally as unexpected was unfolded from the Hanover hills, where Brown, rising out of major defeat cut down Dartmouth, 14 to 0, and nullified the best efforts of Al Marsters, one of the east's fleetest ball carriers.

The major intersectional clashes of the day brought only added shocks to the east. Syracuse tackled Ohio Wesleyan and was thrown for a six to nothing loss while a highly favored Navy team just hitting its stride after early season defeats, could get no better than a six to six draw with Michigan.

The tide swung in more normal fashion to New York university, climbing back from the Georgetown defeat with a 20 to 0 slaughter of Alfred. Princeton overpowered Washington and Lee, 25 to 12, Pittsburgh battered Washington and Jefferson, 25 to 0, but Cornell was forced to accept a nothing to nothing tie with tiny St. Bonaventure, the second such moral defeat in two years.

The problem of gaining a "breather" becoming more difficult each year with the rise of the small elevens, was particularly difficult for Columbia where John Hopkins refused to be trampled and lost only by a bare point, 14 to 13. Holy Cross defeated Boston university, 15 to 0; Maine swamped Bowdoin, 26 to 0; Lafayette downed Rutgers, 17 to 0; Colgate plastered Hobart, 21 to 0, and Penn State slaughtered George Washington, 56 to 0, but Tufts managed only to conquer Middlebury 12 to 0 and Villanova and Temple battled to a scoreless tie.

GLICK-GANS BOUT TOPS WEEK'S FISTIC CARD

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(AP)—A ten round bout between Joe Glick, the Williamsburg pants presser, and Baby Joe Gans, Pacific coast Negro star, heads the Metropolitan district's boxing card this week.

The Glick-Gans bout will head-line a popular priced card at Madison Square Garden Friday night. Glick, who formerly campaigned among the junior lightweights and once had a shot at Tod Morgan's 130-pound title, recently has established himself as one of the leading contenders for Sammy Mandell's lightweight title Despite Gans' sensational record both on the coast and here, Glick probably will go into the battle a favorite. The fight is at 135 pounds and Gans will have to be drawn pretty fine to make that poundage. Ten roundera matching Al Singer with Louis Moscowitz and Paul Silvers with Gorilla Jones also are on the card.

Johnny Dundee, veteran of hundreds of battles, returns to the ring tomorrow night against Gaston Charles French lightweight, in a 10 round bout at the new Broadway arena, Brooklyn. Dundee has an idea he has enough left to outspeed and outpunch most of the junior lightweights and lightweights of the day. The Charles' match is the first step in the veteran's attempted come-back.

ONLY NINE UNBEATEN FOOTBALL TEAMS IN EAST

NEW YORK, Nov 11.—(AP)—The defeat by Carnegie Tech not only shunted Georgetown down among the asorans but also cost the Washington team its leadership in eastern football team scoring. While Georgetown was falling before the Tartans, 13 to 0, New York University piled up 71 points against Alfred and now tops the Atlantic seactor in total points scored with 249. Georgetown is second with 247, Pennsylvania third with 188 and Carnegie fourth with 180.

Saturday's long list of reversals left only Carnegie and Boston College unbeaten and untied in the east. Seven other elevens have not been beaten but have suffered one or more ties. On the defensive side of the ledger only the Connecticut Aggies have an uncrossed goal line. The Aggies have won three games and tied three, held the opposition scoreless and tallied 59 points themselves.

FOOTBALL STAR SHOT BY CHICAGO GUNMEN

CHICAGO, Nov. 11—(AP)—John C. Acher, 21, football star and senior at Northwestern university, was shot and probably fatally wounded today after an argument that climaxed a celebration of football victories.

Acher, who is an all round athlete, was attacked by gunmen after the fenders of their automobiles scraped at a street intersection. One bullet entered his spine and will paralyze him if he lives, physicians said. Another bullet entered his leg.

GARVEY SPRAINS ANKLE IN MARYLAND GAME

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11—(AP)—Yale's stunning defeat at the hands of Maryland cost the team the services of its greatest back for use against Princeton, when it was learned today that Johnny Garvey sprained his ankle on an end run in the first quarter of yesterday's game. It was declared even uncertain whether he can be of use against Harvard. The ill-luck that is Garvey's has followed him throughout the season. An injury to his shoulder kept him on the bench against Dartmouth.

Internationals Defeat L. H. Bulldogs

Sunday afternoon, at Mohegan park, the Internationals defeated the Laurel Hill Bulldogs by the score of 24-0. Frank Barber, the International fullback, scored two touchdowns and was easily the shining light of the day. The other touchdowns were made by Economms and Stevens. Brush, the amateur heavyweight, starred for the losers. Murphy, Stevens, Quarto and D'Atri also played a good game. Next Sunday, the Internationals clash with the Duwells for the city championship and a large crowd is expected. The lineup for the winners is as follows: Nemo, c; Mingo, rg; Sheridan, rt; Quarto, re; Haggerty, lg; Ferra, rt; Stevens, le; Murphy, qb; D'Atri, lhb; Economs, rhb, and Barber, fb. Referee, Charles Andrew Connell; timekeeper, Buttsy Slattery; Neil Murphy, manager.

Tigers Win

In a fast game Sunday the Tigers defeated the Lions. The score was 24 to 6. Mahoney made the touchdowns for the winners. Rosenberg played a very nice game for the losers, and Aldo made one touchdown. Wop Sabino wrecked all the good chances of his team by too rotten playing. The Lions think Sabino is the dumbest mascot they had, and the Tigers think the same of Lamparelli. We hereby notify all players not to take them on their teams. A fair amount of people watched the game.

LOCAL BOYS ON NEW LONDON CARD

Three Norwich boys will appear on the amateur card at Joe Connelly's Golden street Arena card at New London on Wednesday evening. These boys are the cream of the local amateur talent and will furnish the feature attractions on the card of eight bouts. The boys are Young Sharkey, Baby Joe Gans and Johnny Dosh.

Young Sharkey, who is coming to the front in local pugilistic circles, will be starred in the main bout in which he will meet Young Dunn of New London in what will without doubt be one of the real battles of the evening. Sharkey is one hard-hitting boy and besides his ability to punch he possesses remarkable stamina and can absorb punishment without giving ground.

Baby Joe Gans, the dusky midget from the West Side, is to appear on the card against a New London boxer in the 100-pound class. Baby Joe is a sweet little boxer with all the tricks and fine points of the veteran ring campaigner. He is shifty, quick as lightning to pick an opening and keeps his head when the going is rough. The midget has been boxing ever since he was five years old and has picked up enough ring experience in exhibition bouts to carry him through the amateurs in such style as to make him a real favorite. As can be expected of a boy of only 100 pounds, Baby Joe does not pack such a terrific punch but he lands often with clean blows that pile up a count in his favor. Matching him with a boy of his own weight is the most difficult problem that faces the matchmaker. With a boy of his own weight it is a safe bet that the midget will take the honors on points. It is a pleasure to watch this youngster perform in the ring.

The other Norwich entry is Johnny Dosh, who fought numerous times in the amateurs here last winter. Johnny is another finished boxer who always pleases the crowd when he steps into a ring. Johnny is a boxer, not a slugger, although his punches carry a sting. He, like Gans, possesses boxing skill and instinct that is not found in the average amateur. Johnny has been matched with Larry O'Brien of New London, a coming amateur from the Whaling city.

The other bouts will bring together boys from Montville, Willimantic, Westerly and New London. These boys will be matched on the night of the show, according to their weights. This is the second show that Connelly has run in New London and a banner crowd is expected on Wednesday evening.

High School Sports

The Academy is listed twice on the Torrington basketball schedule, Jan. 19 at Torrington and Feb. 15 at Norwich.

Hartford high has sounded the basketball call.

Westerly and Stonington provide the interesting sports news hereabouts today. Their grid game, Stonington winning, will decide the championship of the Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league. The hopes of the Academy lie with Westerly.

The standing of the Academy and Stonington, leaders in the league, follows:

| | W. | L. | T. | Pts. | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Stonington | 2 | 0 | 1 | 5 | 1.000 |
| N. F. A. | 2 | 1 | 0 | 4 | .667 |

Just two more week-ends of football in these parts.

HARTFORD HIGH PROVES TOO STRONG FOR ACADEMY WHICH LOSES 12 TO 0

Hartford High scored a 12 to 0 victory over the Academy gridders Saturday afternoon at the campus before the largest crowd of the season. A forward pass in each instance was to large measure responsible for the two touchdowns by the vistors.

In the second quarter a long toss, Ward to Hayden, for about 40 yards, climaxed a short but snappy march by the Insurance City lads while early in the final period Hayden took another pass, this for about 15 yards and landed on the 2 yard line, from where Kenny, went over easily for the score.

Aerials Prominent

The aerial game was put to considerable use by both clubs. Hartford High was more successful, probably because they used this weapon with greater tact. The visitors expected a strong passing game by the locals and had an extra-strong defense.

was sponsored by a number of women's

The Academy used probably more passes than it should. The Red and White tried at the Hartford line at the outset but found it very strong and then went into the air for the big part of the distance. Just by the slightest margin did the locals miss a couple of long tosses that would have meant something while Hartford, on the other hand, collected the greater part of their tosses both far and near and the two, in particular, that Hayden, the clever quarterback nabbed in the second and fourth quarters, the first for a touchdown and the second for the next-to-the last step in one, were beauties.

Much Hartford Fumbling

Neither team showed a consistent offensive. The Hartford line was too heavy and powerful for the Academy and their passing defense generally good, while the Insurance City outfit lost chance after chance to start for the Academy goal by fumbling. The visitors handled the ball about as loosely as anything seen around here this year.

In the first quarter alone they were stopped on what looked like promising marches by muffing the ball and for the rest of this period and part of the next these mistakes kept them with their backs to their own goal.

The punts went back and forth from Hartford goal to midfield during this time until the visitors got a break on a partially blocked Academy kick near midfield. The ball went offside at about Hartford's 40 yard mark and then Hartford, on dashes by Kenny and Hayden came up past midfield and down past the 40 yard line, when the first touchdown on the pass to Hayden came. Hayden received the toss over near the sidelines and, although Chet Berghinzo made a brave attempt to get him and was knocked out in so trying, the Hartford captain made the score easily. The try for extra point was blocked by Mish.

Third Period Even.

The third period was a punting session with the play in between the 40 yard marks for the most time until Hartford intercepted a pass on the Academy's 30 yard line as the quarter ended. Hartford continued its fumbling in this period but was fortunate enough to recover on every occasion, although losing considerable ground.

Almost as soon as the last period opened the visitors proceeded to march on to the Academy goal line. Every member of the visiting backfield had a chance until the ball was placed on the 15 yard mark. The Academy then held and Hartford gained but three yards in three downs and looked in a good way to olse the ball on downs. However, on last down came the pass to Hayden who was downed on the two yard mark and Kenny then scored. The try for extra point was high and wide.

The Academy spurted a bit after receiving the kickoff and got down inside Hartford's 20 yard line on runs by LaCroix and Marks and a few nice passes but Hayden intercepted a toss and therafter the game was as good as over.

Jack Marks Brilliant

Jack Marks played a slashing defensive game for the Academy, time and again breaking upp lays unaided. Jack also was the only one able to gain consistently in the Academy's running plays. Freddy Fox, Mish and Chet Berghinzo also showed great games. Hayden, Kenney, Hogan and Urban were best for Hartford.

WILDCAT SCRATCHES

For the first time this year there was some cheering from the Academy side. Hartford had a band and a large delegation of rooters and generally made things lively.

Hartford's team is about the largest in state football. It surely is the heaviest that has appeared here in some time. Hayden, the captain-quarterback, is a nice player.

The crowd must have numbered around 1,500.

Hartford expected to use its seconds but only in the last minute were the reserves rushed in.

This was five victories in six starts for the visitors and three defeats in five games for the Wildcats. The Academy has lost three of its last four games.

Next comes Stonington on the Academy's schedule. And then Bulkeley.

SPEAKER TO MANAGE NEWARK CLUB

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 11—(AP)—Tris Speaker, famous major league outfielder for the past 22 years, today signed a two-year contract to manage the Newark Internationals, James P. Sinnott, president of the club, announced. He succeeds Walter Johnson, who has taken over the reins of the Washington Americans.

Speaker came to terms with President Sinnott after a short conference, he terms were not disclosed but it is understood "Spoke," in taking over his first minor league assignment since he was a rookie, will receive one of the largest salaries paid any class "AA" club.

Speaker will be a playing manager, Sinnott announced, and expects to put in full time in the outfield. He left tonight for Cleveland, after signing a contract for 1929-30, but will begin immediately the job of building the Newark Bears for next year's International league race. He will attend the minor league sessions at Toronto in December before marshalling his forces at training camp in St. Augustine, Florida, later.

Long famous as perhaps the greatest defensive outfielder of his time, as well as a great batting star, Speaker wound up his major league career last year with the Athletics, slowing up to such an extent that he occupied the bench most of the time. Waivers recently were asked on him, as well as Ty Cobb by Connie Mack.

Speaker divided the main part of his major league career between Boston and Cleveland, where he managed a world's championship club in 1920, but spent the last two years in Washington and Philadelphia. Like many another famous star he was bought for a song, costing the Boston Red Sox only $400 when he was bought from Houston of the Texas league in 1907.

As a member of the great Red Sox outfield with Hooper and Lewis, Speaker figured in the pennant-winning Boston combinations of 1912 and 1915, then went to Cleveland for an 11-year stay, succeeding Lee Fohl as manager in mid-season of 1919.

Rusty Has to Swim

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

The thing you have to do, you can;
'Tis true of bird and beast and man.
—Old Mother West Wind.

For several days after his adventure with Reddy Fox and Redtail the Hawk, as he was crossing the Green Meadows, there were few adventures for Rusty the Fox Squirrel. He continued his journey in quest of a place where nuts were more plentiful. Of course, he had some small adventures, but they didn't amount to a great deal. A dog chased him up a tree; a cat tried to steal up on him. But such enemies he could laugh at.

Each day saw Rusty further from the Green Meadows and the Green Forest at Farmer Brown's. Sometimes he had to cross open fields. Sometimes his way led him through pieces of woodland. There he always stopped to hunt for mice. But at last Rusty came to a great body of water. When he looked one way, there was water as far as he could see. When he looked the opposite way, there was water as far as he could see. But when he looked straight across, he could see a green forest that looked very inviting.

"I almost know that I will find nuts over there," said Rusty to himself, as he sat looking across. "There just must be nuts over there. But how am I going to get there? I can't go around, for it would take too long. Oh, dear, I do so want to get over there!"

The longer Rusty sat looking across this lake—for that is what it was—the more he wanted to get on the other side. At this particular point the lake was not very wide. That is, you or I would not have thought it very wide, but to such a little fellow as a squirrel it looked very wide indeed. So Rusty hesitated and hesitated. He would put first one paw and then the other paw in the water. Then he would shake them and sit up with the two little paws buried in the fur of his breast and gaze longingly across to the other side.

At last his courage became great enough, or perhaps it was his longing overcame his fear. Anyway, he waded into the water and started to swim across. You didn't know that Rusty the Fox Squirrel could swim? Of course he can. Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel can swim. Chatterer the Red Squirrel can swim. Most, if not all, animals can swim when they have to. Straight out he started, and how he did make those little legs of his go! The fact is, he made them go too fast. CUT-HERE 7898..

He made them go so fast that he soon began to grow tired.

Now, happily, the wind was not blowing, so the water was smooth. Rusty paddled along, paddled along, and drew further and further away from one shore and nearer and nearer to the other shore. By and by there came a time when one shore was just as far away as the other shore. You see, he was just in the middle of the lake. By this time he had grown very tired. His big, plumy tail had become wet and was a drag.

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Rusty under his breath. "I wish I hadn't tried to come across. Whatever shall I do? I can't go on and I can't go back. Whatever, ever shall I do? I guess I'll drown. I wish I hadn't left the Green Forest. I wish I had stayed with Happy Jack and taken my chances of getting food enough. I don't want to drown!"

Just then Rusty's nose bumped something. It was a stick of wood. It wasn't very big, but it was big enough to give Rusty a chance to rest a little and still keep afloat. How thankful Rusty was! He got his head and his forepaws on that stick and there he rested. Meanwhile, he was getting no nearer to either shore, but was drifting down the lake a little. He still wished he hadn't undertaken to swim the lake.

POETRY

The American Legion

Thy glory, France, the splendor of the soul,
Are dear to us who owe to thee a debt;
For from the past the memories unroll
Of stricken fields and of the foe we met.

The tie is close that binds thee to our past
Whose fathers staked their fortune on a chance;
Who faced defeat that time the die was cast,
Their only hope the sturdy arm of France.

Thy strivings and thy victories are ours,
Thy heroes and our heroes are the same;
And where our dead are sleeping fall the flowers
That Frenchmen cull in honor of their fame.

We've given thee the little that we could,
It was not in our manhood to forget;
Beside thee on the battle line they've stood
Who've paid thee with their lives for Lafayette.

—Edward M. Van Zile in New York Sun

Autumn Planting

There, little bulbs, all satin bright,
Good night, good night!
I made your bed full soft and deep—
Now go to sleep.

The winds that will go roving by
Shall sing to you a lullaby;
The snow shall weave you, soft and warm,
A cover thick against the storm.

Often now I shall think of you
When the high heavens are coldly blue
Over an earth all chilly white,
Thinking "Good morning!" not "Good night!"

Sleeping and dreaming, you shall hear—
Waking to joy when Spring draws near—
The sunshine's whisper, rain drops' call,
And little breezes—but that is not all!

Always, always, a Something More
That draws you up through earth's brown floor;
And your beauty and sweetness still must be Pledge of that Something More to me!

—Minnie Leona Upton, in Christian Science Monitor.

She—Heavens, no! If you call this dancing I can easily imagine what sitting out with you would be like.—The Tiger.

The motorist is said to be rivaling the angler and the golfer as a teller of lies. You should hear his description of the whopping pedestrian he just missed.—Punch.

BUSINESS AND TRADE ADVANCED ALONG A BROAD FRONT LAST WEEK

NEW YORK Nov. 11—(AP)—Business and trade continued the steady advance of recent months along a broad front last week while the result of the national balloting brought so much violent spurt as it did in the securities market.

The metal industry still maintained its lead. Steel ingot production in October reached a new high record for that month and for the year. Pig iron displayed aggressive strength advancing on several markets while the rather light seasonal decline in automobile requirements continued it was practically offset by a growing demand for railway equipment. The building industry continued to make history statistics for total contracts let as compiled by F. W. Dodge corporation reaching a new high record in October.

The week brought another assortment of excellent earnings statements and extra dividends General Motors corporation announced the expected 2 1-2 for one stock split and $2.50 extra dividend. Radio Corporation of America announced third quarterly earnings more than double those of last year and the radio industry generally was operating at record capacity. In textiles better conditions were apparent all along the line from the producing to the retail ends.

Wheat prices, however, suffered somewhat on bearish crop reports from the southern hemisphere, cotton prices sagged early in the week, but steadied on publication of the government crop report. Corn improved as snow in the west delayed husking.

Insolvencies during the week showed a marked decline from the previous week end the like week a year ago. Bank clearings were extremely heavy, reflecting the enormous trading in securities. Car loadings for the latest week sagged somewhat from the previous week, but were still substantially ahead of a year ago. While bankers saw no immediate prospect of substantial improvement in the credit situation, gold continued to trickle in from London, carrying the total since the return of the flow in this direction above $30,000,000.

JEWETT CITY

PERLEY E. MELVIN DIES IN CAR IN HIS GARAGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 11—Perley E. Melvin, 65, was asphyxiated by monoxide gas, while sitting his his automobile in the garage at his home, late Saturday night. He had eaten a lunch about 9 o'clock and his wife supposed he had fallen asleep in the kitchen. When she went to awaken him, he was not there, and she opened the door to the cellar, noticed the fumes of the gas from the garage, and heard the engine running. She ran to Fred Maynard's store for help and Mr. Maynard, at great risk to himself, entered the garage, opened the outside door and pushed the machine out of doors. Mr. Melvin evidently had gone down to warm up the engine, forgetting to open the door.

Mr. Melvin was a retired printer, having closed his services at Asphook bleachery in August, after having been employed there for 22 years, continuously, also a few years before. H was born in Lowell, Mass., Jan. 20, 1863, the son of Joshua and Euphemia Buxton Melvin. He is survived by his wife and two sons, Sidney of Jewett City, and Carl of New York. A sister lives in the west. He was a member of Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75, F. & A. M.

MEMORIAL SERVICE SUNDAY HELD AT BAPTIST CHURCH

At the Baptist church, Sunday, supplementing the morning worship, a memorial service, Facing the East, was carried out by the pastor and people. In connection with a sermon recalling the tenth anniversary of Armistice day delivered by Rev. E. E. Scates, this form, prepared by the Commission on International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, was of special interest. As the introduction proceeded, Miss Winifred Scates sang most expressively The Vacant Chair.

The Dudley Gospel Crusaders were in town Sunday. The three Protestant churches were visited and good-sized union audiences enjoyed their interesting services. Delwyn Martin of Lisbon is a student at this institute and was one of the singers.

Boys with air guns are reported to be doing damage. In one case a pet cat was set upon a well and was used as a target by boys with these guns. The owner found four slugs in the cat's skin.

Finn's, tonight; Four Sons. The year's greatest picture. Lang's orchestra.—adv.

Those who attended the minstrel show in connection with St. Paul's church in Plainfield Saturday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gill, Mrs. Clifford Peterson and daughter, Leah, and Donald Gill; Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Willis and son, Mrs. Oscar Campbell; Misses S. K. Adams, Helen Hull, Beatrice Cathcart, Margaret Jordan, Jean Burleson, Dorothy Paul, Harry Paul, Atwood Brainard, Everett Thornton, Charles Perkins and Mrs. H. E. Paul. In the cast were Agnes, Madeline, Marguerite and Susan Gill and Arthur Bromsfield of Jewett City. Charles Perkins was violinist and Mrs. H. E. Paul was a member of the committee of arrangements. The very dainty dresses worn by all the girls in the show were made of material from Ashland Cotton company.

Radio owners found it necessary to do considerable fishing, Sunday, to locate the familiar broadcasting stations. New wave length assignments have changed several of those with the finest Sunday programs.

Remembering the tenth anniversary of Armistice day, flags were out in several parts of the borough.

A visit to Simon Brewster's apple orchards at this time is of much interest. There one may see a sample of the finest of eastern Connecticut's harvests. Representing 31 standard New England varieties, there are over 2,000 bushels, hand picked, and ready for market. In Mr. Brewster's harvest, the uniform fair and smooth fruit is proof of the benefits of systematic spraying.

Dr. H. P. Talbot of the Connecticut state department of health is to give an illustrated lecture on Social Hygiene at the Town hall in Jewett City Tuesday, Nov. 13, at 8 p. m., in cooperation with Miss Bessie Myers, educational supervisor, department of farm and rural work, National Council of Jewish Women. The lecture is open to the public.

The annual Red Cross roll call commences in this chapter's jurisdiction next Thursday night.

OAKDALE MAN'S CONDITION SERIOUS AT NEW LONDON HOSPITAL SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11—Joseph Horgey, about 20, of Yantic, was instantly killed Saturday afternoon, Michael Onuparik, about 21, of Oakdale was seriously injured, and Mrs. Pauline Hoch, Jersey City, N. J., slightly injured, at Lyme, when the machine Mrs. Hoch was driving and a motorcycle, with side-car, driven by Onuparik, collided. Horgey's skull was fractured. His body was brought to a New London undertaking establishment. Onuparik suffered a multiple fracture of the left leg and possible internal injuries. Mrs. Hoch received lacerations on the right leg, lip and face. Onuparik and Mrs. Hoch are patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where this afternoon it was stated that Onuparik's condition was serious, although it had not been determined whether he has suffered internal injuries. Mrs. Hoch's condition was said to be favorable.

The automobile was headed toward New London and the motorcycle was traveling in the opposite direction. The motorcycle rounded a curve as the automobile approached and instead of the driver keeping the cycle on the right hand side of the highway, he continued to drive in the center of the road. Mrs. Hoch, believing that a crash was to occur, applied the brakes suddenly, causing the rear of the car to swerve toward the center of the road. The motorcycle crashed against the auto, causing Horgey and Onuparik to be hurled to the concrete surface. Horgey landed on his head and was dead when assistance reached him. The state police, Centerbrook barracks are making an investigation.

TEMPTRESS OF SAILORS SLIPS OUT OF THE TOWN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11—Nellie Britt, a young woman who appeared in New London recently, having come to this city from Virginia, was arrested Friday night as a common menace. As she forfeited her bond of $100 in the police court Saturday, she is known to have left the city. The young woman is of the type known as "fleet" or "sailor chasers," and she pursued the talents of her type in New London without molestation until complaint was made earlier in the week by an officer of the United States Coast Guard. The woman, nattily attired and driving a Hudson automobile and accompanied by two other females, one a married woman residing in New London, would pass through State and Bank streets and solicit the company of the bluejackets. Upon a complaint of officers at the Coast Guard station. The driver was arrested. She secured her liberty by depositing three diamond rings with a bondsman, who supplied a real estate bond in the sum of $100. Saturday, instead of going to court, the Britt woman notified her bondsman that she intended to forfeit her bail and that she would forward cash to the bondsman that she might recover her gems. The Britt woman left the city and was accompanied by the married woman, who induced her husband, to draw his wages and gave as an excuse for leaving the city that her mother was seriously ill and that she was going to her parent's bedside.

Leon Pivtrowski, of Oakdale, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, was fined $100 and costs.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Cecil B. De Mille's production, "The King of Kings," was cordially received at the Breed theatre last night. The picture justifies all the praise it has evoked. The feeling of the spectators was reverent delight. Awesome scenes of Christ's persecution and suffering drew tears of sympathy, but in the last 15 minutes the joy of those who beheld the Risen Lord and received His message was shared in by all. Never in the memories of theatrical plays are theatregoers so completely uplifted by transcendent emotion as in this viewing of "The King of Kings."

The various Biblical characters in the gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John are easily recognizable. Unquestionably the finest characterization is H. B. Warner in the role of Jesus of Nazareth, first portrayed as the artisan Healer in Galilee, next as the Divine Man who cleansed the temple, finally identified by His disciples and by the centurion who saw Him dying on the cross. Mr. Warner acts the greatest of historical roles with a fine reverence and sympathy and with a humanness not devoid of glints of humor.

Ernest Torrence is a wonderful St. Peter, while Joseph Schildkraut contributes a remarkable study of Judas, who betrays his Master for 30 pieces of silver. Set against the portrayal of the Divine Man by Warner are two powerful worldly characters, the High Priest Caiaphas, portrayed by Rudolph Schildkraut, and the Roman Governor Pilate, enacted by Victor Varconi.

Among the women, Jacqueline Logan's splendid characterization of Mary Magdalene stands out as one of the greater pieces of acting in the films of this era. Dorothy Cumming as the Holy Mother, Majel Coleman as the wife of Pilate, and Julia Faye and Josephine Norman as Martha and Mary of Bethany, contribute worthy portrayals.

"The King of Kings" is not mere movie entertainment—but it presents the most accurate depiction of New Testament times that has ever been offered. Lastly and pre-eminently, it is Spirit on the screen; bringing new beauty into the lives of all. Don't miss this picture.

Palace Theatre

A throbbing love tale, with an undercurrent of fraternal pride is "The First Kiss," co-starring Fay Wray and Gary Cooper, "Paramount's Glorious Young Lovers," which opened at the Palace theatre last night.

The story briefly centers around the love of a young man of poor state for a girl who is rich. His three brothers are lazy, but having family pride, the brother, who is Gary Cooper, forces them to choose professions and he sends them to school. How he finances them, and how the story is brought to a brilliant climax, will stamp it in the memory of everyone who sees it.

In the supporting cast are: Lane Chandler, Leslie Fenton, Paul Fix, Malcolm Williams and Monroe Owsley. Roland V. Lee directed. The entire picture was produced at St. Michaels, Maryland being the locale of the story.

All the way from Culver City to the mountain fastness of Lake Tahoe for a single sequence!

This new record in film enterprise was established by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in filming "Beau Broadway," now playing at the Palace theatre as the new Lew Cody-Aileen Pringle co-starring picture.

Although accustomed to the warm sunshine of Southern California, the Cody-Pringle company went right to work in the blizzard and obtained the remarkable snow scenes that are to be seen in "Beau Broadway."

In the cast with Cody and Miss Pringle are Sue Carol, 1928 Wampas Baby Star; Hugh Trevor, Heinie Conklin, James J. Jeffries, former world's champion; Kit Guard and Jack Herrick.

Mal St. Clair wrote the story for the Cody-Pringle team and George O'Hara prepared the screen adaptation.

Broadway Theatre

Adjectives fail this reviewer when it comes to telling about "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the Universal masterpiece, which had its gala premiere yesterday at the Broadway theatre.

Each player might have been born to play his respective role. Margarita Fischer brings to her portrayal of the harassed Eliza a poignant realism almost breath-taking in its power. Her scenes with Simon Legree and Cassie, and those beautiful moments with George and Little Harry combine to make an unforgettable performance.

The thrill of the picture is the celebrated scene wherein Eliza crosses the ice, for which not enough credit can be given the director, Harry Pol-lard. James Lowe as Uncle Tom enacts his role with a mighty simplicity and strength in marked dramatic contrast to the burly, brutal Simon Legree of George Siegmann.

Spiritual and ethereal is the fragile Little Eva enacted by nine-year-old Virginia Grey, a newcomer to the screen and a child whose talents will make her eventually one of the screen's most outstanding personalities. Side-splitting comedy is supplied by the inimitable Lucien Littlefield as the crafty, hypocritical Marks, the lawyer, and diminutive Mona Ray as the mischievous Topsy, who "jes' growed."

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" is crowded with big scenes, any of which make the climax for an ordinary picture. Those especially outstanding are the Shelby home, the St. Clare mansion, the Legree place, the death of Little Eva, the river sequence, Eliza crossing the ice, the auction rooms and the smashing finale. The production beggars description. It is the one picture we can whole-heartedly recommend for every member of the family.

Owing to the extreme length of this feature, it being nearly 12,000 feet long, it is shown at 6:30 and 9 p. m each evening and the matinee performance at 2:30 p. m. Norwich theatregoers are strongly urged to attend either the matinees or the early evening performance in order to avoid the crowds which have attended wherever "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has been shown.

Sour Stomach Sign of Carelessness

POLITE society frowns on those whose stomachs "grumble." For careful people heed this warning that the contents of the stomach is sour and fermenting. Those who don't, may some day develop gastritis—or even ulcers.

Nine times out of ten indigestion and allied stomach disorders are due to excess stomach acid, which impedes normal digestion and forms sour gases that cause intense pain. To restore good digestion you must eliminate this cause. A tablet of "Pape's Diapepsin" after eating or when pain is felt will instantly neutralize the acidity and banish all digestive trouble and pain.

So, do buy a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapepsin" today. This not only means instant relief, but by soothing, healing and strengthening your weak and disordered stomach a little "Pape's Diapepsin" keeps your digestive system healthy and helps to prevent various disorders.

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Bayer Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If it says Bayer, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it is not! Headaches are dispelled by Bayer Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Bayer—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Bayer Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

RAN AUTOMOBILE INTO GROUP OF WOMEN AND CHILDREN AT TAFTVILLE

Five persons were injured, one of them seriously, at 1:20 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when they were struck by a brand new Ford coupe driven by Frank Mader of No. 15 Dunham street, an attendant at the state tuberculosis hospital, while waiting for the trolley at the Lisbon (iron) bridge atop on Norwich avenue, Taftville.

Mrs. Arthur Bessette of No. 43 Norwich avenue, who is seriously injured and is at the William W. Backus hospital, narrowly escaped instant death when she was struck by the machine and thrown onto the trolley tracks, just as the trolley, for which the group of about six persons was waiting, came to a stop with the front wheels within an inch of her neck.

The others injured are Mrs. William Emerson and daughter, Margaret, 6, of Lisbon. Mrs. Emerson is suffering from a scalp wound on the back of the head, a cut on the right hand and numerous bruises about the entire body. She was attended by Dr. George Thompson of Taftville at his office, where she was taken by Thomas Donohue of Taftville in his automobile. Three stitches were taken to close the wound in the head and two in the hand. Her daughter received minor bruises to the body.

Mrs. Bernadette Desrosiers of 59 Norwich avenue sustained bruises to the lower limbs and was also treated by Dr. Thompson. Mrs. Bessette's son, Arthur, aged 9 years, received bruises about the body.

These five persons were waiting for the trolley due in Franklin square at 1:45, and were standing in the highway on the easterly side at the time of the accident. The first trolley had passed by, not stopping to pick up passengers, and as the second trolley appeared, a second group of people including Misses Rose, Helen and Cecile Legarre of Norwich avenue, Miss Annamae Raymond of Norwich avenue and her sister, Clara, aged 12 years, started across the street from the sidewalk with the intention of boarding it.

The trolley had come to almost a complete stop when the Ford car traveling in a northerly direction rounded the curve at a rapid rate of speed it is alleged, and to avoid striking the group of persons walking across the highway he swerved to the right and struck the group standing on the easterly side of the road, eye witnesses claim. Clarence Szalkowski, one of the group, saw the automobile approaching and jumped across the tracks in front of the moving trolley and clear of the car. The other five persons were knocked to the ground, the right front mudguard and bumper hitting them, it is said by eye witnesses.

Mrs. Desrosiers held onto the front mudguard of the machine and was carried a distance of about 60 feet. As the automobile came to a stop she rolled off onto the ground. Mrs. Bessette was thrown to the ground with her head resting on the trolley track and it is said her coat collar was caught under the front wheel of the trolley before it stopped. The alert and quick action of the motorman Clarence Singer, in bringing the trolley to a sudden stop, saved her from instant death. It was necessary to move the trolley in order to pick her up.

Mrs. Bessette was carried into her home, which is located on the opposite side of the street from where the accident occurred, and the Backus hospital was notified, to which institution she was taken in the ambulance in an unconscious condition. She regained consciousness, however, Sunday morning. Her injuries comprise a compound fracture of the skull, a fractured nose, multiple lacerated wounds and contusions and a severe traumatic shock.

Mader reported the accident at Norwich police headquarters, but was unable to tell there the names of the persons injured.

Mader is under $200 bonds to appear in the city court on a reckless driving charge, made against him after State Policeman Arthur Whitmarsh of the Groton barracks had made an investigation of the accident. The reckless driving charge will be held against him pending the outcome of the injuries to Mrs. Bessette.

MAYOR ROBBINS FIRST HERE IN RED CROSS ROLL CALL

Mayor Lee R. Robbins is the first person in Norwich to answer the twelfth annual roll call of the American Red Cross.

A contribution was received Sunday by the Norwich chapter, accompanied by a letter in which he expressed hope that "everyone will consider it a privilege and a duty to join this legion of mercy."

The mayor's membership was sent in anticipation of the opening of the local campaign November 11 to enroll 2,500 members as part of the national enrollment of five million members for the ensuing year. Only fifty cents of each membership fee will go for the national and international work of the Red Cross, while the balance will remain here to finance the work of the chapter. Special efforts are being made to secure larger memberships than those carrying the one dollar fee, as only from them can the chapter net sufficient revenue to carry on its work.

The letter accompanying the mayor's contribution follows:

City of Norwich, Conn.,
November 10, 1928.

Mr. Charles Coit,
Chairman Norwich chapter,
American Red Cross,
Norwich, Conn.
Dear Mr. Coit:

For the inclosure please continue me a member of the national Red Cross for the coming year.

People generally should, as in the past, consider it a privilege, if not a Godly duty, to add their mite to an organization so substantially founded, so extensive in its scope of charitable relief, so persistent in the protection of the public health, and so efficient and effective in every emergency.

It is my earnest hope that the citizens of Norwich will evidence their appreciation of the humanitarian service continually rendered by the Red Cross by hastening to become members during the present roll call.

Cordially yours,
LEE R. ROBBINS, Mayor.

False Alarm for Fire

At 7:40 o'clock Saturday evening the fire department answered to a call for a supposed fire in the Veterans of Foreign Wars rooms in the Olympic building on Water street. An oil stove in the rooms was lighted and filled them with smoke. The windows were opened to allow the smoke to escape and a person on the street notified the fire department, as he thought there was a fire in progress in the building. The building is owned by Dr. N. B. Lewis.

Two Brush Fires

There were two calls for brush fires received by the fire department Saturday afternoon, one at 3:30 and the other at 4:28. Mrs. Florence Graham of New London was treated at the Backus hospital Sunday afternoon for a cut in the forehead sustained in an automobile accident. The wound was closed with several stitches.

ARRESTED SEVEN IN LIQUOR WARRANT RAIDS

Six men and one woman were gathered in Saturday morning by the state and local police on charges of violation of the liquor law. A large quantity of alleged liquor and equipment for making liquor was seized by the police. The raids took place shortly after 11 o'clock Saturday morning and those who were arrested and charged with liquor law violations follows:

William Farrell, 48, of 43 North Main street; James Jones, 23, of 154 North Main street; Ida Roy, 261 Yantic street; Walter Morovich, 40, Norwich Town; Earl Rollinson, 32, and Arthur Disco, 33, taxi drivers, both of this city and George Pillar, 30, of 251 West Thames street.

At the place conducted by Farrell the police found 204 bottles of beer and four pint bottles containing alleged liquor. At Jones' gas station on North Main street the police found eight pint bottles of liquor, which Jones' said belonged to his employer, and was left in the place without his knowledge.

Several bottles of beer, seven pints of liquor and a 10 gallon keg of alcohol were found in the boarding house conducted by Mrs. Roy at No. 261 Yantic street.

At Pillar's place, No. 251 West Thames street, the police found nine cases of beer which it is said Pillar admitted he kept for sale, having been in the business about two months. Disco and Rollinson, local taxi drivers, it is said, sold liquor to the state police during the past week. In each case bonds of $1,000 were set and furnished. The accused will be presented in the city court for trial Wednesday morning.

LAND-UNIT VALUES IN WEST SIDE SECTION

The land-unit value map covering the West Side and the Thamesville section of the town is shown above. Reference should be made to the Friday morning issue of The Norwich Bulletin for the complete explanation and for the unit-value and map covering the downtown section of the city. Because of the great size of a map covering the entire town it is necessary that the map be published in sections, one map which covered the business district of the city having already been printed of the series of five. Interested parties are admonished to save each map and then make comparison of the unit values.

SANCTITY GOD EXPECTS FROM MAN PRIEST'S THEME

"Jesus, Keep Me Close to Thee" was the opening hymn sung by the Junior choir of St. Patrick's church Sunday, at the 9 o'clock mass, which is especially for the children. Henry J. LaFontaine was at the organ and following communion played "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name." Rev. Myles P. Galvin preached to a large congregation, late comers being obliged to stand in the galleries.

As the catechism teaches, man has been created to know, love and serve God here on earth in order to be happy with Him hereafter in heaven. This required life of sanctity to some seems impossible, the preacher said, as they think of saints as supermen, or effeminate, not human beings like ourselves, who had the same trials, the same temptations, yet who became saints by overcoming them. All are called to be either saints with God, or companions of the devil for all eternity. To meet God's requirements is not impossible. God is a kind and loving father and while He expects us to live a life of sanctity in this world, He enables us to reach that goal through the means He has given us to avoid the only thing which prevents man from pleasing God—mortal sin. The punishment for this is hell's fire. Left to ourselves we will fall into sin; but God has given us the means to keep in His favor, through prayer and the sacraments.

Father Galvin assisted Rev. John J. Reilly in giving holy communion to a very large number of penitents.

Prayers were asked for the repose of the souls of Sister M. Carola who died in Bridgeport this week and Sister Hildegarde, who died in Hartford.

NO AUTOMOBILE NUMBERS RESERVED AFTER NOV. 15

After Thursday, November 15, the state motor vehicle department will be unable to reserve special automobile registration numbers for applicants, according to an announcement made. Until the close of business on that date, however, effort will be made to supply the same registration numbers for 1929 markers as were issued in 1928, or other low numbers available.

Requests must be accompanied by correct applications and fees, and may be made to the Hartford office. Because of the rush of business and the amount of clerical work involved numbers will be assigned from that date in the order most conventient to the department.

HARTFORD MAN SPOKE BEFORE O. B. A. LODGE

A. Rubin of Hartford, sixth deputy grand master for Connecticut was the speaker before independent Norwich lodge, No. 309, I. O. B. A. at its meeting Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at 99 Main street. He was introduced by President Meyer Bumentha, and made a very clear exposition of the work of the grand lodge and the money that has been spent for charity.

On recommendation of Barnet Cohen, secretary of Norwich lodge, gold buttons of the grand lodge were presented to Moses Jennes and Wolf Blinderman in recognition of their services to the lodge.

After the meeting refreshments were served by the committee, Moses Jennes and Mr. Volovitz.

Young Woman Make Layette

A charming layette of 48 pieces was on exhibition at the November meeting of the missions department of Park church last Friday afternoon. Under the leadership of Mrs. James M. Morton a group of about 22 young women of the church met twice each month from October until May and made this layette. All handwork was finished in a dainty and individual manner. These pieces carry much love and sunshine to the recipients. Mothers in the south or midwest, some young and others discouraged and overburdened by a numerous family, receive these bits of cheer and encouragement with keen appreciation.

This group is one of about 200 home service units at work in the various Congregational churches of this state.

BRITISH LINER FOUNDERS AT SEA FATE OF 350 PERSONS UNKNOWN SHIPS FAIL TO LOCATE LIFEBOATS

The Liner Vestris, Former Queen of the South American Trade, Sank 300 Miles Off the Virginia Coast—Carried Crew of 210 Men, 129 Listed Passengers and a Few Unlisted Passengers—Many Women and at Least a Dozen Children Were Aboard—Japanese Steamer May Have Transferred the Personnel From the Sinking Ship or Made Rescues From Lifeboats—Messages From the Sinking Ship Gave No Cause For Her Condition.

(By The Associated Press.)

Hours of hardship and peril apparently was the least serious contingency faced last night by the 350 survivors of the foundered liner Vestris.

Long after the ship had plunged to the bottom, 300 miles off the Virginia coast, victim of a yet unexplained hazard of the sea, no word had come of the fate of her passengers and crew.

Strong northwest winds and a heavy sea were reported last night by ships in that vicinity.

Two of the dozen ships sent hurtling to the scene by the Vestris' broadcast S. O. S. had reported no sign could be found in the vicinity of the lifeboats in which her roster of 350 had taken refuge when the continued list of the Vestris indicated she was doomed.

Her searchlights swept the seas for miles without revealing one of the boats, the Santa Barbara said at 8 p. m. (eastern); and the San Juan tersely recounted that two and a half hours cruising over the position given by the stricken ship had been fruitless.

Officials of the Lamport & Holt line, owners of the Vestris did not see any extra cause for alarm in the failure of these two ships to pick up the boats. Since considerable time had elapsed before the arrival of the Santa Barbara or San Juan they pointed out, the small craft might have been well on their way to shore. Another possibility was the rescue of every soul, even prior to the disappearance of the Vestris, by the Japanese ship, Ohio Maru which had been reported nearest of all to the scene.

However, the hope that the Ohio Maru might have picked up some of the boats was lessened by an announcement from the New York police radio station that it had picked up a message apparently from the Japanese steamer stating it had reached the position given by the Vestris but had found no trace of the steamer or of its lifeboats.

NO CAUSE GIVEN FOR DISASTER OF THE VESTRIS

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Stricken by some mysterious ill the Lamport & Holt liner Vestris former queen of the South American trade, turned on her side off the Virginia coast today and the passengers and crew had to take to the boats.

As dark came down tonight almost 350 men and women and children were riding the stormy waves about 200 miles from shore in little lifeboats that would be their only hope to life until the first of the score or more of steamers rushing to their aid should arrive.

Messages received direct from the Vestris before she had to be abandoned told that she was sinking, lying at a 30 degree angle with her decks awash, but made no mention of the cause of her distress. The coast guard destroyer Davis, rescue-bound, relayed a message that the Vestris had sprung a leak, but how that happened was not told.

At the offices of the Lamport & Holt line here the theory that a shifting cargo might have tipped the ship over was discounted. Nor was any reasonable explanation forthcoming as to how such a liner as a crack ship for all her 16 years could suddenly spring such a leak that she had to be abandoned within a few hours' steaming distance of the Virginia Capes.

The cargo, some 6,000 tons of general merchandise, was not of such a sort, line officials said, that waves could shift it so as to keel the ship over. There was a great quantity of silk and cotton cloth, some machinery, 250 barrels of oil and considerable fruit.

There was a crew of 216 on the Vestris under Captain William Carey, commodore of the Lamport & Holt line, and in the three classes there were 129 passengers and a few unlisted ones. Among the passengers were many women and there were known to be at least half a dozen children.

The first call for help came just before 10 o'clock this morning and three hours and a half later, at 1.26, the Vestris had been deserted by all on board.

First intimation of possible disaster was merely an "S. O. S." and immediately broadcasting was shut down. It was not known at first what ship was in distress or where it was, but soon other messages began coming through the stilled ether.

The first full message read: "S. S. Vestris Lamport & Holt line, latitude 17.35 north longitude 71.8 west requires immediate assistance."

Within an hour 11 steamers flying the flag of several nations were on their way under forced draft, half a dozen coast guard craft had turned toward the scene, and the navy prepared to offer what help it could.

As the rescue fleet converged on that spot some 300 miles off Hampton Roads the messages continued to come in from the sinking vessel. The operator confined himself largely to verifying the position of the Vestris and giving what aid he could to the speeding rescuers, all of them many miles away. But he told just before noon that the passengers were beginning to go over the side into the boats, and a little later the wireless signals boomed sharply in volume, indicating that the main set was out of commission and the auxiliary ones pressed into service.

At 1.26 came the last message. This told that the ship was being abandoned and the wireless man was going along with his shipmates as it no longer was possible to transmit.

The nearest craft to go to the rescue was the coast guard cutter Davis, which reported that it ought to reach the Vestris late today. A high sea, however, may delay its arrival considerably.

The Vestris is valued at between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000. Lamport & Holt line officials said the cargo was worth several millions.

The Vestris was built for the South American trade in 1912 at Belfast.

Captain Carey, a veteran skipper, recently was appointed commodore of the Lamport & Holt line and was making his last trip on the Vestris when it was stricken today. His new ship was to be the Voltaire, flagship of the line, a newer and larger craft than the old Vestris. The Voltaire is one of the ships racing to the rescue.

The Vestris' life-saving equipment comprised 16 lifeboats, a motorboat with a capacity of 50 persons and many rafts. It was said at the company offices here. These provisions were regarded as ample to accommodate passengers and crew.

STORY OF FOUNDERING OF STEAMER VESTRIS

RAIN AND MODERATELY ROUGH SEA OFF COAST

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP)— Reports to coast guard headquarters here tonight said that rains, accompanied by mist, and a moderately rough sea were the weather conditions off the Virginia capes in the vicinity of the sinking British steamer, Vestris.

None of the coast guard vessels, rushing to pick up the steamer's passengers and crew in lifeboats, had reported their arrival at the scene. But from their weather report coast guard officials feared the rescue craft might have to wait until morning, on account of foggy conditions, to find the ship wrecked persons.

UNIDENTIFIED STEAMER REPORTED ASHORE

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 12 (AP)—A radio message from the False Cape life saving station off Cape Hatteras, to coast guard headquarters here tonight reported an unidentified steamer ashore about three miles south of the Middle Island station.

The cutter Modoc, 150 miles out at sea hurrying to the scene of the sinking Vestris, was ordered to return to assist in the rescue work of the grounded steamer.

Hoover Preparing For Good Will [redacted]

First Task of Jour[redacted]l Be Inspection of [redacted]anama Canal.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif., Nov. 13—(AP)—Herbert Hoover prepared today to leave his home in Palo Alto on Sunday to board ship at San Pedro Monday for his good will trip to South America.

The first port of call of the battleship Maryland, which will bear the president-elect and his party on the southward journey, will be Balboa, Panama Canal Zone, where Mr. Hoover will make the first task of his journey the inspection of the Panama Canal. Beyond the brief stop that will be made there, the itinerary of the president-elect has not been announced, but he desires to visit all the republics on the western coast of South America.

A definite decision regarding the acceptance of an invitation to visit Bolivia has not yet been reached.

The news was received today that Henry P. Fletcher, ambassador to Rome, would represent the state department on the trip and his choice was regarded as particularly desirable because of his wide acquaintance with the public men of South American countries, gained through his service as ambassador to Chile and Mexico, and as a member of the American delegation to various Pan-American conferences.

Mr. Fletcher is expected to join the Hoover party before it leaves Palo Alto for the journey by special train to San Pedro. Besides the ambassador, other members of the personal party of the president-elect who definitely have been informed that they would make the trip are his son, Allan, and his personal secretary, George Akerson. Mrs. Hoover probably will not go although no announcement has been made as to her plans.

The battleship Maryland, one of the newest and largest of American war craft, will be boarded at the Los Angeles port around noon of November 19. The ship now is in drydock at Sunter's Point on San Francisco bay, for the necessary reconditioning for the voyage.

The vessel will leave San Francisco Saturday, moving down the California coast to San Pedro to be refueled for the passage to Valparaiso, Chile, where Hoover's party will disembark for the land journey across the southern continent to Santiago.

ACTOR FRED STONE TALKS OVER RADIO FROM HOSPITAL

NEW LONDON, Nov. 12—(AP)—Fred Stone, inimitable actor, told a radio audience from his room in the Lawrence Memorial hospital tonight that the biggest flop he ever took landed him in a hospital bed, since that morning on the day of August 3, he said he had been having a regular vacation and that he is now fixed up as good as new.

The well known comedy actor spoke over a national hook-up of stations after first listening to his daughter Dorothy, tell him from her dressing room in a New York theatre to "come on and don't forget your lines." She sang for him over the radio three song hits from the musical comedy "Three Cheers" in which she is starred and in which Will Rogers, humorist, is pinch hitting for Stone. The last of the songs she sang, "Oh, Gee It's Great to Be Alive," was especially for her father.

Mr. Stone told her he got his cue all right and then related the kindness shown to him by friends in sending telegrams, flowers and fruit—and now a microphone. He said he was glad of the chance to acknowledge these benevolences in person and that he never knew there were so many people in the world with their hearts in the right place.

He spoke particularly of Will Rogers, co-starring with his daughter, and told a story how Rogers took up flying, with the aid of a parachute. "Rogers went up one day with Casey Jones who told him that if necessary to pull the ring of the parachute placed over his heart. Upon asking why the ring was over his heart Rogers was told 'That is the first place a man grabs for.' Stone said it wouldn't do him any good as he would choke to death.

NEW PHASE OF ACTIVITIES OF GAMBLER ROTHSTEIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)—Another aspect of Arnold Rothstein's many activities came to light today. I. Gainsburgh, counsel for the slain gambler's blood relatives who are to contest the will, said he had been informed that about $2,000,000 of Rothstein's money had been posted to guarantee the bail bonds of "master kind" criminals.

This disclosure, aside from casting light from another angle on the underworld connections of Rothstein, might further snarl the gambler's financial affairs which the executors of the will must untangle.

Gainsburgh made his statement after he had called at the office of District Attorney Banton with Mrs. Esther Rothstein, mother of the adventurer in big stakes and unconventional high finance. Rothstein cut off his parents without a cent, leaving a considerable portion to Inez Norton, former follies girl, whom he had met only a short time before he was fatally shot in the Park Central hotel a week ago.

The district attorney today ordered that a 24-hour police guard be placed in Rothstein's office to forestall any attempt to remove books or papers that might cast further light on the killing. Banton also set a watch on all safe deposit boxes held by the gambler.

Record Sales In N. Y. Stock Market

A Wild Orgy of Speculation Sent the Volume of Sales to 5,670,000 Shares.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)—Setting a new high record for sales volume at 5,670,000 shares, the New York Stock Exchange today witnessed the wildest orgy of speculation in its long and colorful history. Price movements lacked the uniformity of some recent sessions but the general trend was again upward with at least a score issues marked up $5 to $27.25 a share to new high levels.

Trading facilities of the exchange were literally swamped by the swollen streams of orders which poured onto the floor, not only from virtually every large town and city in the country but from European capitals, financial centers of the Far East and ships at sea. Half a million shares changed hands in the first 15 minutes of trading. The ticker quickly fell 15 minutes behind the market, then 20, 30, 40, 50, 60 and 70 minutes, with the final rush of trading delaying the printing of the final quotation until one hour and 35 minutes after the market closed.

Today's sales records exceeds by nearly half a million shares the previous record of 5,183,600 established just six months ago today.

The average of 20 leading industrial shares, compiled by the Associated Press, advanced nearly $5 to a new high record at $240.24, as contrasted with the year's low of $178.84, but the average of 20 leading railroad issues fell back nearly $1.75 per share.

Radio corporation common stock was the spectacular feature, soaring $27.25 a share to a new high record at $290 and then shipping back to $288. The stock sold as low as $85.25 a share this year.

Oils and coppers changed hands in tremendous volume.

The violence of the advance and the market's apparent disregard for the mounting volume of brokers' loans and the decreasing low yield of the leading securities led to heavy profit taking on the part of conservative traders. As a result, such recent favorites as American Express, Chicago & Northwestern, Dupont, General Electric, General Motors, Murray Corporation, and Stanley Co. of America lost $1.75 to $3.75 a share. Montgomery-Ward, which ran up in sensational fashion last week, dropped $14 a share and Otis Elevator $6.

Beginning early next month, all sales volume below 500 shares, except at the opening of the market, will be eliminated from the ticker in an effort to lessen the disparity between prices printed on the tape and those being registered on the floor.

NAVAL FLEET SECOND TO NONE IN THE WORLD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—On the heels of President Coolidge's declaration that this country needs additional cruisers, the navy today made public a restatement of its policy to maintain a United States naval fleet second to none in the world.

The policy has been revised in many details for the first time since the Washington arms conference in 1923. Secretary Wilbur asserted that the revision was only with respect to the elimination of obsolete projects and the expansion of he aviation branch of the service.

"The fundamental naval policy of the United States," the general board of the navy states, in making public the policy, "Is that its navy should be maintained in sufficient strength to support United States policies and commerce, and to guard its continental and overseas possessions."

RADIO COMMISSIONERS RESERVE OPINION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12— (AP) — Members of the federal radio commission today reserved their opinion as to the success or failure of their reallocation plan on the basis of yesterday's broadcasting operations, but were optimistic that a thorough trial of the new assignments would produce improved program reception.

STORY OF OVERTURES MADE TO A PROSPECTIVE JUROR

Robert N. Caldwell, Talesman For the Perjury Trial of Robert W. Stewart, Asserted That a Young Man Had Asked Him Whether He Would "Hold Out" in the Case—Court Officers Are to Conduct a Thorough Investigation of the Allegation—Judge Has Ordered the Jury Locked Up For Its Duration.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—With an investigation being made into statements made by a prospective juror that he had been approached about the perjury trial of Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, Justice Jennings Bailey today ordered the jury selected to hear the case to be locked up for its duration.

This action came at the close of the opening session, as Frank J. Hogan, chief defense counsel, was concluding his opening statement to the jury. The nine men and three women had earlier heard the government's case, sketched by Leo A. Rover, district attorney.

Robert N. Caldwell, the second of 28 talesmen examined by the court, interrupted the procedure temporarily with a statement that a young man had visited him at home yesterday and inquired whether he would "hold out" in the case. He said this visitor had given his name as "McGinnis" and asked "if I knew Hogan."

Prosecution and defense counsel conferred at the bench, after which Caldwell described the visitor as about 21 years old, light complexioned and wearing a gray suit. Rover said the description tallied with a man he had in mind, but during luncheon recess Caldwell faced the man and failed to identify him.

Caldwell, an elderly butter dealer, asserted outside the court that the visitor had wanted to know whether he was a Catholic. His version of the visit was received in detail by court officers who said it would be investigated thoroughly. Caldwell was excused from service in the case through a peremptory challenge by the defense.

All of the jurors, as finally selected denied acquaintance with any figures involved in the oil scandals, or counsel in trials growing out of these, or with witnesses in the present case. Rover announced that the government witnesses would include Senator Bye, of North Dakota, chairman of the senate public lands committee before which Stewart is charged with having sworn falsely about the liberty bond transactions of the Continental Trading company.

The three counts of the perjury indictment were explained to the jury by Rover, who said the prosecution expected to prove that Stewart had perjured himself when denying knowledge of the Continental Trading company or of any bonds held by it.

Hogan in turn briefly reviewed the leasing of the naval oil reserves by Albert B. Fall, declaring that Stewart had no knowledge of or connection with any of these transactions. He recalled the defendants appearances before the senate committee last winter, and declared Stewart had refused to answer questions about the Continental Trading company at that time because he was under subpoena in the criminal conspiracy case against Harry F. Sinclair, then pending.

Hogan contended that although Stewart had received $753,000 of the liberty bonds from the Continental Trading company, a profitable oil transaction, he had not profited personally but had turned the bonds over to a trustee to be transferred eventually to two oil companies with which he was connected and which figured in the deal.

ERUPTION OF MT. ETNA ENTERING FINAL PHASE

CATINIA, Sicily, Nov. 12—(AP)—The eruption of Mount Etna which has gone on without check for eleven days, was pronounced by Prof. G. Ponte, director of the Volcanological Institute, to be entering its final phase tonight, to be no longer a cause of anxiety to the Sicilian countryside.

In his bulletin issued at 9 a. m., tonight, Prof. Ponte said that the streams of molten lava which has been destroying villages and orchards everywhere showed signs of solidifying and that the emissions from the smoking mountain were lessening.

The veil of St. Agatha which, according to tradition, has often arrested the march of Mount Etna's fire toward Catania, was exposed in the cathedral here today by order of the archbishop cardinal, Nava. The faithful here recalled that on previous occasions prayers to St. Agatha availed when an eruption occurred and the lava stopped short before Nicolosi and Linguaglossa, 25 miles north of this city.

The volcano continued on this, the eleventh day of its present eruption to emit vast volumes of molton lava. The principal stream of destruction is well beyond the site where Mascali stood, the ruins of that town offering little resistance to the flow. The stream is heading toward the lower part of Nunziato and is about five furlongs from that town.

LAYING LINES OF ATTACK ON BURNING GAS WELL

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 12—(AP)—Oil field experts today were directing the slow and tedious process of laying lines of attack on the burning gas well at Santa Fe Springs, which burst into flame last Friday and has continued its fiery rampage unabated since.

The pillar of flame from the gasser was shooting 100 feet or more into the air. Capping the well was regarded as a serious problem because of the force with which the gas was coming up from its subterranean reservoir. It is estimated more than $1,000,000 in damage has been done to the well and surrounding property, including the value of the gas destroyed.

The hazard of firing surrounding wells appeared virtually eliminated today, however.

One of the plans of attack was to tap the casing deep underground with tunnels to divert the flow of gas from the main jet. Another method under consideration was the use of explosives in an effort literally to blow out the flames.

Mielback died four days later after identifying Pearson.

COMMUNISTS GO TO JAIL RATHER THAN PAY FINES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—With the declaration that they would pay no fines "imposed by the capitalistic courts of America" a group of fifteen men and ten women today went to jail to serve alternate sentences imposed for staging a parade without a permit.

The group was arrested Saturday as its members were marching by the state and war department building displaying banners demanding the release of John Porter, vice president of the New Bedford, Mass. textile union, who is serving a sentence at Fort Leavenworth for desertion from the army. The demonstrators claimed that it was his connection with the union that caused his arrest and conviction on the desertion charge.

After listening to impassioned protests against American court procedure and the condition of the Washington jail, Judge Isaac Hitt sentenced seven of the leaders to pay fines of $100 or serve 60 days in jail. The others were sentenced to pay $60 or go to jail for thirty days. They all went to jail.

For years it has been a common practice for demonstrators to stage their exhibitions in front of the white house and the state department and then pay fines generally ranging from $35 to $10 on charges of disorderly conduct. Police court officials, however, on Saturday asked that the members of the group furnish bonds signed by holders of real estate in Washington which they were unable to do and they spent the week end in the Washington jail.

Among the leaders of the group were: Carl Jones, Negro, of Philadelphia; Clarence Miller, of the Young Workers Communist league; Paul Crouch, of the All American Anti-Imperialist league, Benjamin S. Thomas, of the Workers Communist party of America; and Carl Reeves, of the International Labor Defense.

Immediately after the trial ended, the paraders were sent back to the courtroom dock where they began to sing so loudly the proceedings in the court room were halted until they could be transferred to the jail.

BENOIT-BARBEAU WEDDING IS BRILLIANT AFFAIR

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 13—Many were at St. James' church at 8:30 this morning for the wedding of Miss Florence Loretta Barbeau, daughter of Mrs. Alfred Barbeau, of South Main street, and Arthur C. Benoit of Taftville.

Rev. Antheleme Mollard, M. S., performed the marriage ceremony and was celebrant of the nuptial high mass, the music for which was played by Mrs. Joseph Gareau, the church organist. For a processional Mrs. Gareau played the wedding march from Lohengrin and for the recessional Mendelssohn's Wedding march. At the offertory, Mrs. Albert Bernier sang an Ave Maria.

The bride was very beautiful. Her gown was of white crepe satin and Spanish lace, in period style, and she wore a veil, en train. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley in a shower arrangement.

Miss Madeline Heneault, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Her gown was of pink crepe satin and georgette and she wore a picture model hat to match. Her bouquet was orchid chrysanthemums. Theodore Heneault, cousin of the bride, was best man.

Following the marriage mass there was a reception for the newly wedded couple at the home of the bride's mother, and the pair were felicitated by many friends. The bride received a great variety of pretty and useful gifts.

During the day Mr. and Mrs. Benoit left on their honeymoon. They are motoring to Canada, where they will visit with relatives. Upon their return they will make their home at Norwich where they have a newly furnished apartment, at 31 Church street.

A small grist of business developing over the week end claimed the attention of the town court this morning. The two most serious cases presented for the attention of the court were those involving Thomas Gates of Dayville and John Sconi of Attawaugan. Both men are well along in years. Gates, on two counts was charged with causing delinquency in minor children and was given 180 days to jail on each count by Judge W. Fenner Woodward. Sconi was charged also on two counts, with contributing to the delinquency of minor children and also received a sentence of 180 days on each count. These mean that the two men will be in jail at Brooklyn approximately a year. Information leading to their arrests was uncovered by state officers during the past week, and as told in this morning's Bulletin, they were taken into custody at the week end. Details of th things they did that eventually led to their arrest are unprintable.

Armistice Day Observance

This Armistice day observance was vastly different than that one of November 11, 1918, when Danielson gave itself up unrestrainedly to the most joyously frenzied demonstration this town has ever witnessed. Today was more like an average Sunday than one of happy rejoicing and demonstrations over the tenth anniversary of the great peace. Business, as to stores, was suspended here throughout today, but manufacturing plants remained in operation and schools were in session.

At the historic hour of 11 a. m. a score or more of American legion members formed ranks in Main street opposite their quarters. Commander Joseph Burton was in charge of the group. Bringing the men to attention he gave the order for a minute's silent prayer in memory of their companions who "went west" in the great conflict. The column then proceeded to David park, where before the honor roll to those who went from Danielson to serve in the World war, another silent tribute was paid. From the park the procession preceded through Main and Water streets to St. James' church thence to the West Side, where at Quinebaug square is a memorial honor roll to the men who went from the big plant to serve their country. This was the only formal observance of Armistice day in Danielson. Bells did not ring nor whistles blare in triumphant memory of what the town's sons had done in the great war. This fact brought some restrained unfavorable comment from some of the legionaires, they appearing to feel quite keenly that the world so soon forgets.

As to this, it appears from inquiry that Danielson might have had a much more complete observance had an early start on arrangements been made. At the late hour when the effort to make Armistice day a real holiday in Danielson was started the past week end it was too late. It is now contended to adequately arrange it. So another year may be better.

OBITUARY

Rev. T. D. Anderson, D. D.

The Rev. Thomas Davis Anderson, D. D., fellow of Brown university since 1880 and secretary of the university corporation for 24 years, died in Providence Sunday. He was a brother-in-law of Mrs. A. Putnam Woodward of Danielson. Dr. Anderson had been in failing health with a heart ailment for the past three years. He was a native of Roxbury, Mass., and one of the best known Baptist clergymen in the United States. He has held pastorates in Portland, Me., Baltimore and Providence. He served as an overseer of Columbia university and was a trustee of the Newton Theological institution and the Rochester Theological seminary.

Gets Suspended Sentence

This morning Ralph Shippee of Elmville was presented before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court, charged with breaking and entering St. James' church here and St Joseph's church at Dayville a fortnight ago and with attempts to commit thefts therein. He was sentenced to the reformatory, but execution of the sentence was suspended. Shippee is a youth of tender years and officials who have investigated the case feel that he was not the prime mover in the raids on the churches. At the present time they are seeking his companion in the breaks at the churches, one William Culley, 20, of Elmville, who has a record and who has found himself in other difficult situations from time to time during the past two or three years On the night the churches were broken into Shippee took his father's car from a garage at Elmville and used it in getting to Dayville and to Danielson. At Dayville they gained entry to the church through the vestry, using a skeleton key it is believed broke open poor boxes and took the money contents. A similar operation let them into St. James' church here, where they robbed one votive stand and carried out another they could not open the money receptacle on, later tossing it over a stone wall into the brush over in the Horse Hill district of the town. Then they drove to Providence, and abandoned the Shippee car near Olneyville square. Shippee came home and, subjected to questioning, admitted his part in the breaks and implicated Culley, who has not since been located, although the state officers are certain they will get him eventually.

Attention was directed this afternoon to the fact that there were some atrocious errors made this Armistice day in displaying the national colors contrary to fixed and definite rules. These irregular displays of the flag were made both by the public and by schools. It was noted by more than one observer. The criticism was being made early this evening that all who display the flag are charged with the responsibility of hanging it properly. The flagrant instances of improper display were something of a shock to those who believe that whatever else one may do in a slip-shod manner, cannot possibly apply to the display of the national emblem.

The church events for the week is the pageant to be given Tuesday evening at the Methodist Episcopal church. It will be presented by a costumed cast of 20 people under the direction of Mrs. Harold Holehouse and is entitled The Followers of the Star and deals with life in India. There are to be special musical features with the pageant.

Mrs. Marion Young is a maternity patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam.

George A. Martel of Central Falls spent Armistice day visiting with friends in Danielson.

Solvarius Hicks, Norwich, will be presented in the town court here Tuesday to face a charge that he is allegedly guilty of illegally transporting intoxicants.

On Wednesday an all day meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent society of the Westfield Congregational church is to be held at the church, in preparation for the Christmas sale.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan of Boston formerly of Putnam, and Mr. and Mrs. John Brown of Somerville, Mass., were visitors with relatives in Danielson today.

Tuesday evening's meeting of the chamber of commerce may prove to be one of the most interesting sessions of the year, there are so many matters of interest to consider.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon J. Cate were week end visitors with relatives in Newark.

The fact that today was quite generally observed as a holiday in Massachusetts cities brought heavy traffic out of that state on to the trunk line highways running through Danielson.

Danielson will have a considerable quota of boys as guests of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. and of the interested colleges at the Brown-New Hampshire football game to be played at Andrews field in Providence next Saturday.

An Armistice night dance was held tonight at Kum-Along-Inn on the West Side, attracting attendance from all the territory heresabouts.

Up to early this evening no trace had been obtained of chicken thieves that have been raiding coops in county towns during the past week. These thieves are operating on such a large scale as to arouse a general interest in bringing about their arrest.

A certified public accountant was in conference today with members of a special committee of the town relative to undertaking an audit of the town's books, as provided by a special town meeting. This auditor will scan the books on Tuesday to obtain an idea of the extent of the work to be done before definitely undertaking the work, it is said.

Walter A. Musgrave was in Hartford today on a business trip. The firm of which Mr. Musgrave is the head is opening newer and more commodious offices in that city.

NOANK

A gala day fell on Sunday in the fishing village where the flags were flying from all the homes in honor of that great day. It is 10 years ago when the town went wild. The school bells and all the church bells rang for a long while and the Noank Shipyard band of 30 pieces and 1300 men laid down their tools and a big parade was formed, with everybody taking part and they marched to Mystic singing songs, and were wild with joy, over the good news. At Mystic a gang fell in, School was let out for the day and the big time lasted until the next day as soon. Speeches were made in front of the Liberty pole on Main street by Supt. McCabe of the shipyard and several others from out of town.

Sunday morning at the waiting room several ex-service men were telling war stories of what they did on the day on the other side of the ocean. Many of them were sad and some were funny. One army man said in a small town where the troops were back for a rest. It was a rest camp, more like a work camp, several of his company got in Dutch trying to see Paris and other places by running away after sleeping in mud and water. One ex-service man was making big stories out of little ones. His officer said "All of you got to parade and we will have men to make you. No running away. There were 2,000 men in line with a crack band of 42. The parade lasted all night and it was a happy time for the soldiers so they could get back to God's country to see New York.

Noank is to have an American Legion post. The charter is in Hartford to be signed by the state commander and Chairman Walter Palmer expects it will arrive in a week or so and the post will be named Harrison Morton Ward post, No. 115. Harrison Morton Ward gave his life for his country during the World war and was the only Noank service man to die out of 75 Noank men that went to war. The post has been given a silk flag with the name of the post on it. The members of the post will start a drive to rais money for the national colors. The membership cards are out.

Chairman Palmer says he expects to have 40 members in the post and would like to have all ex-service men join.

A big dance was held at Corona hall on Saturday evening where 75 couples filled the floor and danced to the music of Russo's Singing orchestra of New London and a crowd of 300 was there. A moonlight dance was on the list so the large moon was shining on the dancers as the orchestra played Sunny Boy while everyone joined in and sang with the orchestra.

Little Miss Nellie Brooks, 6 years old, of New London, dressed in white sang Sunny Boy and the orchestra played slow for her. She was called back five times for the crowd stamped for 10 full minutes. She also did the Charleston dances with a few more songs.

Fred Philips of Cornfield lighthshir is home for a few days.

William Crowell was a caller in Norwich on Sunday.

Clarence Spink has returned to Fall River, Mass., after spending the week end in the village.

About 50 legionnaires of the village went to Mystic on Sunday afternoon and took part in the big parade where 600 was in line and marched to the Baptist church where a stone war memorial was unveiled.

Alden Rathbun of Yale college is home for a few days visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson have returned to Albany, N. Y., after spending the week end with Noank friends.

Raymond Slafare is in New York calling on his uncle, R. Packer over the holiday.

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 13—With national and civic colors afloat, military and fraternal orders of the city responded 100 per cent. strong to the general committee's call and tendered the ex-service men the most beautiful Armistice day processions since Armistice day 1925. The parade started at 11 o'clock amid the blasts of mill whistles and the tolling of church bells which were sounded in honor of the 10th anniversary of the signing of the Armistice. Headed by a squad of the city's finest under the command of Captain of Police William J. Jarvis, the marching bodies directed by Major A. D. McIntyre and his aides began their march through the city to Putnam high school grounds where disbandment took place, following a review by the marshals.

The proprietor Wilfred Benoit will be charged with operating a den of vice.

Memories of the thrilling days in France previous to the signing of the Armistice were revived this afternoon when 134 ex-service men of all ranks banded in Elks hall to attend the banquet tendered by the committee. QUICK RELIEF FOR COLDS SINCE 1889

Won't dance with a sneezer

Who would blame a young lady for refusing to dance with a man who had a cold! Why should she risk infection for one so inconsiderate of others, so indifferent to etiquette and to his own condition.

Social, and business reasons too, demand that colds be thrown off quickly. To do that, millions of people take GROVE'S BROMO QUININE at the first warning signal—a sneeze or dry throat, a headache or a stopped-up feeling. ## "OVER THE COUNTER"

Dear Dot:

I knew that after the "cool" reception you had to give your guests the other evening that you would soon confess to me that YOU ARE IN THE MARKET FOR A NEW STOVE.

You are always such a splendid hostess I can appreciate how wretchedly you must have felt to have to apologize for a "cold house" and that "old stove."

Well, I have looked into the stove problem for you. I did so at THE JORDAN HARDWARE COMPANY for two reasons. I know that you like to trade there and that I would not be misleading in recommending MAGEE PARLOR FURNACES AND FAIRMOUNT COAL-GAS RANGES.

The MAGEE PARLOR FURNACE meets all modern requirements. It is attractively finished in Mahogany Enamel, nickel trimmed and an asset rather than a drawback to the homey living room. It is scientifically constructed and its operation is based on the principle of heat circulation, and in a very short time after the fire is lighted, the glow of warmth is felt in every part of the house. No hot spots—no unpleasant drafts — just gentle warmth everywhere. It burns coal or wood, has a large ash pan to prevent dirt and dust, it is easily installed to connect with your chimney and is moderately priced. That briefly, is the story of Magee parlor furnaces. Of course there is more of interest you should know about them, but I will let the JORDAN HARDWARE COMPANY salesman tell you that.

Now that you know you can solve your general heating problem with a Magee furnace, you are probably wondering about your kitchen stove. Stop wondering, Dot. Get a Fairmount Range. Get one in gray enamel or in black and choose from over a score of styles. These ranges come in combination with gas burners or simply for coal and wood. Some have hot water reservoirs attached. Others have the elevated Hot Closet that is the answer to the "keeping warm" trouble when "Hubby" is late to dinner or the guests haven't arrived yet.

FAIRMOUNT RANGES are constructed along the most approved styles featuring the 8-20 dimensions. I cannot begin to tell you of all the combinations and patterns in which they are procurable, but I will say this—that there are enough of these combinations and styles to meet all demands.

As a good housewife you know what you should have for a stove in your particular kitchen and I know that FAIRMOUNT will provide it for you. With a Fairmount in your kitchen and a Magee in your parlor Old Man Winter can blast and blow all he chooses but he cannot invade the cheeriness, the comfort and the health of your home.

A good portable oil-heater is also a very desirable household accessory and Jordan's are prepared to show you a full line of these stoves.

I am looking forward to another delightful visit to your home when you will be saved the embarrassment of apologizing for "pneumonia drafts" to friends not so intimate as I am, because, Magee and Fairmount will be at your command.

Your friend,
JANE.

THE PRESIDENT ON PEACE AND DEFENSE

There isn't any question about the extensive sentiment in this country in behalf of international peace. As the desirability of that President Coolidge is not in doubt, but it becomes evident from his Armistice day address that he has no intention of being satisfied with a gesture in that direction when such a movement is not seriously or fairly undertaken.

The president dealt clearly with this problem and there can be no doubt as to where he stands. He is not disposed to accept any false hopes in regard to peace. He is unwilling that we should neglect preparations which will insure an adequate defense for this country with its long coastlines, its outlying possessions and the Panama canal which it must defend. He insists that nations must play fair that there can be no expectation that the United States is going to acquiese in plans which are put forward for the benefit of Europe but which would, if accepted, be detrimental to the United States. Peace is most certainly desirable but it must come through real effort on the part of all. This country under President Coolidge has been eager to aid world peace but its efforts have not always been reciprocated. He is not unmindful of the treaty renouncing war as a means of settling international disputes and expects much from it, but it is well put when he says that "So long as promises can be broken and treaties can be violated we can have no positive assurances, yet everybody knows they are additional safeguards. We can only say that this is the best thing that mortal man can do."

It is because uncertainty is bound to prevail, do what we may, that we must not neglect proper preparations, but in making such preparations it is to be borne in mind that "to be ready for defense is not to be guilty of aggression. We can have military preparation without assuming a military spirit." Thus the carrying out of the naval construction programme is not to be interpreted as meaning any departure from our desire for peace or as upsetting the efforts which have been made in that direction.

At the same time the president closes the door to any talk about this country profiting from the war and to the talk of cancellation of war debts. He unquestionably voices public sentiment when he points out that Europe would gain more through debt settlement and a more complete reciprocity in good will.

FALL RIVER'S EXPERIMENT

Among the things that the people of Fall River were called upon to decide on election day was the form of government for that city in the future. Dissatisfaction had developed with the existing form of city government and there was much agitation for its replacement with the city manager form of government.

From the large vote received that form of government is regarded by the citizens of that city as the one best fitted to meet the requirements. It having been voted for it will go into effect the first of the year.

The new government will consist of a mayor, a council of four members and a school committee of six. These officials will be elected by the people on a non-partisan basis and the city manager will be selected by the council. Offices will be filled without regard to party. Anyone eligible can run for office by filing nomination papers, carrying the required number of signers. There can be no party caucus but a municipal primary will be held at which candidates for all offices will be reduced to two and the choice between them is made at the city election.

Fall River is seeking a cheaper city government. It is seeking one of greater efficiency and it is hopeful that by the change that relief will be obtained in the tax situation which has given much bother. The efforts of that city will be watched with keen interest. Whether the change in the form of government is going to produce the panacea for its ills remains to be seen.

In making the change Fall River admits that it was not sufficiently interested, or at least did not succeed, in getting what it believed it should under the existing form. It rested with the people to determine the make up of the city government and according, to their verdict they failed in their undertaking. They did not get the right men. Whether they are going to be able to show any better discrimination in the selection of men under the new form of government than under the old is a question. They are certainly entitled to the right to try and it is possible that they will rise to the situation, but it is an old story that it is not so much the form of government under which a city gets satisfactory results as the men that are selected to conduct it.

DESTRUCTIVE MT. ETNA

Calamities are merciless. They cause death and destruction without regard for humanity and the expenditures which man has made. Whatever is in the path of the storm, the fire, the flood, the stream of lava must get out of the way or suffer the effects of their fury.

Over in Sicily thousands are being driven from their homes by the outbreak of Mt. Etna. That volcano isn't in eruption often but when it does break forth it leaves great scars in the countryside. It is liable to happen at any time. There is no control over it. Man may watch and must flee to be safe, but he is powerless to regulate or check it. We have learned much in regard to volcanic action. To a certain degree it is possible to give warnings of impending eruptions but further than that there's no control it is no secret that the region round about this volcano is no safety zone but that is not sufficient reason for people to abandon it as a place of residence. They are driven from home and they sustain heavy losses but either they or others come back after the destruction is over and make the best of the situation until the next disaster comes.

It has been five years since Etna belched forth in serious eruption. It is impossible to compile the losses that it has already caused this month or to estimate the damage that is threatened to those communities which may be included in the devastated area if the eruption continues. It is simply a case of getting out of the way, to flee from the zone where molten rock and deadly gasses make life utterly impossible. Fields and homes are slowly engulfed in the river of lava and there's no evidence that there is any definite end to its menace.

MARINE DISASTERS

How ships can disappear and how they may have disappeared in the past is illustrated by the experience of the liner Vestris off the Virginia capes. What happened to the vessel has not been learned, but some accident of a serious nature caused it to list and sink. But for the means of communication through the wireless nothing would have been known about the tragedy that was being enacted on the Atlantic. Whether anything further is ascertained will depend upon the success of the search for the passengers, officers and men who abandoned ship in a rough sea.

It seems improbable that all of those should have been lost although they may have drifted a considerable distance and may have become separated. It was hours after the calls were first sent out and ever after the abandonment of the ship that aid arrived at the location given, but ships far and near hastened in that direction and through their search hope is entertained that a rescue of the shipwrecked will be accomplished.

Marine disasters serve to point out the helplessness of those at sea when something goes wrong with a steamship but almost every instance demonstrates the great value which the wireless is in making known to the world that assistance is needed and in soliciting that aid from ships which may be near or from the nearest points ashore.

Furthermore it shows how justified was the law requiring all passenger carrying vessels to be equipped with wireless in order that it might give the greatest possible degree of protection to its human cargo. That it isn't always successful emphasizes the dangers which exist in connection with ocean travel, although they are today at the lowest point ever.

SERIOUS WEAKNESS

The killing of a guard in the Massachusetts state prison by a prisoner calls for a prompt administration of justice, but what seems equally important is an investigation for the purpose of determining where the laxity exists that permits the prisoners to obtain deadly weapons.

There have been other cases of a similar character. Where the trouble lies needs to be determined without delay. It is evident that revolvers and ammunition have been smuggled in to desperate characters and it is time to find out who was responsible for it and what part of the prison system is so weak as to make it possible. If there are confederates among the prison employes it cannot be found out any too soon. If there are friends of the prisoners who are clever enough to outwit the officials, that likewise needs to be learned.

Suspicion under such circumstances naturally turns in the direction of the smuggling theory. That means that advantage has been taken of the prison rules, or else too much leniency has been tolerated by those who are supposed to block any smuggling effort. Such a situation becomes all the worse if any guard has sold himself in order that death might be inflicted upon one of his fellow workers.

That more deaths did not occur before the shooting convict was overpowered was particularly fortunate, but there should have been no shooting and no prisoner should have obtained firearms or tools to aid in their escape.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Some people are still busy nailing campaign lies.

Going to the electoral college doesn't necessarily mean taking a post graduate course.

During the last few weeks before Thanksgiving is when the barrel gangs get in their most effective work for the Thanksgiving night fires.

It takes something besides money to make a democratic campaign successful, as Chairman Raskob and others have probably realized.

Rhode Island has got to check over all its votes before it will be sure which candidate really got its electoral votes. If it had voting machines that would not be necessary.

Of course gangsters have to obtain big money. They have to put aside a good sized fortune in order to provide for the expensive funeral which is demanded of one in their station of life.

MR. QUEERIE HAILS A MASTER

"If a man stuck a gun in your face," asked Mr. Bobble, "and shouted, 'Hands up! would you obey him?"

"It's a business man," answered Mr. Queerie, "I'd stick my hands up so fast they'd jerk my head off the ground."

"You wouldn't try to arrest the robber?"

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Queerie, "I'd tell the police."

"Ah," said Mr. Bobble, that bears our Prof. Pilbeam's theory. As far back as the stone age, he maintains, the male was accustomed to rely for help on the organized warriors of the tribe. The woman—"

"Relied on her husband," suggested Mr. Queerie.

"No, indeed," replied Mr. Bobble. "As Pilbeam points out, the woman was left alone in the cave while the men were hunting. In the event of attack she had to defend her children and her belongings by her own resources. She scratched, and kicked and screamed for help all at once, and as a result women instinctively do the same today."

"Do you mean to say," demanded Mr. Queerie as he paid the lunch check, "that it's harder to rob a woman than a man?"

"It certainly is," affirmed Mr. Bobble.

"Nonsense," said Mr. Queerie, "The only time a woman doesn't fork over is when she's fainted at the sight of the gun."

"But Pilbeam claims—"

"Pilbeam," said Mr. Queerie, "is a—a professor."

"Hello," exclaimed Mr. Bobble, "business must be good. Look at the people around you, office door. But what's the policeman doing?"

"You, Queerie?" asked the officer. "Thanks to this little secretary of yours, we just captured the 'Gorilla.' She was holdin' and kickin' him, and yellin' 'Police!' when me an' my partner comes up."

"I was taking those bonds to the bank, while you were at lunch," breathlessly explained Miss Remwood, "I had them in my shopping bag. A horrid-looking man pointed a gun at me and said, 'Hand over that bag!' And I hit him, and caught him by the neck—"

"Heavens!" exclaimed Mr. Queerie, "Sooner than have you take chances I'd lose a million bonds!"

"Oh, the bonds," said Miss Remwood, "I'm afraid I'd forgotten about the bonds. You see, in the bag I had a pair of zinc stockings—"

"Zinc stockings!" gasped Mr. Queerie, wondering if the shock had been too much for his secretary's mind.

"Stove pipes!" gurgled Mr. Bobble.

"Zinc's a color, not a material," expounded Miss Remwood. "I'd hunted all over town for that shade, and they just matched my new—"

"Ha, ha, stockings!" bellowed Mr. Bobble, pounding Mr. Queerie on the back. "The Gorilla nabbed for a pair of stockings! What price Pilbeam now!"

"Hear about 'The Gorilla'?" asked Mr. Queerie on arriving home.

"The Gorilla!?" answered Mrs. Queerie. "That wasn't his name. The police called him the daylight burglar."

"Called who the daylight burglar?"

"Why, the horrible man who came here this afternoon," said Mrs. Queerie. "I almost fainted when I saw the gun, but I suddenly remembered I'd left the oven door open, so I pushed him down the step—his head hit on the bottom one; that's how the police got him—and ran back to the kitchen."

"But, Ethel," gasped Mr. Queerie "if anything had happened to you!"

"All I could think of," said Mrs. Queerie, "was what might happen to my cake. It was an almond—"

"A cake!" interrupted Mr. Queerie. "Just a moment, darling, till I telephone Bobble."

"It's too late to ask him to dinner," cautioned Mrs. Queerie.

"I know," said Mr. Queerie, "I just want to ask him where I can buy a complete set of Prof. Pilbeam's works."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 — Unwavering devotion of a group of now aged veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic in Washington to the service of less fortunate comrades in arms who might find themselves homeless in the nation's capital has kept alive for years a curious temporary home for these old soldiers almost in the shadow of the capitol dome.

It is a sort of veterans' hotel, where through the years since it was founded by comrades of Washington G. A. R. posts in 1870, thousands of aging fighting men of the past, many of them destitute, have found lodging and food without cost for periods of ten days or even a month at a time while they struggled with details of pension claims.

Veterans' Shelter

Originally the home was maintained in rented quarters and with government aid of $2,000 or so a year. As the numbers of the Civil war veterans dwindled with the passage of time, the governing board opened the home to men of Spanish war service in army, navy or marine corps, and now its shelter has been extended also to World war veterans.

Also, under the more active urge of the men of 1898 and the American Legion the old naval hospital building, the site of which was acquired more than a hundred years ago, has been turned over under a 15 year lease to the temporary home corporation at one dollar a year. Congress deeded the navy's application to sell the ground, now worth perhaps $150,000 as compared to an original cost of $3,000, on plea of the veterans of three wars who are joined in rendering this service to destitute comrades.

But while two generations of younger veterans continue the active management of the home and it operates as a sort of civic center for odds and ends of societies and lodges that form a fringe about ideals of patriotic war service, a dozen fine old men of the 60's still are the honored heads of the institution. Its president for years has been Byron W. Bonney, now 87.

Labor of Love

In illustration of the feeling these G. A. R. men have for their work, Paul McGahen, spokesman for the American Legion before congressional committees in the successful effort to continue the lease of the naval hospital, resisted suggestions that the maintenance of the home be completely taken over by the government.

"We would hesitate to commit ourselves to a point where they would pass out of the picture," he said, speaking for both Spanish war and World war veterans. "With these old gentlemen it has been a labor of love. There is no question of money involved. None of the officers of the home is on salary, allowance or wage."

And more than that: As long as there remains a single man of the 60's physically able and willing to serve, he will be president of the board of managers. Upon that the younger service men are agreed. Yet so far have the old soldiers of the Civil war marched into the past that of some 3,000 veterans housed and fed at the home this year, not two score were Grand Army men.

Stories That Recall Others

Prevention Work.

A teacher was telling the children in one of the schools that she was going to the teachers' convention. One little fellow piped up, "Oh, goody, we had off last week for fire prevention and this week for teachers' prevention."

Wild.

Dave and a group of other country lads were spending Sunday afternoon trying to yoke up a couple of calves. Try as they would, they could catch only one calf, so Dave volunteered to be yoked up with it. The frightened animal immediately bolted, as soon as it got a chance, taking the yoke and helpless Dave with it. Away they went, careening into trees and banging against fences, bumping and thumping. As soon as the other boys could recover a little from their gales of laughter, they set out to capture the assorted pair, and were advancing toward them, when the human half, in a warning tone, begged "Come up easy boys! We're wild as heck!"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Correction

Mr. Editor: An article in Mystic news under date of Nov. 10th reads: "Elliott & Watrous, Groton and Mystic marine contractors, were successful in removing one of the steel caissons from the bottom of the Pawcatuck river but were not able to get their lighter up the river to remove the other one."

The facts of the case are, that we removed two steel caissons as per our contract, but did not remove a steel cofferdam, which Mr. Novogroski did not want removed at that time.

Later we submitted a bid for removing the cofferdam, but were unsuccessful in getting the contract.

ELLIOT & WATROUS
Mystic, Nov. 10, 1928.

In the Long Ago

Mr. Editor: In this world of "make believe" there are happenings every day. Some of them are pathetic, some are full of life and sunshine, while others have hidden tragedies that only those directly concerned know for the world is busy with its own problems, and does not carry others' burdens. Many of them emphasize the aphorism that "truth is stranger than fiction". The following story had its beginning near to "Rose of New England" and serves to show the pathetic side of life.

In a recent article I saw in the newspapers this old story was brought vividly to my mind, and it is true that all the world loves a lover. Recently, I read where a young man, a foreigner, had come to this country to meet his school day sweetheart whom he had not seen for many years, she having come to this country where her parents had come, and this when she was only a little girl. He was coming now and on his arrival they were to be married and each one looked forward to the reunion with pleasant anticipation. But who is there among us that can read the future? Not one, and it is right to be so. Man proposes but God disposes. While he was on his way, she had been taken sick and died and only those who have met with the same reverse can appreciate his distress when he received this unhappy news.

Many years ago in and around the city of Norwich there were some people who through force of circumstances were compelled to resort to certain expedients to make a living, more especially prior to the Civil war. Some started boarding schools to furnish the finishing touches to the education of the young ladies of that period. These schools were presided over by finely educated teachers who had been reduced in circumstances.

On a fine morning in the month of May, 18—, a splendid looking young man was riding down one of the streets of the city of N——, when hearing some voices he pulled up his horse and looking up to a window, where there was a number of young women, lifted his hat and bowed and then slowly moved on his way. Instantly all was commotion and each looked at the other, and then the chorus, who is he? What is his name? And whom did he bow to? Finally they found out, for it was none other than Mary Ray, a beautiful young southern girl, the daughter of a southern planter who had been sent north to receive the finishing touches to her education at the boarding school of Miss Roberts on W—— street. Here with the others she had been taught the minuet and all the pieties that were necessary for a proper conduct in the society of those days. Mary was plied with questions and finally told the others that his name was George —— and she had met him some time before at a party at the home of a mutual friend. They were afterwards seen many times together and looked an ideal couple. There were already to be heard rumblings of the coming trouble between the states. And one day when George called to see his sweetheart he was met by Miss Roberts with the story that Mary's father had come and taken his daughter away. No, he had not left any address, anymore than to say they were returning south, and Mary had left no word as to their destination for no doubt she did not know. George spent many anxious days trying to locate Mary but to no avail for she had vanished as complete as though the earth had opened and swallowed her up.

And then on April 12, 1861, the news was flashed throughout the country that Major Robert Anderson had refused to haul down the Stars and Stripes that were floating over Fort Sumter, and it was fired upon by orders of General Beauregard. This started the fire between brothers that was to rage for the next five years. All was excitement in the north and thousands of men offered their services, and George with the others. As he had a military education he received a commission as a lieutenant and with others helped to whip the raw recruits into shape. Soon they were on the way south and he was stationed in Louisiana for some time where he was conspicuous for his services. While on a detail at one time, he noticed a funeral cortege going slowly toward a little parish church and with the others he entered, to hear the services and with the dim lights, the low voice of the priest as he chanted the service for the dead, and the music so softly rendered, the solemnity and sanctity stole upon him. He ventured to ask one near him as to who was dead, and he was told a beautiful young woman named Mary Ray. He could scarcely restrain himself and after the service was over he with the others followed the cortege to the little parish cemetery. And here contrary to custom asked that he might be permitted to look upon her once again. This was granted. And as he saw her beautiful even in death he, with an agonized cry of Mary, Mary, threw himself on the ground beside her and wept as though his heart would break. His comrades led him gently away. Later he found where she had lived. When he called there all that he was allowed to see were the colored servants. One old mammy told him, "My young missus done call for some George all the time". He said "I am the George," and then she gave him a letter which told her pitiful story that all her letters to him had been intercepted. She said they tell me now that I can never be well again and that I am going to die. Perhaps it is just as well for now I will see my mother once more. Perhaps we will meet again in another and brighter world. There I will be watching and waiting for you. This was signed only "Mary".

George could not forget. But his duties kept him ever on the alert. At one time he was taken down with swamp fever" and furloughed home. From a fine specimen of physical manhood he slowly faded away and died. Perhaps they met each other over there—who knows? She was waiting for him. The main facts of this true story were told me many years ago by her of blessed memory, "Mother" Saunders, who long ago entered that "Beautiful country beyond." So I have tried to tell you that story as it was told to me. My dear old friends, Calvin Miner and his beloved wife of 11th street, Greeneville, will remember "Mother" Saunders, and may recall this story for the actors in this drama of life were real, but for obvious reasons their real names are withheld.

They formerly lived at or near to this good old town of Norwich and were known to many in their day. In their case it serves to prove that "truth is stranger than fiction". The play is over on this drama of real life, but we think of that beautiful poem by John Burroughs "Waiting".

Asleep, awake, by night or day
The friends I seek are seeking me:
No wind can drive my bark astray
Nor change the tide of destiny.

The stars come nightly to the sky
The tidal wave unto the sea,
Nor time nor space, nor deep nor high
Can keep my own away from me.

YOUR HEALTH

WHY MASTOIDITIS MAY BECOME GRAVE

By O. Jason Dixon, M. D. Kansas City, Mo.

About the middle of the eighteenth century a French surgeon named Jean Louis Petit recognized mastoiditis as a surgical disease and operated upon a patient by drilling a hole through the bone into the infected cells. The patient recovered. That he did not perform this operation by accident is shown by the fact the Petit was also the first surgeon to operate for hernia and he devised the first successful tourniquet.

The mastoid process is a bone just back of the ear. It is filled with honeycomblike cells that are lined with a thin membrane. Due to the direct connection of these honey cells with the nose and throat, frequently they become infected, particularly after colds, measles, influenza and scarlet fever. Infection of these cells is known as mastoiditis.

Lying just beneath these mastoid cells is the dense membrane that encloses the brain like a capsule, called the dura. Passing through this membrane, like a pencil between the leaves of a book, is a large vein returning blood from the brain to the heart. Within the capsule, or dura, is the brain substance.

Therefore, when infection takes place within the mastoid cells, it may burrow inward and cause one of three complications:

First, an infection into the vein producing a clot, causing the patient to have chills and fever. If the infected clot is removed soon enough, most patients recover.

Second, extensive infection of the capsule of the brain, or meningitis, which cannot be treated successfully by surgery or any other means and is nearly always fatal.

Third, infection into the brain substance producing an abscess which, if located, may be drained, but with a mortality of about seventy-five per cent.

These may be listed as the causes of death in mastoiditis, and although they are not usual as complications yet, when they do occur, the death rate is so high that a very grave respect is held for mastoiditis.

We know now that with the proper management of infected ears the above three complications can nearly always be prevented. As proof of this, Kerrison in his book on "Diseases of the Ear" gives 1 to 2 per cent as the "normal" mortality rate for patients with mastoiditis requiring operation.

In a five year analysis of four of the larger hospitals in Kansas city (population 400,000), out of a total of 85,806 hospital patients, 432 had mastoiditis severe enough to demand operation. Of this number only 31 died, giving a mortality rate of .71 per cent.

Of these deaths 13 were due to meningitis, 4 were due to infection of the vein, or sinus thrombosis, 5 were due to abcess of the brain, and 8 to pneumonia. Only one patient died as the direct result of the operation, showing that the operation itself is a very much over-rated procedure.

Like John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who was made an honorary Frenchman for his gifts for the restoration of the Versailles royal palace and the Rheims cathedral, Frank Jay Gould has been named a citizen of France.

Proposals!

A glance at her blonde loveliness tells better than words why this beautiful New York City girl has received such flattering proposals from kings of movie and stage land. She's Collette Francis, of 255 East 25th St., Brooklyn; now one of the charmers in the Broadway hit, "Rio Rita."

Miss Francis says: "Since I've been on the stage, so many people have asked me what I do to get the beautiful golden gleam and sparkle in my hair that I am beginning to think I'm really taking wonderful care of it. I really never thought much about it. What I do is so simple. Like so many of my girl friends here in New York, I just put a little Danderine on my brush each time I use it. That keeps my hair silky and gleaming, makes it easy to dress and holds it like I arrange it, for hours. My scalp was very dry and I had a lot of dandruff when I first started on it, but all of that trouble stopped quickly. And Danderine keeps my hair so clean I don't need to shampoo half as often, now."

Danderine removes that oily film from your hair and gives it new life and lustre. It isn't oily and doesn't show. It gives tone and vigor to the scalp. The generous bottles are just 35c at any drug or toilet counter. A delicately fragranced necessity for the well-groomed girl.

OBSERVANCE OF ARMISTICE ANNIVERSARY AT STORRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 12—Connecticut Agricultural college witnessed an Armistice anniversary celebration presented by the R. O. T. C. battalion in the Hawley armory and Gardner Dow field this morning, classes having been suspended between 11 o'clock and noon.

Following the assembly of the battalion in the armory, Capt. Thornton D. Chase, professor of military tactics and science, opened the program with a short speech, introducing Prof. Howard A. Seckerson, head of the English department, who gave a five-minute invocation. This was followed by an address by Dr. Henry K. Denlinger, professor of history, who spoke on "The Meaning of Armistice Day." Dr. Denlinger spoke in part as follows:

"After ten years we take stock. We ask ourselves the meaning of all that the nations went through.

"Let us recall the two slogans that stood before the world during the great war. First, 'Make the world safe for democracy,' and secondly, 'A war to end war.' We must now set these two standards before the youth of America to find if America has any more of that warm hope. It is up to America, for she can determine whether we shall have another war or not. She leads the destiny of nations."

Upon the conclusion of the address, the entire assembly bowed in silent prayer for two minutes. Warren M. Kennedy, '30, of Windsor, bugler for the battalion, gave the traditional Taps, that was followed by a parade by the four companies on the athletic field. The entire corps, including the band under the direction of Stephen B. Katzman, '29, of Hartford, marched in review before the commandant, Cadet Major Elmer S. Watson, '29, of Wethersfield, and the guests.

CHARGED WITH BEING HIT AND RUN DRIVER

Following claim made by Charles Lillibridge of Norwich Town that the machine he was driving on the Norwich-New London highway at Uncasville Sunday night had been hit by another automobile, whose driver speeded away, Samuel E. Bercums of Eastern Point was arrested a short time afterwards and is charged with being the hit and run driver and also operating under the influence of liquor. The arrest was made by Troopers John Smith and Bernard E. Keneron of Groton, who held Bercums for trial in Montville later in the week.

Lillibridge succeeded in obtaining the registration number of the automobile which, he charged, had run into him, and it was through this information that the state troopers arrested Bercums.

COURT HEARD CLAIMS OVER OWNERSHIP OF COW

Opposing claims of ownership of a cow were heard in the court of common pleas here before Judge Charles B. Waller Monday morning, and after the case was partially heard, it was continued for a day. The cow is a thoroughbred Ayrshire, about six years old and valued at $225 and the two men claiming ownership are Steve Rokowski and Walter Domoraski, the latter having worked for the former on a Plain Hill farm. Rokowski claims ownership by a replevin action.

Domoraski claims that Rokowski gave him the cow in payment for his services. On the other hand it is Rokowski's claim that he allowed Domoraski to keep the cow so that Domoraski's large family could have the milk.

JUDGE RESERVES DECISION IN SUIT OVER CHECK

Decision was reserved by Judge Charles B. Waller in the $200 civil action brought by John Squires of Manchester, formerly of Lebanon against Harold J. Cunningham, of Pomfret, a cattle dealer, when the case was brought to a close here Monday morning in the common pleas court. Squires claims that a check for $175 given by Cunningham on Sept. 30, 1926 in payment for two cows went to protest. Cunningham claims he stopped payment on the check because the cows were not as represented in consequence of which he was obliged to sell them for $100 as beef.

NORWICH MUSICIANS IN NEW LONDON PARADE

Louisa Drum corps of Clara Barton tent, D. of V., the last named composed entirely of women.

1,000 BIRDS FROM 16 STATES IN 16TH LAYING CONTEST

The 16th annual contest at Storrs opened on Nov. 1st with three pens unaccounted for. The entire list this year consists of 100 pens of ten birds each, making a total of 1,000 birds. Apparently the breeders who are entering birds in this year's contest have been making a very careful study of breeding and selecting contest winners. The grind of 51 weeks makes it necessary for the birds to have constitutional vigor and vitality. This group seems to have these qualifications, and unless some dreaded disease should make its appearance during the year, the management looks for an unparalleled output.

Geographically the 1,000 birds come from 16 states of the United States, to provinces of Canada, and England. Massachusetts contributes the largest number, namely 23 pens. Connecticut and New York are tied with 20 pens each. Pennsylvania has 6, New Jersey 5, Maine, Canada, Rhode Island, Ohio, Missouri, and Michigan 3 each. Washington state has two; Vermont, Virginia, Wisconsin, Illinois, Oregon, and England have one each.

There are entered in the contest 450 Leghorns, 340 Rhode Island Reds, 130 Barred Rocks, 80 White Rocks, 30 White Wyandottes, 10 White Minorcas, and 10 Australorps.

The total egg production for the week was 2,717 eggs or a yield of 38.8 per cent. This is roughly 2 per cent greater production than has ever been secured in the opening week of any contest conducted at Storrs. White Leghorns captured the first two places, Rhode Island Reds third place, and White Wyandottes fourth place.

The owner of last year's world record pen, George Lowry of West Willington, Conn., won the week with a production of 61 eggs. Granite Springs Poultry Farm, of Granite Springs, N. Y., was a close second with 59 eggs. Homestead Farm's Rhode Island Reds from Newtown, Conn., and a pen of the same breed owned by E. Newton Searles of Pomfret Center, Conn., tied for third place with a production of 56 eggs each. A pen of White Wyandottes owned by Ebelwood Farm of West Bridgewater, Mass., won fourth place with a yield of 55 eggs.

During the week 19 hens, 11 Leghorns and 8 heavy breed, made a perfect weekly score. Eleven pens are credited with laying ten eggs in one day.

The leading pens ineach of the principal varieties:

Barred Rocks—Old Pickard Farm, Concord Point, Mass., 37; R. Walter Bishop, Guilford, Conn., 34; P. B. Childs, Manomet, Mass., 31.

White Rocks—E. A. Hirt, South Weymouth, Mass., 43; Harold F. Barber, Dover, Mass., 36.

White Wyandottes — Ebenwood Farm, West Bridgewater, Mass., 55; Thomas H. Matteson, Davisville, R. I., 45.

Rhode Island Reds — Homestead Farm, Newtown, Conn., 56; E. Newton Searles, Pomfret Center, Conn., 56; Harold G. Colt, West Hartford, Conn., 54; Zephrim LaBelle, Ballouville, Conn., 52.

White Leghorns—George Lowry, West Willington, Conn., 61; Granite Springs Farm, Granite Springs, N. Y., 59; Tom Barron, Catforth nr. Preston, England, 54; Westfield Poultry Farm, Westfield, Mass., 53; Hanson's Leghorn Farm, Corvallis, Ore., 51.

ST. PATRICK'S BOY SCOUTS WITNESS NEW HAVEN GAME

Cars provided by Henry H. Viknot, Thomas DeMonte and James Mahoney Jr., conveyed 28 Boy Scouts, Troop No. 5, of St. Patrick's church to New Haven Saturday to witness the Yale-Maryland game. The Scouts enjoying every minute of the day and on their return expressed gratitude to the generous car owners who made their trip possible.

JAIL SENTENCE WITH FINES FOR TAFTVILLE BOOTLEGGER

Joseph Blanchard, 45, of Taftville was fined a total of $450, with costs, and given 20 days in jail Monday morning in the city court when his case was brought up after a number of continuances since he was arrested on Oct. 7.

Blanchard was before the court as proprietor of a bootleg and gambling joint on Merchants avenue. Sentences were given as follows: $200 and costs and ten days in jail for keeping liquor with intent to sell; $200 and costs and ten days in jail for reputation, and $50 for conducting a gambling house.

A nolle was entered in the case of Ovilard Bouchard, 45, who was arrested at the same time as Blanchard and was charged with violation of the liquor laws.

A slot machine seized in Blanchard's place was emptied Monday morning and was found to contain $22.75, which was returned to Blanchard.

SNOW AND RAIN IN MELANGE OF WEATHER

Shortly after 5 o'clock Monday evening there was a flurry of snow, the second appearance of the season. It was reported by autoists who traveled between Holyoke and Colchester in the evening that the combination of snow and rain made driving very hazardous. The snow fell in large flakes the entire distance between these two places.

Just as the parade in New London was over rain started to fall and was falling heavily there about 4 o'clock, but the rain did not reach this city until between 5 and 6 o'clock and was then only a light fall.

STONINGTON PLAYS TO SCORELESS TIE IN GAME WITH WESTERLY HIGH

(Special to The Bulletin)

STONINGTON, Nov. 12—Stonington High gridders were held to a scoreless tie by Westerly High here this afternoon in the first game of their annual two-game series. This game figured in the Eastern Conn.-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league and enabled Stonington to close its season in that loop with two victories and two ties. A large crowd witnessed the game.

Neither eleven came within scoring distance in today's conflict. Stonington completed a few long passes that brought them up near the Westerly goal but the visitors held fast and turned back the locals. Westerly garnered more first downs and was penalized 105 yards.

As the result of the scoreless tie the standing of the Eastern Conn.-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league is the following:

| | W. | L. | T. | Pts. | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Stonington .. | 2 | 0 | 2 | 6 | 1.000 |
| N. F. A. ..... | 2 | 1 | 0 | 4 | .667 |
| Westerly .... | 1 | 1 | 1 | 3 | .500 |
| Windham .... | 1 | 2 | 1 | 3 | .333 |
| Bulkeley .... | 1 | 2 | 0 | 2 | .333 |
| Chapman Tech | 0 | 1 | 2 | 2 | .000 |

It appears obvious that Stonington is the champion here, having a percentage of 1.000. But, in points Stonington still stands a chance of being tied by the Academy. The Academy has now four points and Stonington six with the Red and White scheduled for one mere league game, that with Bulkeley, here, Nov. 24.

Whether the championship in this league is figured as in hockey circuits, two points for a victory, and one for a tie could not be learned Monday evening. If it should be, then the Academy and Stonington may yet tie, but if it be figured as in the old league then Stonington is the champion.

Westerly has one more league game, with Chapman Tech, Friday, Nov. 23, but even with the point system in vogue has no chance for the championship for by winning that game her point total would be five, one less than that required for a tie.

The Academy will meet Stonington at the campus Saturday but this game will have no bearing on the league title, each team having but four games and these are used up in other contests. Nevertheless, it should prove quite interesting and go far to determine the better team.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL OPENS ON JANUARY 5TH

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)— Pennsylvania and Yale, the teams which 32 years ago played the first college basketball game on record, will pry the lid off the 1929 Eastern Inter-Collegiate league season at Philadelphia on Saturday, Jan. 5, it was announced today by Ellwood W. Kemp, Jr., secretary-treasurer of the six-team circuit.

The 30-game schedule in which every team plays two games with each of the others gets under way five days later than last season it extends from Jan. 5 to March 11 when Cornell visits Columbia for what will be the final fray unless hot competition forces a post-season play-off game, as it has had a habit of doing in recent campaigns. Dartmouth and Princeton are the other two teams in the loop.

Selection of Yale and Penn to ring up the curtain on the big whirl of 1929 has plenty of precedent. These two teams played the first known game of intercollegiate basketball in February, 1897, at New Haven, with Yale winning 32 to 10. Last season they met in the league opener at Philadelphia and again Yale won, this time by a score of 24 to 21, but Penn went on to win the league championship despite its bad start.

With Joey Schaaf, the versatile guard who was last season's high point scorer, as a nucleus for this year's team, Penn is favored to repeat its victory but it has been proved again and again by the history of this competition that every year brings new chances for all six teams.

REAL GAME EXPECTED AT PLAINFIELD WEDNESDAY NIGHT

When the Plainfield Pros open their season at the Community house in Plainfield on Wednesday evening against Johnny Beckman's Detroiters the basketball fans who attend the game can expect to see some real baseball. Beckman's club recently defeated the Scranton club of the Penn. league, 42 to 18, before a crowd of 2,300 persons. The hall at this game was packed to the limit and the doors were closed 15 minutes before game time. A team that draws basketball fans as this does and plays such a brilliant brand of basketball should surely pack the Plainfield house to the limit.

Besides Beckman, who is known wherever basketball is played, there is Al Kellett, the giant center, who stands 6 feet 3 inches in his gym shoes. Kellett, besides being a basketball start, is a baseball pitcher who played with the Newark team of the International league last season. Kellett has been called the Adonis of basketball.

Plainfield has been practicing hard during the past few weeks in an effort to be in mid-season form when they clash with Beckman's club. The team will be the same as last year with Dissinger, Normandin, Bernot, Brusso and Kasper playing the floor with equal speed. Manager Salisbury has been negotiating with "Pop" Williams, former Connecticut Aggie star, now a member of the Providence Steamrollers, to play with the Plainfield club.

THREE TEAMS IN TRIPLE TIE FOR STATE HONORS

Harding high of Bridgeport, Hartford high, Naugatuck high and probably Stamford high, are now the aspirants for the Connecticut high school grid title.

Harding won from Wilby Friday, Hartford beat the Academy Saturday and Stamford stopped Bridgeport Central, 13 to 0, also Saturday, while Naugatuck did not play. Naugatuck is the only undefeated team in the lot but the rest of the clubs have played a bit stronger teams.

Hartford has lost once, to Central of Bridgeport, but since then that team has faded out. Harding lost once, to Torrington, 3 to 0, and Torrington has gone good all year, losing but once, that to Naugatuck. Torrington might be included for the title but her short schedule (she closed Saturday, beating Ansonia 33 to 0) is a handicap. Torrington closes early to prepare for basketball, its "big" sport, but it can look back upon its most successful season in years. Stamford has only lost one game, that 6 to 0 to Harding, and is now going strong.

Putnam and Stonington still remain undefeated in the eastern end of the state. Putnam turned in a win over Plainfield, which while not overly impressive, still keeps that team in the "select" group. Stonington played Westerly Monday and says the Academy Saturday.

PUTNAM RUNS WILD THROUGH EAST DOUGLAS ELEVEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 12—Four touchdowns and three extra point kicks totaling 27 points were rolled up by the Putnam high school grid team this afternoon on the local field against the fast East Douglas high school eleven of East Douglas, Mass. The visitors played hard all through the tilt but failed at any point in the game to threaten the Putnam goal line.

Coach Noyes' four horsemen, Capt. Shann, Walt Cody, C. Bove and Russ Sherman again displayed their charging tactics by long runs through the line and end skirting. Both Shann and Cody scored two touchdowns each while Shann was successful in three ventures out of four in placing the ball between the goal posts for the extra points.

Cody and Shann both were suffering from injuries and their exhibition was somewhat less spectacular than their work in previous encounters. Shann was first to carry the ball across the line, when he succeeded in breaking through the interference in an off tackle plunge. Cody twice streaked around left end scoring each time, first in the second quarter and repeating again in the last three minutes of the game. Bud Franklin, Putnam's wiley end, proved the biggest threat to the visitors. Franklin, in three attempts, rushed the ball down the field each time gaining over 25 yards.

The Putnam line was far superior to that of the Douglas gridsters, as they were invincible and deserve much credit for the gains made by the local backfield ball carriers.

The triple threat promised Coach Noyes in the East Douglas backfield proved to be only a myth, as the team failed to even successfully break down the resistance offered by the Putnamites.

The victory this afternoon is the eighth for the locals and leaves but two more games on the schedule. Northbridge at Northbridge on next Saturday and Killingly. Putnam's ancient rival, who will match strides on Thanksgiving day at Killingly Both are expected to be cinches for the locals, as the opener was played off with Northbridge and resulted in the first victory. Killingly has suffered several defeats during the past season and it is thought they will be easily smeared by the onrushing Putnam players, and will result in the Putnam claim for Eastern Connecticut championship being proven.

BASKETBALL SEASON HERE WILL OPEN VERY SOON

Basketball, which will be upon us shortly, appears in for a good season in Norwich. Lack of playing surfaces will no doubt again curtail the sport but the usual teams are expected to operate.

The Academy, according to reports, will open in January and furnish the major court games for the city, while in the amateur line the C. F. C. and Y. Emps already practicing and the Y. Seniors, entrants in the State Y. league this year, are the leaders. Several junior teams in the city and Taftville will also campaign.

On the semi-professional end of the game in this section there are the Plainfield Pros, who open Wednesday, and without a doubt teams also in Taftville and Danielson.

In New London, plans are fairly along for this season's City league. Eight teams are probable entries and a meeting to perfect the organization is slated for Wednesday evening.

The season hereabouts usually swings into its full stride after New Year's, and runs late, probably to the first of April.

Little new blood has been reported for the local quintets and it is practically certain that many familiar faces will again campaign this winter. The Academy, of course, will be minus a few of its 1927-8 regulars, Lloyd Jarvis, Les Pingree, Joe Viau and Jim Kelly (in fact, this is practically all of last year's team), but with Capt. Buck LaCroix as a nucleus a worthy club should be moulded.

DARTMOUTH STARS REFUSE TO TAKE A DAY OFF

HANOVER, Nov. 12—(AP)—Though all of the Dartmouth football players who worked against Brown were excused from practice today, Al Marsters, Fred Breithut and Shep Wolff refused to take a holiday and spent the afternoon tossing forward passes, a weapon which had but little effect against the Bruins. The rest of the Green players went through a long signal drill.

Head Coach Jesse Hawley was absent and Jack Cannell, the backfield coach, took over the reins. Cannell scouted Cornell Saturday in the St. Bonaventure game and he gave out the Red plays which the scrubs will put on against the varsity tomorrow.

Ed Jeremiah, second string halfback who has been out since the Columbia game, returned to the squad and Trainer Harry Hillman expected he would be in shape for Cornell. Sutton and Magee, injured in the Brown game, were not expected to play next Saturday. Magee was said to have water on the knee. Bob Harris, regular quarterback, and Heinie Swarthout, varsity end, were limping badly and their status was undetermined.

YALE HAS LONG DRILL IN DRENCHING RAIN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12—(AP)—With the sting of the Maryland defeat still ringing in their ears, there was little cheer among the coaches and players of Yale today as they set out in a steady rain to train for the Princeton game, five days away. Hard and gruelling work will be held in secret each day to get the team into fighting pitch.

The wet weather today killed the plan of the coaches to practice in the bowl and instead the players practiced on Anthony field until dark. A lecture preceded the drill in which many of the faults which cropped up in offensive and defensive play on Saturday, were told by Coach Stevens in no uncertain terms.

Stevens admitted that the Tigers would be the hardest foe the team has met thus far. He also feels that the lineup which started against Maryland is the strongest which he can put on the field. With the exception of Garvey every one of the regulars participated in a supervised scrimmage and a long signal drill.

Velvetmen and Goodyear Tie

The J. B. Martin soccer team met the fast Goodyear team Sunday afternoon at Goodyear in a hard fought game before a good sized crowd. The home team having the edge in the first half, the score being 3-2 in their favor, but the Velvetmen came back strong in the second half putting on three goals, the last one coming from a free kick on the 18-yard line. F. Thompson booting a terrific drive which passed just under the crossbar, the game ending in a 5 to 5 tie.

LITTLE CHANCE ARMY-NAVY FEUD WILL BE SETTLED

By BRIAN BELL

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)—The agreement to disagree between Army and Navy has made some juicy football plums for other institutions, notably members of the Western conference.

Navy's schedule for next season just announced in part calls for the Midshipmen to go to Columbus to play Ohio State with the Buckeyes returning the call in 1930. Navy and Notre Dame will play Oct. 12, the Naval academy schedule being rounded out with eastern teams, three of the "big shots" being Princeton, Pennsylvania and Georgetown. The first two are on this year's cards but the Hilltoppers from Washington are newcomers.

The Navy evidently had not read the Army schedule when it was decided to hold Nov. 30 open for a possible game with their old service rivals for Notre Dame will furnish the last opposition for the Army on that date before the Cadets start their long trip to Palo Alto to play Stanford. The game here will be played Dec. 1 but the western clash next year is slated for Dec. 28.

The University of Illinois will have the Nov. 9 date on the Army card at either West Point or New York next fall and Ohio Wesleyan, enjoying a great season this year, will visit West Point Nov. 23. The school from Delaware, Ohio, is not a member of the Big Ten but every once in a while it takes the measure of a team in the select circle—Michigan this year.

Harvard and Yale will be played by Army on successive Saturdays in October, as was the case this year.

The make-up of the Army schedule for 1929 makes it difficult to see how a Navy game can be slipped into the football calendar without embarrassing even the hardy soldiers, unless a place should be found between the Notre Dame game, Nov. 30, and the Stanford clash, Dec. 28.

Ohio State, with one eastern opponent this year, will have two in 1929 for in addition to the Navy game at Columbus, the Buckeyes come east to play Pittsburgh Nov. 2. Princeton and Ohio State have played out their two year home-and-home contract and will not meet next year.

Michigan, after a four year engagement with Navy, will not play the Middies for a time. The Wolverines won the two games played at Ann Arbor but got only a tie and defeat at Baltimore. Neither Navy nor Michigan was heard giving three rousing cheers for the attendance at the game Saturday. The total of cash customers did not exceed 30,000, although the day was ideal for football from a weather standpoint and the seats were available, some 40,000 of them being empty.

Another big boost for intersectional rivalry will be furnished next year by the unprecedented visit of Yale to Athens for a game with the University of Georgia, October 12. Southern teams have been playing in the east and west for years, but visits of eastern and western teams to Dixie have been new and far between. Notre Dame went to Atlanta to play Georgia Tech this year and the tech eleven has played Penn State and Pennsylvania on its home field. Georgia and Dartmouth met in Atlanta, but no football fan is living today who has seen Yale playing way down south in the land of cotton.

Wisconsin and Pennsylvania have fixed up a five year intersectional sports schedule but the football feature will not be put into effect until 1930.

Dartmouth will be the exception to prove the rule that eastern and western teams are doing more traveling to and fro in 1929 than 1928. "The Big Green team will play Northwestern at Chicago, November 24, but next year's card does not find a western opponent listed.

GODFREY STOPS GORMAN IN THE THIRD ROUND

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12—(AP)—George Godfrey, Negro heavyweight of Leiperville, Pa., stopped Bud Gorman, Chicago, in the third round of their 10 round fight tonight.

Godfrey, weighing 240 pounds, was too fast and too strong for Gorman, who scaled 204, and when a right to the head dropped the Chicagoan in the third Gorman's seconds tossed a towel into the ring and the referee stopped the battle.

Yale Okun, 172, New York, was awarded the decision over Pat McCarthy, 182, Boston, in the 10-round semi-windup. The bout was slow, with the fans calling to the referee to make the fighters fight. The decision was greeted with jeers.

Al Walker, 197, Jacksonville, Fla. won the decision in 10 rounds over Big Bill Hartwell, 221, Kansas City. The fight was a rough and tumble affair.

GEORGETTI AND BECKMAN HOLD SLIGHT LEAD IN BIKE RACE

CHICAGO, Nov. 12—(AP)— Franco Georgetti and Tony Beckman, the Italian-American team, clung to their scant lead at the end of the 19th hour at the International six-day bike races today.

The leaders are tied in miles and laps by Jimmie Walthour and Frank Duelburg, the German-American combination, and Alfred Letourner and Paul Brocardo, the French pair, but are ahead in points, having 49 to 23.

BOSTON COLLEGE KEEPS SLATE CLEAN BY BEATING FORDHAM

By WILLIAM R. KING

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

BOSTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—Boston college team ran its string of football victories up to six here today by defeating Frank Cavanaugh's Fordham eleven 19 to 7, before a large holiday crowd at Fenway park. The victory placed Joe McKenney's outfit on top of the eastern gridiron heap with Carnegie Tech, the only other big college in this section which has neither been beaten or tied.

McKenney, the youngest college coach in the game, learned all of his football from Cavanaugh, who was coaching Boston college when Joe was a star quarterback, and today the youngster's pupils outsmarted the old master's players at least two touchdowns' worth.

Boston college exhibited great strength early in the first period when a Fordham fumble paved the way for a touchdown. The forward line was hurrying all of Fordham's plays and three Boston linemen hit Pieculewicz, the Maroon fullback, so hard that he fumbled, on his 30-yard line. Smith recovered for Boston college and then Weston hurled a 24-yard pass to Murphy, his right end.

Fordham was able to throw Weston back three times when he tried to hit the line but Creedon, on the fourth down, caught Cavanaugh's men off guard and rounded his right end wide for the score. Kilroy, the Boston center, missed place-kicking the extra point.

Kilroy gave Fordham its chance to score in the second period when he interfered with a Boston college punt, which was ruled dead on his 40-yard line instead of deep in Fordham territory. Dellaire opened the Fordham aerial attack by tossing a 26-yard pass to Fontana. The latter hit the Boston line for two yards and then Pieculewicz was thrown for a loss. Another line play failed and Dellaire completed a lateral pass to Cullen, who was downed less than a foot over the Eagles' goal line.

McKenney quickly dispatched a substitute to rearrange the Eagles' aerial defense and when Dellaire tried another long one to Cullen, the pass was intercepted by Dixon, who raced 50 yards for the second B. C. touchdown. Kilroy place-kicked the extra tally.

The final score resulted from another bit of McKenney's strategy. Noting that the Fordham forwards, during the final period, were hastening to cover their punts, the Boston college sent in Brosnan, for Wiczewski at left guard, with instructions to give way to the Maroon linemen and concentrate on the kicker. So well did McKenney's players follow orders that when Tracey, who had replaced Pieculewicz at fullback, tried to punt again he was surrounded by all of the Boston college linemen who blocked the kick after smearing his defensive backs. Brosnan fell on the ball, which had rolled over the Fordham goal line for a touchdown.

During the closing minutes, Fordham tossed forwards every time it gained the ball. Three completed passes gave the New Yorkers a first down on Boston's ten-yard line. Dellaire tried another pass which was intercepted by Mirley and Boston punted out of danger.

Summary:

Score by periods:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Boston college ..... | 6 | 7 | 0 | 6 | —19 |
| Fordham ..... | 0 | 7 | 0 | 0 | — 7 |

WESTERLY BECOMES E. C. CROSS COUNTRY CHAMPION

(Special to The Bulletin)

STONINGTON, Nov. 12—Westerly high became the cross-country champion of the Eastern Conn.-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league here this afternoon, outrunning four other members of the league in the annual race. The winners finished with but 20 points, their leader Cotter, finishing ahead once more although he was closely pressed by Navick of Norwich Free Academy, who finished in second place about 20 yards behind. Mitchell of Westerly was third Cotter's time for the 2 1-2 mile course was 13 minutes, 14 seconds.

Chapman Tech was second with 52 points, one point better than Norwich Free Academy in third place. Bulkeley of New London with 87 and Stonington high with 113, brought up the rear. Windham of Willimantic, the other major team in the league, did not compete.

Norwich's team finished as follows: Second, fourth, twelfth, sixteenth and seventeenth for the total of 53 points. Peck was the second Norwich man to finish.

Westerly by winning captured the first title in the new conference. Westerly will go to Newark, N. J., to compete shortly. Chapman Tech was the champion of the old four team league in 1927.

The finish of the race at the edge of the football field and held between the halves of the Stonington-Westerly game, was witnessed by a large crowd.

Lions Beat Tigers

The Lions defeated the Tigers in a brilliantly played game, Monday The shining lights for the winners were George Lambert and Johnny Lamparell. H. and J. Ferry played nice defensive games. Rosenberg made many tackles and proved to be a good interferer for his team. The features for the losers were Mahoney and Baker. Mahoney played a brilliant game for his side. Kid Canova played a nice game and it is thought that he will some time be as good as Red Grange. The score was 38 to 24. The Lions challenge the Troop 1, Boy Scouts, to play them next Sunday at 2 o'clock. If challenge is accepted, answer in paper or phone 451-5, care of Tom Baker.

CONN. AGGIES ONLY TEAM NOT SCORED ON IN EAST

STORRS, Nov. 12—(AP)—Connecticut Aggies still retain membership among the select college football teams not defeated by holding New Hampshire university to a scoreless tie, but may lose this distinction in either of its next two games as "Pinky" McCombe, outstanding defensive and interfering back, suffered a pulled muscle in his back yesterday. The Aggies have the only uncrossed goal line in the east.

With the probable loss of McCombe for the two remaining games with Rhode Island State and Boston college, another undefeated eleven, the Aggies will feel the blow as Bob Groat, another sterling halfback, is in the infirmary with a fractured vertebrae. The Aggies expect to overcome Rhode Island but admit that in Boston college the team will be going against a better eleven.

However, hopes are running high that Coach Dole will win every game on the schedule and for the second time in five years come through with a clean slate. In 1924, "Red" O'Neil captained an eleven without losing a game, gaining for the small Aggie college football recognition throughout the country.

PARADE AND EXERCISES FEATURE ARMISTICE DAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 12—Monday, the tenth anniversary, observance of the signing of the Armistice, proved all that could be desired weatherwise for the Westerly observance. The distributors of poppies were numerous and busy, realizing a generous sum for charitable work of the Merrill Post of the American Legion, by their activities early and late. A number of manufacturing plants closed at noon giving their employes a half holiday while retail stores generally were closed for the entire day. There was a greater display than usual of the American flag from sidewalk staffs and on public and private building staffs and poles, the perfect weather with not too cold wind.

The line of march for the parade with units and officers as given in Monday's Bulletin was followed. A noticeable unit was that of the members of the coast guard, near the head of the line, their first parade appearance here. Among the several floats in the line was one of Poppy day significance on which a World war veteran, George Gagnon, of Pawcatuck, appeared seated in a hospital invalid chair, with attending nurse, Miss Elizabeth Maxson, of the Westerly hospital, standing near-by. Veteran Gagnon was gassed in the World war and in 1925 occupied the wheel chair for the period of a year.

A Red Cross float with reproduction of the well-known emblem had a Red Cross worker, Mrs. James P. Campbell and small girl kneeling nearby.

At the Colonial club steps on High street, the reviewing stand was occupied by Westerly Senator Howard E. Thorp and Representative Clifford W. Campbell of the R. I. legislature, Judge Oliver H. Williams of the Third District court of Westerly and Judge William A. Wilcox of the Stonington town court, Representative Henry A. Stahle of Pawcatuck, Stonington representative to the Connecticut legislature, Town Council President Horace E. Burdick, and Councilmen George E. Broughton, Joseph Fraser and Isaac G. Smith. Motorcycle Policemen Robert Kessel and George Madison headed the line and R. I. State Trooper E. Ralph Benoit, brought up the rear.

At the Hiker Memorial in Wilcox park, Rev. Byron U. Hatfield delivered the address and the program closed with the National Anthem by the Westerly band.

The annual roll call of the Westerly chapter of the American Red Cross will be started this year on Wednesday of this week, today (Tuesday) being given over to the completion of preliminary plans.

Mrs. Frank Sherman will be chairman of the women's teams, succeeding Mrs. C. Byron Cottrell, who has directed these teams for a number of years. Miss Elizabeth Haswell will again be treasurer of the campaign.

Stomach Disorders First Revealed by Coated Tongue

Your tongue is nothing more than the upper end of your stomach and intestines. It is the first thing your doctor looks at. It tells at a glance the condition of your digestive system—and physicians say that 90% of all sickness starts with stomach and bowel trouble.

A coated tongue is a danger signal of those digestive disorders which lead to so many kinds of serious illness. It tells why the least exertion tires you out; why you have pains in the bowels, gas, sour stomach, dizzy spells.

Coating on the tongue is a sign that you need Tanlac—the medicine which has helped thousands who were physical wrecks from stomach and bowel troubles—who had "tried everything" in vain and about given up hope.

STRENUOUS DAY IN THE STOCK MARKET WITH RECORD SALES, 5,670,600 SHARES

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(AP)—The most ravenous public appetite for stocks ever witnessed by Wall street, together with heavy selling by pools and professional operators, gave the stock market the most strenuous day of its life today, heaping up total sales of 5,670,600 shares, almost 500,000 shares more than on June 12, the previous record day.

The ticker was so congested that traders found it practically useless to keep track of prices. The ticker was more than an hour late during most of the session, and ran for an hour and 35 minutes after the close, an unprecedented delay.

The feverish enthusiasm of the public gave conservative operators who are looking for a technical reaction an opportunity to liquidate, and the result was a wide diversity of losses and gains at the close. Major activity was on the up side, and about two score issues climbed 1 to 27 points to record high prices. About a quarter of the list, however, was depressed by selling, net losses running from fractions to 14 points.

The Associated Press average price of 20 industrials was lifted 4.89 points to a new record high at 240.24. The average of 20 rails, however, fell back 1.73 points.

There were no developments in the day's news to account for the unparalleled activity, and the market again rushed merrily on, apparently a law unto itself. The buying seemed to result from a week-end accumulation of the post election optimism.

The market was a market of superlatives from the opening, when about 500,000 shares changed hands within a few minutes.

An encouraging development was a return to 6 per cent call money, after an opening rate of 6 1-2 per cent. There was little demand for time money and rates were unchanged. There was a wide confusion of opinion in the speculative community regarding the position of the market. Some brokers maintained complete confidence, stating that the present market is only discounting the enormous advances made by American industry. In conservative circles, however, caution was the keynote, as there were indications that stocks were swiftly passing from strong to weak hands, weakening the technical position of the market.

Radio was again the high flyer, skyrocketing about 27 points to a record price at 290, more than 200 points above the year's low mark, and closing at 288. Montgomery Ward suffered the greatest loss, falling 14 points from its high mark of 407 established Saturday.

Several of the pivotal shares were inclined to heaviness. General Motors shares, new and old, sagged a point and more, and U. S. Steel closed a fraction lower.

Oils and coppers were prominent in the day's activity. Mexican Seaboard Oil sold up about 12 points at one time, and American Smelting made an extreme gain of nearly 10 points. Anaconda jumped about 3 points to a new peak, and Greene Cananea made an extreme gain of about 6 points.

There was enormous buying of the low priced oils, Richfield jumping nearly 5 points to a new peak, while Sinclair, Skelly, White Eagle, Independent, Marland, Standard of California, and Shell Union equalled or crossed their previous highs. Barnsdall A touched a new peak, then sagged.

Chrysler and Packard were strong points of the automotive group, mounting 7 and 3 points respectively. Hudson, Mack Truck, Motorwheel, and Murray Corp., lost around 2 to 5 points.

Allied Chemical, Case Threshing, and International Nickel, made extreme gains of 7 to 12 points, recording new peaks.

General Electric touched its previous high, then lost more than 3 points, and Eastman Kodak sold down about 5 points at one time. Domnibus preferred and Otis Elevator lost 5 and 6 points.

Rails followed divergent trends. Atchison and Katy sold up 4 and 3 points to new tops, while Boston and Maine and Texas and Pacific forged ahead 5 points each. Chicago and Northwestern, Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake and Ohio, and New York Central suffered small losses. Union Pacific mounted to a new high for all time, then fell back 3 points.

The commodity markets were generally steady, cotton making a small gain on trade buying. The grain markets were closed in observance of Armistice day.

Foreign exchanges were generally firm, although yen dropped 20 points to 46.30 points.
